CONLEY'S STORY IS STILL CENTER OF FIGHT IN FRANK CASE

After Two Weeks of Testimony Only Evidence Directly Linking Frank With the Crime Is the Sensational Statement Made on the Stand by Negro Sweeper—Summary of Developments in Trial to Date

STATE HAS INTRODUCED 34 WITNESSES, DEFENSE 10

A Synopsis of the Evidence Presented by Both Sides Shows Just What the State Has Sought to Prove and How the Defense Has Begun Its Fight to Convince Jury of Frank's Innocence

FOR two long and tedious weeks Leo M. Frank, indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, has been on trial for his life. During those two weeks forty-eight witnesses have testified, innumerable exhibits, documents, books, diagrams, photographs and illustrative contrivances have been displayed to the jury.

Only the remarkable story of James Conley, the negro sweeper, directly connects the defendant with the crime, and even in this ingenious narrative the negro did not say that he actually saw Frank do the deed.

Time and again while under the merciless gruelling of Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, Conley frankly and complacently confessed that he had lied and lied frequently in his many statements and affidavits to the detectives. However, he clung fast to his story as related upon the witness stand Monday, Tuesday, and a part of Wednesday. He had every circumstance and feature of this story clear in his mind and not once during the sixteen and a half hours that he was in the witness chair did he admit that any portion of it was false, notwithstanding the terrific bombardment of questions hurled at him on cross-examination by Attorney Rosser.

He would not attempt to explain apparent inconsistencies in his last and final testimony, but contented himself with asserting that he had told the whole truth.

There can be no doubt that Conley's story made a profound impression even upon those who believe he is lying to save his own neck, and who are convinced that he was enabled to piece together a plausible narrative because the detectives in the continual sweating administered to the negro pointed out the flaws in his original stories.

But the question which presents itself most persistently is: "Could this illiterate negro have conceived and fitted together such a set of detailed circumstances without some foundation in fact?"

The verdict in the Frank case without doubt depends on just how much credence the jury places in Conley's testimony and how it regards the circumstantial evidence which the state has introduced to corroborate it.

ENTER MANY OBJECTIONS.

The defense is evidently playing for position in the event the jury returns a verdict against Frank. Both Attorneys Rosser and Arnold have daily entered many objections and taken many exceptions which they asked be noted in the record. This is understood to mean that they are paving the way for an application to the supreme court for a new trial in case the verdict is adverse to their clients.

With its thirty-four witnesses, the state, through Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Hooper, sought to show:

That Mary Phagan met her death in the metal room on the second floor of the pencil factory between 12:30 and 1 o'clock on April 26. That she went to the factory between 12:05 and 12:10 o'clock.

That she was struck on the head and rendered unconscious and that she was then strangled with a twine cord.

That Frank was the last person who saw the girl alive.

That he was out of his office between 12:05 and 12:10, after Mary Phagan called.

That she was heard to scream after she went up to the second floor of the factory.

That she was done some kind of external violence a few minutes before death.

That Frank called the negro Conley upstairs to help him get the body into the basement.

That when he went home to luncheon he did not eat anything and remianed in the house but a few minutes.

That he was very nervous on the day after the murder when ne was brought to the factory by the detectives.

That he refused to look upon the dead girl's face when taken to the undertaking establishment.

That he is guilty of perversion.

FOUR DAYS LEFT FOR LEGISLATURE TO PASS BUDGET

Effort Will Be Made to Get McCrory Bill for School Books at Cost on the Calendar

The general assembly, beginning Monday, has four more days to meet. House and senate adjourned Saturday to meet again Monday morning, the house at 9 o'clock, the senate at 10.

During those four days the legislature faces two things that must be done, the passage of an appropriation measure, and the passage of a tax reform measure.

The house has the general appropriations bill to consider, and the senate has the tax reform bill passed in the house. Both of these bills will be assigned places on the calendar and will probably be taken up Monday.

TAX REFORM.

The finance committee of the senate has completed its draft of its substitute tax reform bill to the Lipscomb bill passed by the Sheppard committee in the house the early part of last week and will bring it up for consideration by the senate tomorrow morning. It is generally conceded that the measure has been drawn in a way favored by a majority of the upper house and that it will pass in quick order, probably soon enough to go to the house Monday afternoon, or Tuesday morning at the latest.

The salient features of the senate substitute, while not yet made public, are said to be much the same as those embodied in the emasculated Lipscomb bill, though somewhat less drastic in the matter of personal assessment.

Owing to the fact that the senate promised a bill with a state board or its equivalent, it is natural to suppose that the committee has retained this feature of the original measure and it will be sent to the house in the same shape as framed by the committee.

During the fight on the floor of the lower assembly when the bill came up for passage, the state board was the main objective point of the opposition's battering and it is a much mooted question now as to whether or not its enemies will accept the peace offering of the upper body of the legislature. Tax reformists are already claiming victory, asserting that the substitute, coming as it does in the nature of a compromise, will meet with the approval of enough of the former opposition to insure its safe passage.

The fact remains, however, that there is sure to be another fight from some

(By RALPH SMITH.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The fruits of the recent European investigation of rural credits by an American commission were noted today in the senate when Senator Fletcher, of Florida, introduced a comprehensive bill to provide for the establishment, operation, management and control of a national rural banking system. Senator Fletcher, who was chairman of the commission that made the European investigation, addressed the senate in explanation of the bill, which it is believed may have a material bearing on the pending currency legislation.

The Fletcher bill formulates a plan for a complete system of rural banks to be organized under a federal charter especially designed to meet the financial requirements of the farmer. The bill divorces farm credits from commercial and industrial credits. It recognizes the need, first, of a credit arrangement whereby the farmer can acquire lands and a home, and sufficient capital for the permanent improvement of his farm.

SPECIAL FACILITIES.

The need of special facilities to enable the farmer to secure temporary banking accomodation, annually, is recognized and amply provided for in the measure. A provision to encourage the farmers to apply business methods to their industries, thereby enabling them to render comprehensive statements to the banks, is contained in the bill.

As a means of supplying the means which the bill recognizes as important to the farmers, provision is made for the establishment of three separate classes of institutions, as follows:

Local national rural banks, with minimum capital of $2,000,000, confined in their operation to small districts, and owned and operated by local farmers.

State national rural banks, whose stock is to be owned and controlled by the local banks of the state, and whose net earnings shall be used to create a surplus and pay dividends to the local banks as its stockholders.

And the national rural bank, stationed at Washington, whose stock shall be owned by the local national and state national banks.

NATIONAL BANK CONTROL.

The national rural bank of the United States shall be controlled by nine directors, five being selected by the stockholders to serve eight years, and four being selected by the president of the United States, subject to senate confirmation to serve during good behavior. The net earnings of the national rural bank of the United States shall be used to pay a fixed dividend to the local and state national rural banks which own its stock, and to create a surplus.

A distinguishing feature of the whole rural credit system is the extraordinary power given to each and all national banks in the system to use their credit, as well as their cash assets, to aid in meeting the demands of the farmers.

The bill recognizes land as the only or the most available asset which the farmers have, and provides a plan

Only Attack on Lind Will Cause Invasion Of Mexico by the U. S.

President's Envoy Lands on Mexican Soil and Huerta Government Tells Washington That He Stands in No Personal Danger—Starts for the City Sunday—Foreign Relations Committee in Accord With President's Policy—Peaceful Mediation Is Only Plan

(By RALPH SMITH.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 9.—The only possibility of war between the United States and Mexico is predicted upon the commission of an over act by the Huerta administration toward the United States or toward President Wilson's special envoy, John Lind, of Minnesota.

Declination or failure of Huerta or his representatives to treat with Lind will not occasion an armed demonstration toward Mexico by the United States.

If Lind's mission of peace fails, the embargo on arms which the United States has maintained against the constitutionalists, or revolutionists, will be lifted and the warring factions of the Mexican republican will be be left to themselves to fight it out. It is the belief there that with arms, the constitutionalists can overthrow the Huerta government within three months.

There is absolutely no chance that the United States will ever recognize the Huerta administration in Mexico, because of a belief that Huerta was a party to the murder of Madero.

Intervention has not been nor will it be seriously considered by the United States at this time.

The possibility of an overt act by Huerta toward special envoy Lind is the one thing that makes the situation grave, in the opinion of Washington.

At conference at the White House tonight, between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan, and members of the foreign relations committee, the Mexican situation was discussed in all of its phases. The president took the senate committee into his confidence and is understood to have explained every move that has been made by the state department, and in addition, given to the committee all of the inside facts he has with reference to the situation in Mexico.

John Lind's purpose in Mexico is to induce the warring factions to lay down arms long enough to hold an election for president of the republic. Huerta cannot be a candidate on the strength of his own promise and it is believed that should he indicate a desire to disregard this promise strong influence would be exerted to hold him to his word.

Huerta Will Never Accept Mediation

(By Associated Press.)

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Correct treatment of ex-Governor Lind, counsellor of the United States embassy here and personal representative of President Wilson, by Mexicans is assured by the Mexican foreign office in a message forwarded to Washington today, and speculation in the Mexican capital tonight has turned to the nature of Mr. Lind's mysterious mission, which apparently, in the belief of the United States government, can solve the difficulties now besetting the Mexican nation.

While assuring the safety and freedom from annoyance of President Wilson's representative, the Mexican government stands firm on the non-acceptance of mediation, declaring on that point "that it already has made its declarations." It is regarded as a foregone conclusion in political circles, therefore, that the mission is bound to fail unless the suggestions to be made by Mr. Lind take some other form.

AMERICANS PUZZLED.

Neither Americans nor Mexicans here are able to imagine a plan which could be acceptable to the Mexican government which contemplates mediation in any form by the United States.

The reply of Manuel Garza Aldape, acting foreign minister, to Secretary Bryan's second note recommending moderation on the part of the Mexican officials and requesting that judgement be withheld respecting Mr. Lind's mission, has cleared the atmosphere of apprehension regarding his reception at the capital, which was created by rumors traceable to no definite source, but nevertheless persistent in their hostility to his coming.

SECRECY SHROUDS ROUTE.

Sufficient credit had been given to these rumors apparently by those charged with the arrangements of Mr. Lind's trip from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, to induce the utmost secrecy.

The United States embassy has withheld all information respecting his movements and it is not known tonight by what route he will come to the capital or the time of his arrival.

Senor Aldape's note to Secretary Bryan was practically his last official act as minister. Frederico Gamboa took the oath as minister of foreign affairs at noon and assumed charge of the ministry immediately.

Preparations for tomorrow's pro-Huerta demonstration being continued but there is little fear that it will take on an anti-American complexion.

Wilson Outlines His Policy to Senators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Two hours of conference tonight between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and the senate foreign relations committee brought about no change in the attitude of the administration toward Mexico.

President Wilson took the senators into his confidence far enough to outline the following:

REDEEM PLEDGES.

That John Lind, his special envoy to Mexico City, does not bear any solution of the present situation, but goes to continue this government's effort to induce Provisional President Huerta to redeem his promises for free and constitutional elections;

That under no circumstances does the administration propose to recognize the Huerta government.

That Mr. Lind has gone to Mexico City to be the "eyes and ears" of the Washington administration on the ground, and to explain the attitude of this government when he has fully familiarized himself with the situation.

That by withdrawing Ambassador Wilson and sending Mr. Lind the president planned to have a man on the ground who was in sympathy with the administration here and was in no sense a factor in the situation in Mexico City.

These policies and suggestions of the president and Secretary Bryan came out in general discussion. It was made clear that the purpose of the conference was to establish more frank and inti-

TRAIN IS WRECKED BEARING BODY OF SENATOR JOHNSTON

(BY HON. WM. SCHLEY HOWARD.)

Congressman from Georgia.

CENTRAL, S. C., Aug. 9.—The funeral train conveying the remains of Senator Johnston, of Alabama, was wrecked one mile north of Central, S. C. The engine turned completely over carrying with it in a mass of wreckage the express car, mail car, baggage car, dining car and one sleeper.

The miraculous escape from instant death of many members of our party must be credited to the great heroism of Engineer Tedder, who stuck to his post and applied the emergency brakes before the cars broke loose.

Congressman Webb, of North Carolina, and myself, were the first to reach the engineer. Fireman S. Y. Powell was almost buried alive under the coal and wreckage, but was extricated by Engineer Tedder, Webb and myself, before he had been seriously burned.

Postal Clerk Pittman is seriously injured and is in the care of railroad physicians. Mrs. Johnston, wife of Senator Johnston, stood the ordeal with much fortitude.

Spreading Rails Caused the Wreck

(By Associated Press.)

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 9.—A statement of the wreck of the train bearing the remains of Senator Johnston, issued by the division officers of the Southern railway says:

"At 2:19 p. m., today, two miles south of Norris, S. C., second division of train No. 37, carrying the remains of United States Senator Johnston, of Alabama, en route from Washington to Birmingham, was derailed. The engine, two mail cars and the dining car were derailed. Two 12-section Pullman drawing-room cars and the Pullman private car with the funeral escort remained on the rails.

"No passengers were injured. The fireman, the engineer, one mail clerk and one dining car waiter were injured."

The statement says the line will be cleared shortly after 6 o'clock and the party will proceed through to Birmingham.

WHERE WRECK OCCURRED.

"September Morn" Shocks Postal Clerks; Is Barred from Mails

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—A month old controversy over whether the painting, "September Morn" is art or indecency, came to a climax today when an art dealer was arrested for displaying the picture in his window. Postmaster Leon Harut said he had been instructed by the postoffice department to bar reproductions of the painting from the mail.

WITNESS FOUND WHO SAW MARY PHAGAN ON WAY TO FACTORY

George T. Kendley, Street Car Conductor, Declares He Saw Little Girl About Noon on April 26 as She Stepped From Curb on Forsyth Street Bridge to Cross Alabama Street, Where His Car Was Stopped

BOTH SIDES READY TO GRILL EVERY WITNESS

Attorneys Think There Is Little Chance of the Trial Ending This Week—Much Testimony Is Expected in Rebuttal and All Indications Saturday Night Were Trial Would Run Into Its Fourth Week

THE trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan will last from six days to two weeks longer, according to the varying estimates of the attorneys connected with the case.

It is conceded that it will take the defense at least four days this week to complete the presentation of its case. Then will come the introduction of testimony in rebuttal and finally the arguments of the attorneys. It will take several days to get in the rebuttal testimony, and the arguments will last a day, and possibly two days before the case finally goes to the twelve men who will decide Frank's fate.

The state's attorneys and counsel for the defense employed a portion of their time on Saturday afternoon, after the adjournment of the court, in getting ready to "go after" witnesses on the opposing side.

Herbert Schiff, one of the most important of the witnesses for the defense, was on the stand when court adjourned Saturday at 12:30 o'clock. When his cross-examination is completed by Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, Monday, the defense will commence, it is said, introducing witnesses, who will attack the character of C. B. Dalton, who gave damaging testimony by upholding the part of Jim Conley's story dealing with his charge that he watched for Frank, while the latter entertained girls in his office.

SAW HER ON BRIDGE.

The defense scored, when W. M. Matthews, street car motorman, testified that Mary Phagan left his car about 12:12 and went up Hunter street toward Forsyth street. Now the state is priming itself to "go after" Matthews.

Matthews is said by city detectives to be the motorman who, a year ago, killed a young boy named Lyle by shooting him with a pistol. The state, it is said, will try to bring this out.

George T. Kendley, a street car conductor of 635 Washington street, will be subpoenaed to testify that he saw Mary Phagan about noon on April 26 as she went along Forsyth street from Marietta to the National Pencil factory, where she met her death.

Kendley talked to a Journal reporter Saturday night. He has known J. W. Coleman, Mary's stepfather, for years. The Colemans formerly lived in East Point, and for some time he was a conductor on that line. He was working the Hapeville run on April 26, he says, and remembers distinctly seeing Mary Phagan. He knew her well, he declares. He says that his car was stopped at Alabama street, and he was standing on the platform when he saw the little girl walking along the west side of Forsyth street. He remembers, he says, seeing her step from the curb at Alabama street and cross that thoroughfare. She was walking hurriedly, he says, and he noticed that she carried a parasol, and that she had on a light dress and a straw hat. Kendley says that he thinks she was carrying a small package.

Kendley's story does not coincide fully with the theory of the state, for he says that it was a minute or two before 12 o'clock when he saw her. He remembers the time, he says, because his car was due at Forsyth and Alabama at noon and was a little ahead of time.

Kendley is absolutely certain, however, that it was Mary Phagan that he saw, and for this reason will undoubtedly prove a valuable witness to the state, corroborating George Epps to the extent that the little girl went along Forsyth street instead of Hunter, as claimed by W. M. Matthews.

EFFORTS TO IMPEACH.

It is known that the solicitor is preparing to go after Daisy Hopkins with gloves off, when the time for the rebuttal testimony comes. He has the record of her accusation in the city court, where her bond was forfeited

IS SYNDICATE TRYING TO CAUSE MEXICAN WAR?

Williams Urges Lobby Probers to Ferret Out Alleged War Syndicate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The end of the senate lobby committee's investigating committee is not in sight, according to Senator Reed, a member of the committee, who today had the senate provide for the expenses of the committee.

Senator Gallinger inquired when the committee would finish its work. "I cannot tell," replied Senator Reed.

Senator Williams said that the committee should inquire into the reputed existence of an organized and syndicated movement to plunge the United States into war with Mexico. This suggestion was opposed by Senator Gallinger. No action on the request was taken.

whereby the farmers may obtain capital by offering as security long term mortgage bonds, repayable in small annual payments, so that the loan can be paid off out of profits derived from the improvements made to the farm with the money obtained on the loan.

The bill provides for the guarantee by local national rural banks of long-term bonds, or notes, secured by liens on farm lands at not exceeding 50 per cent of the taxable value of the land. After being so guaranted, the bond can be guaranteed also by the national rural bank, having a much larger capital and surplus, and then, in turn, guaranteed also by the national rural bank of the United States, with a capital and surplus exceding $100,000,000.

The measure contemplates that the local national rural banks will serve to collect together the neighborhood funds in the shape of deposits, and make them available to be loaned to meet temporary or annually recurring banking requirements of the same farming community.

As a new contribution to the discussion of the currency question, Senator Fletcher's speech in explanation of his bill attracted close attention in the senate. He claimed that it was unique in the merit of proposing something definite and expressed a hope that it will invite free discussion, to be followed by action at this session of congress along with the administration currency bill.

COMMERCIAL BANK UNSUITED.

"I feel quite convinced that we can not expect a system of commercial banking to meet the needs of the farmers," said Senator Fletcher. "It is recognized all over the world that no commercial banks can, with safety, be allowed to execute a fair contract of guarantee, can not afford to grant the payment of long-term bonds. Its assets must be quick convertible, and must become due and payable within a short period. By consensus of opinion, it is generally recognized that it is unwise for commercial banks to lend money for a longer period than four months.

"As the farmers' capital requirements must be met by long term loans obtained from the investment public, as the guarantee of these long terms with some financial institution is necessary to their sale, as a commercial bank cannot safely execute a contract of guarantee, it is obvious that commercial banks cannot meet the farmers' capital requirements.

"As commercial banks cannot safely grant temporary credit for longer than four months, and as the farmers' requirements are of temporary accommodations for a longer period, (or until the crop comes in) it is equally obvious that commercial banks are not suited to supply the annual recurring banking needs of the farmers.

"The pending federal reserve bill is generally referred to by the public as a 'currency reform measure.'

"As a matter of fact, it is more than this. It is in fact a bill for the reform of the currency and for the reform of the existing commercial banking system. But the bills refer only to commercial banking and not to rural banking, as heretofore indicated.

"As a currency bill I favor the federal reserve act," said Senator Fletcher. "As a reform of commercial banking I favor it. I am prepared to say that in the effort to meet the needs of the farmers, it has gone further than any commercial banking act has ever gone before. My contention is that the farmers' needs cannot be dealt with and should not be dealt with in a commercial banking bill."

New Method of Flesh Reduction Proves Astonishingly Successful

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 9.—Investigation has fully established that Hon. H. T. Stetler, of this city, has reduced his weight fifty-seven pounds in an incredibly short time by wearing a simple, invisible, device, weighing less than an ounce. This, when worn as directed, acts as an infallible flesh reducer, dispensing entirely with dieting, medicines, and exercises. Many prominent men and women have adopted this easy means of reducing superfluous flesh, and it is stated the inventor, Prof. H. S. Burns, of No. 17 West Thirty-eight street, New York, is sending these outfits on free trial to all who write him. (Advt.)

ONLY ATTACK ON LIND WILL CAUSE INVASION OF MEXICO BY U. S.

mate relations between the senate and the administration in the development of the Mexican policy; and in the furtherance of this idea the president talked freely and answered many pointed questions.

PLAN IS VAGUE.

While the president disclosed no definite plan for the pacification of Mexico, the implication remained that upon Lind's reports would depend to a large extent the future policy of this country.

The meeting tonight was entirely friendly. The president did most of the talking and Secretary Bryan and members of the committee added a word here and there. If the twelve men present only two senators, Smith of Arizona, and Stone, are out-and-out believers in the policy of intervention. President Wilson was firmy of the belief that intervention will not be necessary and some members of the committee went to the White House disturbed in mind, came away with the belief, that perhaps much of the recent talk in the senate had been unwarranted.

PRESIDENT'S ATTITUDE.

The president did not ask that senators refrain from debating the Mexican policy, but he left a distinct impression that prominence given in Mexico to congressional discussion and newspaper comments reported from the United States, caused embarrassment for the administration in attempting to carry out its difficult policy of peaceful settlement.

Senators who expected to be informed of a definite plan or a formal message Mr. Lind might be bearing to the Mexican government, were disappointed. The president told them that the arrival of Mr. Lind in Mexico City there would be transmitted through the representative of Mexico City, as well as to the foreign governments generally, an explanation of Mr. Lind's mission.

This explanation is developed at tonight's conference is expected to be a reaffirmation of the American government's attitude of the last few weeks favoring efforts to secure a temporary cessation of hostilities in Mexico so that constitutional elections may be held.

It was reiterated after the conference that Mr. Lind's movements and procedure will be left largely to his discretion after he had talked with William Bayard Hale and other close friends of the administration familiar with the situation in the Mexican capital.

LIND IS SAFE.

It developed tonight that when Secretary Bryan telegraphed Charge O'Shaughnessy yesterday in reply to Minister Aldape's official message, which said Mr. Lind's mission was an unwelcome one, he made pointed inquiry regarding the personal safety of Mr. Lind in Mexico.

Minister Aldape's statement tonight given out in Mexico City, stating that rumors suggesting danger to Lind were entirely without foundation and that the envoy might pass through the country freely "without being subject to molestation," developed that the administration here had taken official notice of the question of Mr. Lind's personal safety, though that was not made public in Washington.

Lind Lands in Mexico; Confers With Hale

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—John Lind, former governor of Minnesota, President Wilson personal representative in Mexico and the adviser of the American legation, landed at Vera Cruz this afternoon and went immediately to a hotel.

Mr. Lind arrived in Vera Cruz harbor on the battleship New Hampshire, but immediately transferred to the battleship Louisiana, flagship of the second division of the Atlantic fleet, and was received by Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, and Dr. William Bayard Hale, another of President Wilson's representatives in Mexico, who made the trip from the capital especially to confer with Mr. Lind.

The conference on the warship resulted in giving each representative an official understanding with regard to the latest developments in the Mexican situation, but details of their conference were not revealed.

With the expectation that Mr. Lind would go ashore soon after the arrival of the New Hampshire a small crowd gathered at the pier, but there was no sign of open hostility.

Acting upon instructions from the federal authorities at Mexico City the local officials had issued orders to prevent any demonstration, but apart from adverse opinions privately expressed, the public appeared almost apathetic.

There was not even a casual meeting between ex-Governor Lind and the authorities at Vera Cruz. Captain James H. Oliver, commanding the New Hampshire, was not obliged to call on General Gustavo Maas, commander of the federal garrison, as his boat has been out of Mexican waters only a few weeks and until he does call on General Maas the military commander will not visit the American warship.

Unless instructions to the contrary are received from the capital Mr. Lind will proceed to Mexico City without hindrance, though when he will start has not been announced. Dr. Hale will accompany the ex-governor to Mexico City.

Dr. Hale has been in Mexico two months as personal representative of President Wilson, but he has never admitted his official connection, which may explain why the Mexican government has not interfered with his actions. Dr. Hale's trip to Vera Cruz was made solely to meet Mr. Lind.

Consul at Yucatan Asks for Gunboat

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Wilbur T. Gracey, United States consul at Progreso, in the state of Yucatan, has requested that the United tSates gunboat Wheeling, which is patrolling the lower gulf coast, be sent to Progreso, where Americans are said to be in danger.

A battle in which 900 rebels are reported to have been engaged has occurred near the city though the result is not yet known here.

Lind in No Danger Says F. de la Barra

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—While admitting that Mexico is facing grave crisis, Francisco de la Barra, Mexican ambassador to France, in a statement issued tonight declared it is folly to suggest that ex-Governor Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson to Mexico, would be subjected to any personal danger. The statement follows:

"I believe all political parties and factions in Mexico will agree unanimously against any idea of intervention by a foreign country in our internal affairs. I am optimistic, I hope that very shortly our internal affairs will improve and that the relations between this country and Mexico will be bettered by careful consideration of the principles of justice and the obligations of international law.

Senor De La Barra will sail for France the latter part of next week.

Neighbors See Light in Residence and Notify Police. Door "Jimmied" Open

That burglars had entered the home of Edwin P. Ansley, located in the park that bears his name, was the discovery made last midnight by Call Officers Gorman and Evans, who rushed to the scene on motorcycles following a telephone report from neighbors that a light had been seen at one of the doors and lack was discernible, as it moved through different parts of the residence which is vacant for the summer.

Police officials did not learn from whom their information came save that it was from some one residing in the park. Upon arrival at the Ansley home, the officers found that the front door had opened through the manipulation of a "jimmy" and entrance effected that way.

They likewise entered there and made a careful search of the house from top to bottom, and found all but two rooms with doors unlocked. Into these they formed an entrance after having connected the electric wiring of the house that had been "cut out" during the absence of the family from the city.

According to Gorman and Evans there were no evidences that the house had been invaded by burglars. Fixtures and furniture were out of place and there appeared no indication that the invaders were seeking booty in the absence of a living soul in the big house.

Being unacquainted with the premises, the officers were unable to say whether anything had been taken away except that there was no doubt that thieves had been at work searching for anything of value that might have been left out.

It is not considered improbable that previous efforts had been made to enter the home.

train No. 37. While rounding a sharp curve about two miles south of Norris at 2:17 o'clock the rails spread, derailing the engine, which plunged into a ditch and turned over. An express car also was overturned into the ditch and three express and mail cars and the dining car left the rails. The three parlor cars bearing the congressional committees and members of Senator Johnston's family, remained on the tracks. The members of the party were someway shaken up but otherwise uninjured.

Engineer R. H. Todder and Fireman G. Y. Powell were caught under the overturned locomotive, pinned, extricated and were found to be uninjured. Postal Clerk P. L. Pittman was the only person on the entire train to be injured to any extent. It is thought he is not seriously hurt.

Alabamians Grieved Over Death of Their Junior Senator

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ANNISTON, Ala., Aug. 9.—Calhoun, the home of the distinguished family of Forneys and other near relatives of the late United States Senator Joseph Forney Johnston, as well as his own home in his early career, was profoundly shocked more deeply than any other section of Alabama by the sudden death of the junior senator from this state.

Just before he went to Washington last winter, Senator Johnston was the guest of Col. and Mrs. Thomas A. Pagee, in this city, and Captain Agee was deeply moved when he learned of his death. Captain Agee was also working actively to carry this county for Senator Johnston in his race for reelection.

KILBY DISCUSSES SUCCESSION.

State Senator Thomas E. Kilby, the only member of Calhoun's delegation to the state legislature who has been the senator's personal friend, declared that the state loses a particularly valuable man in the death of Senator Johnston. He was also a soldier, as a banker and as a man of state made him peculiarly fitted to confer with existing conditions at the national congress, said Mr. Kilby, and the naming of his successor brings about a serious problem.

However, Senator Kilby does not believe an extra session of the legislature necessary, as he believes the senate would seat an appointee of Governor O'Neal and recognize him as the state's representative until the people can have an opportunity to vote, and in so doing, he avers, the senate would be well within its rights, for it is supreme in the matter of passing upon unseating its own members. He paid a high tribute to the personal character of Senator Johnston with whom he had been intimately associated.

Senator Johnston had been very active in the effort made by Alabamians to secure the location of a permanent maneuver camp here, and his services in this respect made him many friends. Relatives from Anniston and Jacksonville have gone to Birmingham to attend th efinal services over his remains.

Funeral Party Continues Jorney

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Southern railway headquarters tonight announced the funeral train should reach Birmingham by 6:30 or 7 o'clock Sunday morning. Their advices stated the party would be taken to Greenville, S. C., for dinner tonight and that another sleeping car and a dining car was enroute from Atlanta to join the special train. The party left Atlanta at 10 o'clock.

Grim Tragedy Befalls Merry Dancing Party When Motor Boat Sinks

EAST FREETOWN, Mass., Aug. 9.—Six women and a man were drowned and three other persons were saved when a motor boat sank in Long Pond tonight. The dead are George Wright and Miss Haven, of Brockton; Miss Hattie Hamilton, Launton; Miss Annie Sweeney, Miss Sadie McCabe, Miss Mabel Brown and Mrs. Emma Doyle, all of New Bedford.

Mrs. Henry W. Raymond and Luther M. Dayton, of New Bedford, and R. James Stevens, Launton, were rescued by Frederick Macey, who has a cottage at the pond and who, responding to cries for help, was able to pick up four persons in his motorboat. One of the four, Miss McCabe, failed to revive.

The party was bound for a dance at Lakeside park. Soon after leaving shore the boat sprang a leak. Some reports said that the bottom dropped out.

Darkness added to the difficulties of rescue work. Mr. Macey's boat was the first to reach the scene. When other boats arrived, no other bodies could be found.

Up to midnight none of the six bodies had been recovered.

Driver Leaves Auto And Contributes Hat And Coat to Wreck

A man's coat and hat found near an overturned touring car on Stewart avenue, near Hapeville, shortly before 1 o'clock this morning by the county police, bear mute evidence of an accident, that while apparently a serious one, resulted in no injury to the occupants of the machine, so far as is known.

Letters found in the coat were addressed to C. E. Sims, who lives at Buckhead, but whose business is in Atlanta, and it is thought by the officers that the automobile was the property of the man at the wheel whose garments they have in their possession.

According to the police who visited the scene, the car had completely turned turtle, wheels in the air.

At 2 o'clock no information had been received by the police as to whether or not any one was hurt in the smash-up.

ARTESIAN WELLS WILL SUPPLY NEWNAN WATER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

NEWNAN, Ga., Aug. 9.—Pumps for four artesian wells were put in operation today at the local waterworks plant, and by Sunday the people of Newnan will begin using artesian water.

The flow from these wells will average 600,000 gallons of water a day. The water will be filtered in the old reservoir and pumped into the new reservoir, and then into the 185-foot stand pipe.

Several analysis have been made by the state chemist, who pronounces the water pure.

$75,000 Fire Loss

LANCASTER, S. C., Aug. 9.—Fire which originated in the seed house of the Lancaster Cotton Oil comp ny today destroyed the building and contents and the company's offices, the Lancaster and Chester railway depot and practically all its contents, the warehouses and contents of the Lancaster Mercantile company, and the Bennett-Ferguson company, and demaed other nearby buildings. The loss is approximately $75,000, covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combuation.

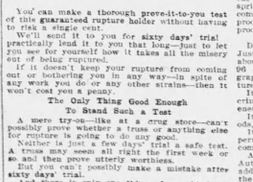
This Invention For Rupture Sent On 60 Days' Trial

Won't Cost You A Cent If The Two Months' Test Doesn't Prove All Our Claims



Away With Worthless Trusses Like These

You can make a thorough prove-it-to-you test of this guaranteed rupture holder without having to risk a single cent.

We'll send it to you for sixty days' trial practically lend it to you that long—just to let you see for yourself how it takes all the misery out of being ruptured.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way—in spite of any work you do or any other strains—then it won't cost you a penny.

The Only Thing Good Enough To Stand Such a Test

A mere try-on—like at a drug store—can't possibly prove whether a truss or anything else for rupture is going to do any good.

Neither is just a few days' trial a safe test. A truss may seem all right the first week or so, and then prove utterly worthless.

And there is only one thing of any kind for rupture that you can get on such a long trial—only one thing good enough to stand such a long and severe test.

Made On New Principles

The Cluthe Truss is so radically different from everything else for rupture that it has received eighteen separate patents. Made on an absolutely new principle—far more than just a truss.

It has so thoroughly proved its merits in nearly 300,000 cases that surgeons in the U. S. Army and Navy, and physicians in all parts of the world now recommend it instead of advising operation.

Will Save You From Operation

And that is the curse of wearing elastic or spring trusses—not one in twenty ever holds successfully—they sooner or later make operation absolutely necessary instead of preventing it.

But remember the Cluthe Truss is guaranteed to hold—and won't cost you a cent if it doesn't. And in addition it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

It does that entirely automatically—without any attention whatever from the wearer—and has thus brought complete recovery in thousands of cases that seemed almost hopeless, and has saved thousands of people from having to risk their lives under the surgeon's knife.

No Belt. No Leg-Straps. No Springs

The Cluthe Truss does away entirely with the curse of wearing belts, leg-straps and springs. People who have tried it say it is as comfortable as their clothing—and is waterproof—will hold in the bath. Also perspiration proof. Easily kept clean.

Get World's Greatest Rupture Book

Don't send any money—don't take any risk. Just write for our free book and find out all about it. This sensational book—cloth-bound, 96 pages, 20 separate articles and 25 photographic illustrations—is full of facts for the ruptured never before put in print.

It shows why elastic and spring trusses are a crime—how they are the ruptured man's worst enemy—why the new should stop their sale.

It exposes the humbug "appliances," "methods," "systems," "plasters," etc., etc.

It shows why operation for rupture ends in permanent weakness or death oftener than in complete recovery.

And it tells all about the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—gives names and addresses of over 3,000 people in all parts of the country who have tested it and have voluntarily indorsed it—and tells how you can get it on sixty days' trial, and how little it costs if you keep it.

Simply put the coupon or say in a letter or postal "Send me your book"—that will take only a minute and may save you from paying out a great many dollars and save you from years of misery.

Can't Beat "GETS-IT" for Corns—It's Sure

Never Tried It Before?—You'll Marvel How It Makes Corns Vanish.

There never was anything like "GETS-IT" for corns, and there isn't anything like it now. It is the corn cure on a new principle. Put it on any corn in two seconds; it stops pain, the corn begins to shrivel and disappears. It never fails. Simplest thing you ever saw. No fussy bandages, no greasy salves to turn healthy flesh "proud" and raw; no plasters that make corns bulge out. Your corns won't pull and hurt "way up to your head," if you set aside your knife and razor. No more digging and tugging and winding, no more bleeding, no more danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" never hurts healthy flesh; it is safe, painless, quick, simple, sure. For hard corns, calluses and bunions, too. "GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. C. I. BRANAN WRITES CARD ON "FEE SYSTEM"

Urges People to Use Influence to Rush Passage of Bill in Legislature

To the Voters of Fulton County: I have been elected a member of the Democratic executive committee of Fulton county by the votes of the people at the ballot box, and afterward appointed chairman of the sub-committee to carry out their instructions (almost the unanimous request of the people), asking that a bill be introduced in the legislature by the Fulton county representatives, abolishing the "fee system" and the adoption of the "salary system," in lieu of same for our state and county officials of Fulton county.

The "salary system" has been endorsed by not only 85 per cent of the voters of Fulton county, but they have been backed up by the fourteen separate grand juries, the county Democratic executive committee of Fulton county, the county commissioners of not only Fulton county, but by their state organizations, also a petition of tax payers who pay taxes on millions of dollars' worth of property.

As chairman of the subcommittee, I had prepared a bill doing away with the objections made by the supreme court in declaring the previous "salary system" bill unconstitutional, and after having this new bill gone over by some of the best lawyers in the state, I feel safe in saying that we have a "salary system" bill that the supreme court will pass on favorably.

I handed each of our three representatives in the legislature from Fulton county (Hon. R. R. Blackburn, Hon. John Y. Smith and Hon. Ralph O. Cochran), a copy of the bill on July 25, and requested that they introduce said bill.

Hon. R. R. Blackburn and Hon. John Y. Smith introduced the "salary system" bill on Saturday, August 9 (by request.) This bill will go to the committee and come up for action during the next session, the summer of 1914.

Representing the people in this matter, I would have been glad to have had the bill introduced earlier, or at least on July 27. And the, fact that it only affected Fulton county would have made it no trouble to pass the bill through the house and allowed it to have laid in the senate until next summer's session.

In conclusion, I desire to state to the voters of Fulton county that if they really meant what they said by voting almost unanimously for the "salary system" for the state and county officials, they had better become interested in the passage of this bill, for there are very few legislative members who will do their full duty if they are not backed up in their efforts to benefit the people.

If I understand what Democracy means, the passage of this bill means that the people can rule; and if it is defeated means that the minority of the state and county officials of Fulton county are the rulers, and can defeat the will of the people.

Mr. Voter, I am talking to you, and not to the man across the street.

Respectfully submitted,
CHARLES I. BRANAN,
Chairman Subcommittee of the Democratic Committee of Fulton County.

Lowly Redbug May be Protected by Senate

The poor redbug, "chigger," or whatever such disease is call it, has at last come into its own. Condemned by generations of Georgians, reviled, scratched, persecuted from toe to elbow even as it persecuted, this little insect has been championed by Senator A. H. Burtz, of the Forty-first.

Senator Burtz hails from the home of the "chigger," north Georgia, knows its peculiar humors and no doubt has at first hand experienced its unsparing affection. The senator introduced a bill in the state senate Saturday morning. It reads:

"An act for the protection of redbugs commonly known as 'chiggers,' in the forests, woods, underbrush, etc., of the state of Georgia, and for other purposes.

"Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Georgia and is hereby enacted by authority of the same. That from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful to kill with hands, traps, or devices of any kind, redbugs, commonly known as 'chiggers,' in the forests, woods, underbrush or wherever the same may be found in the state of Georgia, between the dates of November 1 and April 1 of each year, and to make any violation of this act a felony and punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than one year nor more than five years in the discretion of the court."

The bill was referred to Secretary Charlie Northern.

REPLIES TO STORY ON "TRADITIONS OF SOUTH"

Editor The oJurnal:

Shall I, in a perfectly calm way, express myself through your paper as to what I think is a great principle? In the Atlanta Georgian of last Tuesday, the 5th inst., I read a communication under head of "Traditions of the South,' 'etc., again in the same paper by the same author I read in Thursday's issue a second article which purports to convey the same generality of thought. Now, I do not claim to be anything like equal as to intellect or composing genius to the author to whom I refer, nor do I mean to accuse him of any very glaring cutbursts of impropriety, but I do humbly submit that the trend of thought seemed to insinuate by inuendo at least that it is most remarkable that so much notoriety should attach to a tragedy when its victim was only a "factory girl."

Of course it is not proper for me or my brother correspondent to express any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of any one who may be accused of this horrible deed—not that—it is another phase of the case that appeals to me.

There is a great big class of people on this earth called the common people. That mighty host of laborers who actually produce the necessities of life world's teeming millions. Mary Phagan belonged to that class. But, neighbor, the fact that little Mary was not one of the upper social set, from the world's point of view, is no reason why she was not a splendid, admirable, little soul, doing just the very work that her Creator saw fit, at preesnt, for her to do. Merit is not determined rightly except by faithfulness on the part of individual. The poet says so aptly:

Act well your part, there all the honor lies."

Remember Mary Phagan was only fourteen. Her life had just bégun. She had just opened her eyes to view, with hope, a life that meant more than the idle dreams of childhood. It was by no means a settled question as to what little Mary might have been. Many others have occupied humble positions only temporarily. Is it not true, my dear sir, that many of the world's greatest benefactors have come from the ranks of the common. The fact that Mary Phagan was willing to work even for the five dollars a week as you suggest was no indication of anything ignoble when we think of the truth that this humble work and meager pay really was of some account to her and those she loved. If Mary had gone over on Peachtree, Appletree, or Figbush, or any other street and had been ordered to the "back door" for admission, it is not at all unfair to assume that she would have been just as worthy in every respect as her social "superior" whose superior position socially has been brought about by a perverted conception of this life.

I never saw Mary, but am acquainted with the Phagan family, and, being identified myself with the class to which she belonged, I am giving expression to a sincere conviction. So, learned writer, I want to enlist you as little more of an admirer of the toilers about us; and whether or not the courts are able to finally determine who was the infernal wretch, whose beastly hands and hellish heart sent this little victim so tragically into the dark beyond, please hereafter refer to her not merely as a "factory girl," but as little Miss Mary Phagan, of Atlanta, Ga.

MORTIMER WILSON IS HONORED BY ATLANTIANS

Famous Musician Is Named Director of Atlanta Conservatory of Music

Mortimer Wilson, the efficient director of the Atlanta Philharmonic Orchestra, has been named director of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music and has accepted the position. His friends are congratulating the conservatory, and the conservatory's friends are congratulating him, each view being that an admirable combination has been formed.

Mr. Wilson's work in Atlanta has distinguished him as a musician of much more than local prominence. He is recognized as a composer of unusual ability, his special talent being in symphonic works. The Berlin Music Salon said of him: "All that he writes is impulsive, born in a happy and lucky moment; the technical difficulties are easily vanquished. His music appeals first to the heart and then to the head. So should it be." As a theoretician, also, he is a recognized authority, his texts on musical subjects being in use in many institutions. His works have taken place on programs with those of Brahms, Reger and others of the German post-classical school.

Born in Iowa in 1876, Mr. Wilson developed his talent and went to Chicago to study music under Frederick Grant Gleason, Max Bendix, S. E. Jacobsohn and William Middleschulte. He taught four years at Culver Military academy, and eight years more as director of the department of theory and composition of the University of Nebraska school of music. He spent several years abroad in the study of composition and orchestral routine under Oscar Nedbal, Hans Sitt and Max Reger.

TOILERS MAKE MERRY AT SATURDAY BARBECUE

Employees of the Georgia Car and Locomotive company and their families and friends had a merry time at a barbecue in White City park Saturday. A holiday was declared by the company so that all might attend.

The feast was such a success that at the conclusion of the day the merry-makers voted unanimously to celebrate in the same manner every year in the future.

Bert Hargraves was chairman of the committee on arrangements, and he was congratulated on the success of the affair. A vote of thanks was also given Mr. Chosewood, for the use of the park.

GEORGIA TEAM LEAVES FOR BIG RIFLE SHOOT

Fifteen Crack Marksmen Start for Camp Perry, O., Monday Morning

The team which represents the national guard of Georgia at the annual shoot at Camp Perry, Ohio, leaves Atlanta Monday morning at 7 o'clock over the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

Composing it are fifteen of the best rifle shots in the state, men who have proved their worth time and time again and who can be depended upon to "do themselves and Georgia proud" against the other teams in the national and international matches. The teams are drawn from the national guards of all states, from the army, the navy, the naval and military academies, and from the marine corps.

The shoot will begin August 15 and will last through the rest of the month. Those representing Georgia are Sergeant W. S. Hale, Private E. C. Hale, Corporal D. L. Hale, and Corporal J. A. Williams, of Winder; Captain W. T. Spratt, Sergeant W. R. Brown, Captain O. L. Rudisail, Private O. C. Halloran, Lieutenant S. Y. Tupper, Jr., and Lieutenant J. C. Adolphus, of Atlanta; Lieutenant J. W. Armstrong, of Albany; Major W. P. Wheeler, Sergeant C. H. Anderson, and Sergeant A. S. Brown, of Macon; and Lieutenant T. A. Dickenson, of Monroe.

PRICE WON'T PROSECUTE BLEACHED FLOUR SALES

Though It's Against the Law He Claims Government Should Act

J. D. Price, commissioner of agriculture for Georgia, has issued a statement in which he says that he will not prosecute those who infringe the law against the sale of flour bleached with nitrogen peroxide, as long as the United States government fails to take action in the matter.

Commissioner Price says that under the Food and Drugs Act it is against the law to ship bleached flour between states, and that several times he has notified the government that such flour is being shipped into Georgia; but that no action has been taken.

He says he considers it an injustice to the people to longer keep the ban over them in connection with the sale of bleached flour when the government withholds action in cases of interstate commerce; and that, therefore, he will not prosecute any violation of the act in Georgia.

A. G. GRANT, ATLANTIAN, DIES IN PENSACOLA, FLA.

News has been received from Pensacola, Fla., of the death of Mr. A. G. Grant, a prominent citizen of Atlanta. He went to Florida for his health. His home was with his daughter, Mrs. T. G. Holcombe, at 232 Spring street in this city.

He was a Mason and a member of the Ohio society. He was born in Cleveland 86 years ago. He is survived by a daughter and grandchildren.

The funeral will be in Columbus Monday afternoon.

As An Investment Diamonds Have Paid Over 10 Per Cent Per Annum For Years

This fact is easily shown by tracing diamond history since 1897, and yet today diamonds are much lower than they were thirty years or more ago, notwithstanding the exquisitely perfect cutting and proportion of modern cut stones.

The reasons for this advance are easily traceable. Fewer stones are being found and finer stones rarer. Machinery of a short while since has become obsolete on account of the greater mining depth (1,000 to 1,500 feet), and there are other reasons equally pertinent.

Exclusive diamond merchants, our whole time is given to one idea of value. We have thousands of dollars invested in diamonds. We purchase directly from the cutters, in large quantities, and are the only exclusive diamond merchants in the south.

Our plan is a departure from old methods, but based upon sound business principles. We guarantee to buy back any solitaire diamond bought from us at 90 per cent of purchase price at any time within one year, deducting only our small profit of 10 per cent.

We also allow you just what you paid for it for any solitaire diamond bought from us in exchange for a more expensive diamond at any time. Our plain figure cash prices enable you to make these changes with full knowledge of what you are doing.

Our mountings are given the benefit of every thought and experience to make each worthy of the other, in recognition of the truism, "The diamond gives little indication of its worth until it has been cut and polished and set in a manner worthy of its value."

Cash or partial payments. "Our Diamond Book" Set No. 5 explains our plan and guarantee wherein the value of your diamond is assured, and opportunity for saving and accumulation. A personal call or written request will obtain it.

FIGHT FOR FRANK'S LIFE WILL CENTER AROUND STORY OF JIM CONLEY

present its evidence. The defense has been offering evidence but three days and has introduced but fourteen witnesses, three of them having been witnesses for the state.

Just what is the theory of the defense as to the time and manner of the murder has not yet been disclosed. So far the defense has been content to confuse and cast doubt upon the evidence offered by the state.

THE EXPERT TESTIMONY.

Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the state board of health and a physician and chemist of high standing, testifying for the state, said that he had made a careful examination of the dead girl's body and that he was satisfied beyond doubt that she had first been struck upon the back of the head and rendered unconscious and that later she was strangled to death.

Dr. Harris was positive that the girl died within a half or three-quarters of an hour after she ate the cabbage and bread which her mother swore she had eaten about 11:45. He based his opinion upon the undigested cabbage which he found in her stomach. Dr. Harris also testified that the girl had without doubt been done some violence a few minutes before death. This he had determined by the condition of the blood vessels.

DR. CHILDS DISAGREES.

The defense put up Dr. Leroy Childs, a well known physician and surgeon to rebut Dr. Harris' testimony. Dr. Childs had not examined the Phagan girl's body, but from the evidence given by both Dr. Harris and Dr. J. W. Hurt, the coroner's physician, he was confident that it would have been impossible to tell just how long after she had eaten the cabbage that the murder occurred. He declared that cabbage was one of the most indigestible of vegetables and often remained in the stomach for hours before being digested.

Dr. Childs expressed the opinion that death could have been produced by the blow on the head, but from the information furnished him he was inclined to the belief that she died from strangulation. He declared that the dilated and ruptured blood vessels could have resulted from natural causes and not necessarily from external violence.

George Epps, a negro boy testifying for the state, swore that he rode into the city with Mary Phagan on the day of the murder and that she left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets at about 12 o'clock, going across the viaduct to the factory.

By W. M. Matthews and W. T. Holles, motorman and conductor on the car, the defense showed that Mary Phagan boarded the car and rode into the city a little after 12 o'clock, left the car at Broad and Hunter streets at 12:10.

E. F. Holloway, the day watchman at the factory, swore that he had timed himself to see how long it would take him to walk to the pencil factory from Broad and Hunter streets and from Forsyth and Marietta streets. He said that in the former instance it required two and a half to three minutes and in the latter seven minutes.

WHEN SHE ARRIVED.

If the testimony of the conductor, motorman and Holloway is to be considered and that of George Epps thrown aside then Mary Phagan did not reach the factory until 12:13. On the other hand, if the testimony of Epps and Holloway is to be credited she arrived there before 12:10.

Neither of these calculations fits in with the testimony of Monteen Stover, the witness for the state, who swears she went to the factory at 12:05 and left at 12:10, that she saw no one while there and that she went to the office door and looked in to see if Frank was there but that he was not. Conley swore that Miss Stover followed Mary Phagan out.

By N. V. Darley, general manager of the factory, Herbert Schiff, assistant superintendent; Holloway, the day watchman, and others, the defense brought out that while at work Frank was accustomed to keep the big safe in the outer office open and that when it was open the door shut off the view into the inner office and that a person so taller than Miss Stover would find it impossible to see over this safe door even if she tiptoed.

Conley was the only witness to testify that the girl screamed. He said he heard her scream very shortly after he went upstairs and after he heard the sound of footsteps going back toward the metal room. Several detectives, policemen and officials at the factory swore that Frank was very nervous on the day after the murder.

To offset this the defense developed from the factory officials that Frank was of a highly nervous temperament and that when anything went wrong he became excited and nervous. That on one occasion when he was on a street car which ran over a child he was so nervous he could not work and that at another time when he had quarreled with a factory official he manifested extreme nervousness.

None of those who visited the undertaking establishment with Frank would swear that he had failed to look at the face of the dead girl. However, both Detective Black and Bailiff Rogers who accompanied him there, declared they had not seen him do so.

Conley swore that Frank called him up at about 4 minutes to 1 to aid in carrying the body down to the basement. The testimony of Mrs. Arthur White, who said she saw a negro sitting on a box at the foot of the stairs when she went out of the factory about 1 o'clock has never been disputed, although Solicitor Dorsey developed that this lunch should not reach Police until several days after the murder, notwithstanding Mrs. White reported the incident to Frank on the Monday following.

In his statement Conley related incidents reflecting on Frank's moral character. The defense made vigorous objection to the admission of this evidence and during the argument which followed Solicitor Dorsey announced that the state expected to be able to corroborate Conley's accusations.

COL. LUMPKIN'S THEORY.

C. B. Dalton was put up by the state and he swore that he had visited the factory with Daisy Hopkins, a former employe; that he knew Frank and had seen him in his office on Saturday afternoons drinking beer and soft drinks with girls.

Dalton also testified that he had taken Daisy Hopkins to the factory and that Conley had kept a lookout for him. The Hopkins girl was put up by the defense and she denied everything that had been stated by Conley and Dalton, declaring she only knew Frank when she saw him; that she had never been into his office and that she had never seen him drinking soft drinks and beer with women.

Solicitor Dorsey made the Hopkins girl admit that she had been in jail on a statutory charge.

Officials and employes of the factory put upon the stand all swore that they had never seen girls visit Frank in his office nor had they ever seen girls drinking soft drings and beer with him in his office.

COULDN'T SEE THE MIRROR.

The testimony of Albert McKnight, the negro husband of Minola McKnight, cook at the Frank-Selig home, in which he swore that on the day of the murder Frank came home for luncheon about 1:20 and left a few minutes later without having eaten was rebutted by the defense with pictures and diagrams of the Frank-Selig home. McKnight swore that he was sitting in the kitchen near the passageway to the dining room and could by looking in the sideboard window in the dining room see that Frank didn't eat anything. He also swore that Frank caught a street car at Pulliam street on his return to the city.

Albert Kauffman, a civil engineer, who made blueprints of the Frank-Selig home, and of the pencil factory and who measured the distance from the home to Washington and Pulliam streets, testified that it was impossible to see the mirror in the dining room sideboard from where McKnight said he sat in the kitchen; that a street car ran on Georgia avenue in front of the home, and that it is further to Pulliam street by about 100 feet than it is to Washington street.

H. J. Hinchey, manager of the South Atlantic Blow Pipe company, declared he saw Frank on a Washington street car, just in front of the capitol about 2:15.

Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott, who had been first called by the state, was also called by the defense. He testified that Conley had made a number of statements to him; that he had called the negro's attention to defects in his statements and that later the negro would change his story to conform.

WITNESS CONTUSED.

The very favorable testimony for the defense, given by E. F. Holloway, the day watchman at the pencil factory, was greatly minimized by the fact that he went completely to pieces under the cross-examination of Solicitor Dorsey. The solicitor asked him many questions which he evaded and others he answered only when forced to do so by the judge. Holloway became excited and belligerent when the solicitor asked him if he had not sought to get a former night watchman at the factory to swear that Frank had frequently telephoned him at night. He was also disconcerted when the solicitor demanded to know if he had not sought to convict Conley in order to obtain the reward offered for the murderer, and when Mr. Dorsey inquired if he had not boasted about "turning up" Conley and set up his claim to the reward the witness became sullen.

During his cross-examination of Holloway Solicitor Dorsey implied that the witness had "planted" the bloody stick which was alleged to have been found nearly two weeks after the murder on the first floor of the factory close to where Conley admits to have been in hiding. This was vehemently denied by the witness.

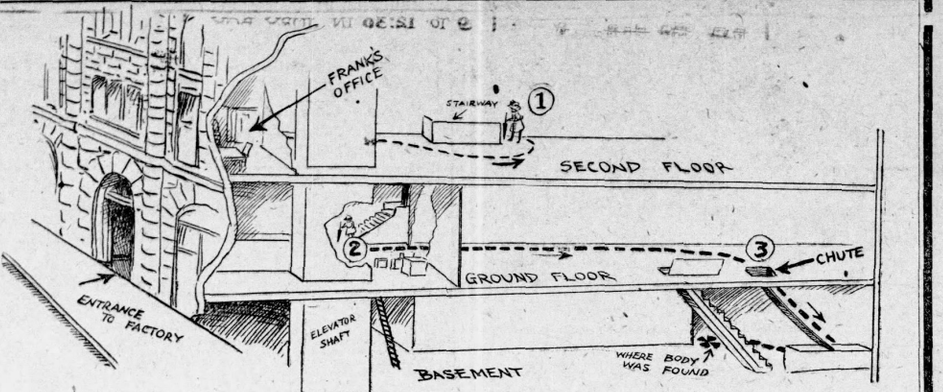
THEORY OF PHAGAN MURDER ADVANCED BY DEFENSE



Questions asked witnesses by Attorneys Rosser and Arnold indicate that the defense may attempt to convince the jury that it would have been possible for the little girl to have been killed on the first floor of the factory and her body later disposed of through a chute leading from the first floor to the basement at the rear of the building. According to this theory the girl was met at the foot of the stairs leading from Frank's office, taken toward the back of the building and killed. Her body was then dragged to the trap door leading to the chute and dropped into the basement. Later, according to the theory, it was taken to the spot where it was found by Newt Lee. The accompanying drawing was made from the model of the factory which is being used by the defense at the trial.

and will summon several witnesses in an effort to impeach her.

Not content with its work in preparing for attacks on the witnesses, who have already testified, the state is priming itself for a probable defense witness, W. H. Mincey.

The solicitor general has had his detectives on the trail of Mincey for several weeks, and it is said that many witnesses will be introduced in an effort to impeach him. Mincey maintains that Jim Conley, on the day of the tragedy, confessed to him that he killed a girl that morning. Mincey is expected to be one of the last witnesses to go on the stand.

Generally speaking the fight in this case is so bitter that no witness is safe. If an open effort is not made to impeach him, at least he is subjected to a terrific gruelling by the counsel of the opposing side.

Following its work on Dalton's character Monday, the defense is expected to continue to strengthened by private detectives and factory employees the theory that Mary Phagan was murdered on the first floor of the pencil factory, and her body hurled down the chute in the Clark Woodell Ware company's portion of the building.

The defense has centered its fire up to the present largely on Jim Conley's story of alleged occurrences before the day of the murder, but after it finishes with Dalton, strenuous efforts will be made to show that there is at least just as much likelihood that the crime occurred on the first as on the second floor.

NEGRO SECTION HAND KILLED BY PASSENGER

Loyd Satterwhite, a negro section hand for the Western and Atlantic railway, was instantly killed when struck by passenger train No. 1 of that road Saturday night about 9 o'clock.

The accident occurred on the W. & A. right of way just outside the west city limits. It was discovered when other section hands were going to their homes and found the negro's hat lying beside the track. After a search his body was found at the foot of the embankment, which here is about forty feet high. His neck was broken and his body mangled. He had been struck by the fast moving train and knocked down the embankment.

The negro was forty years of age. The body was removed to the W. & A. Hill Park yard and held pending the coroner's inquest.

No More Bleeding Corns.

No more knives, no more scissors, no more razors, no more blood poisoning. Away with the instruments of barbarous antiquity. Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid will take out any corn, hard or soft, whole, and positively without pain or danger. Never pare or cut a corn, for if the blade slips, as it frequently does, and the corn bleeds, there is serious danger of blood poisoning, and many deaths have been caused in this way.

The first application of Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid gives instant relief from pain, and if a soft corn or new growth, will remove it. Hard, deep, stubborn corns require several applications, but are just as completely removed, root and all, and there is no possibility of danger, nor pain. Tampering with a corn causes irritation and makes it harder to remove. Use Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid as directed, it is guaranteed to be successful, and painless. 25c, by mail 28c.—(Advt.)

THIN FOR YEARS---"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work. I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. B. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate, and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for 40 days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have once? Many thin folks say: "I'd give most anything to put on a little extra weight, but when someone suggests a way, they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and cannot know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted, and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish, and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh producing ingredients. It prepares these fat making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bowels like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. It isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more under weight, to easily make this test, we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. Either Sargol will increase your weight or it won't, and the only way to know is to try it. Send for this free test package today, enclosing 10c in silver or stamps to help pay postage, packing, etc., and a full-size 50c package will be sent by return mail free of charge. HERE'S HOW THE FRANK TRIAL JURORS ARE SPENDING THEIR TIME THESE DAYS

Anybody who has the mistaken idea that it's fine to be a juror in a big murder trial has only to scan Artist Brewerton's illustration, above, of the way the twelve men who are to decide Leo M. Frank's fate pass their time these days. On them the commonwealth has placed the responsibility of judging the truth of the evidence placed before them day after day in the court room. They are shut off from all communication with the outside world, except what comes to them in open court as sworn evidence and except also what their families write to them in notes that are censored severely by the sheriff's deputies who always guard them day and night. The routine begins early in the morning and ends when they return to their rooms at night. There they while away the hours with no company but their own. They sleep, eat, walk, and listen to evidence, in a body of twelve. Should one of them fall ill, serious complications might arise in the Frank trial. Should demonstrations from the populace, such as applause or disapproval in the court room or elsewhere, reach them, other complications might ensue, and the whole trial might be vitiated, leaving all the tedious work to be done again.

PLAYING PRACTICAL JOKES ON WATCHFUL BAILIFFS IS PASTIME OF FRANK JURORS

Court Bailiff Charles F. Huber, Who Guards Body in Hotel at Night, Spends Hours in Search of Mysterious Female Voice Which Disrupts His Peace – Deder Townsend Improves His Time While Shut Off From World by Growing Mustache

There are a few pastimes almost as enjoyable as being a juror—such as spending a short vacation in jail, or floating around on the bosom of the deep, blue ocean without an oasis in sight, for example. The latter diversions have their advantages. In jail a man usually can receive and talk to any callers that happen to drop in, and on the sea he could talk to them if they were present—which is comforting. But on a jury he can't do either. He has got to forget his past and his future and his present for the time being and devote himself exclusively to the business of being a juror. His mind is not to be burdened with mundane things.

The jurors in the Frank trial are having a harder time than any others previously recruited in Atlanta—about two weeks harder. When they get through they will be the champion marathon jurors of the whole south.

A lot of interesting fiction could be written about the Frank jury. There is a good opening for an enterprising enthusiastic young fiction writer. He could dope out a lot of interesting plots which might be received with acclaim by the magazine-consuming public.

For instance, he could write a story on the Enoch Arden style—only with a happy ending—about the return to his home of Juror No. 7. He could have the juror come in, be received joyfully by his good wife after properly identifying himself, go into the bath room, and find his razor all nicked up. Thus the plot would thicken and the story run on until it ended by Mrs. Juror No. 7, explaining that little Willie, who was expected shortly after the deputy sheriff served pa with a subpoena to come to court, had grown up during pa's absence and used the razor for his first shave.

This is only one of a number of thrilling plots which might be conceived.

Fortunately, nothing very far out of the ordinary has happened to the Frank jurors, either individually or collectively. They have been unable to collect debts, but, on the other hand, they have escaped collectors. So it is a stand off. True, one insurance agent did succeed in getting a policy signed up, but, then, they are not deterred by anything, these insurance solicitors. They would be present, probably in the deep blue ocean, too—or in jail.

RUBBER HUNTS VOICE.

The principal trouble that the Frank jurors have had is in amusing themselves. After a few days they got permission to read magazines (properly inspected first by deputy sheriffs and then they were given a piano in their rooms. Thus equipped they haven't had such a disagreeable time of it. Books and music, however, do not form their only means of amusement. Not by any means, if reports to the outside are correct. The twelve Frank jurors did just like any other twelve men in the world, thrown together like they are, would do. They devoted a part of their leisure time to practical jokes. And the time passed quicker.

The jurors usually smoke their good-night cigar and climb into their various beds about 9:30 or 10 o'clock. A few nights ago, a night when one of these practical jokes was sprung, they got into their twelve suits of pajamas as usual and retired.

They left Court Bailiffs Charles F. Huber and A. F. Pennington on guard in different rooms.

Everything went along as usual for about an hour. That is to say the jurors all dropped off to sleep, and the snores of twelve men took the place of bantering, singing and story telling.

Bailiff Huber was sitting quietly near the door of the room he was watching. He was propped up in a chair which was tilted against the wall. He was steeped in thought, judging from his sphinx-like attitude.

Suddenly, though, all was action.

"O, Mr. Huber, O, Mr. Huber," came in a tense feminine tone from the door at his side. "Open the door quick." Huber opened the door enough to stick his head out and look into the hall. It was empty! "Funny," he thought to himself as he resumed his seat. "I'd would have sworn I heard a voice." The bailiff just got seated again when the voice came from a door at the other side of the room, one leading into another apartment where there were more jurors.

"Now I wonder," muttered Mr. Huber to himself, "how that woman got into that room. He made it across the floor in nothing flat. An apartment with twelve jurors in it is no place for a woman!

FINDS ROOM EMPTY.

Mr. Huber opened the door wide. Imagine his astonishment when he found nobody. A moonbeam straggled in through the window and threw a weird spot on the carpet directly at his feet. There was the regular breathing of sleeping men—and nothing more. It was uncanny. Mr. Huber stood still and wondered for about two minutes. He concluded that he must have dozed off in his chair and dreamed he heard a voice. But it was funny. It had never happened to him before!

Then it came a third time. "O, Mr. Huber, come quick!" You couldn't fool Huber this time. He knew right where this woman was. She was on the fire escape just outside the window. He crossed the room, pushed up the sash and looked out. There was nobody there. No matter though, she probably went up the little iron ladder to the next floor. It was a plot to get him out of the room maybe. But it wouldn't work. No, sir.

Mr. Huber went over and sat down. He was perfectly sure of himself now. If anybody wanted to get him out of that room they would have to come in and drag him out. No woman was going to entice him up a fire escape. He sat there with his hand nearest the pocket which contained his revolver for probably fifteen minutes. At the end of that time Bailiff Huber concluded that the enemy had abandoned the plan of enticing him off.

Suddenly—it sounds preposterous—he heard the voice again. And this time it came from another window in the room where there was no fire escape. Mr. Huber let the voice run on a good long while before he moved this time. He wanted to be sure of his ground. The voice grew louder, more imploring. Bailiff Huber finally got up and went to the window. He found just exactly what he expected to find—nothing.

Court Bailiff Huber, detailed to watch the Frank jury at night, walked around the room all the rest of the night with his gun in his hand, according to a reliable source of information.

TOWNSEND GROWS MOUSTACHE.

Juror Deder Townsend, who sits in the front row in the fourth seat from the left of the box, is improving his time since he has severed his worldly connections. He is engaged in the interesting occupation of growing a moustache. There are a number of things on his upper lip that looks like this !!!!!! They are hairs. The whole jury seems proud of the crop.

Mr. Townsend's mousache is blond. At this stage of the game it is impossible to tell whether it will curl up or down and, owing to the fact that he cannot be interviewed it cannot be stated what his intentions are for it.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner is in a quandry. Almost his whole force of bailiffs wants to get off next week to go to camp meeting. Nearly every one of his subordinates has come to him with a request for a few days off then. And more bailiffs are needed at the Frank trial than any other criminal action in Atlanta's history. There are a number of bailiffs that will go to the meeting, which is to be held at Ben Hill—but there is a larger number who won't. The main trouble is choosing the lucky ones.

Mr. Plennie Miner has a bright idea, too. It is one that has made him immensely popular with the press. He is planning a big fish fry near the Chattahoochee river on the first Saturday afternoon after the Frank trial closes. He is going to invite the judge, the lawyers on both sides, the jury, all the court attaches and the newspaper men who have been working on the trial. Besides the fish there will be chicken and something to wash it down with. You can't say anything about Plennie Miner before a reporter these days!

LIFE IS WORTH LIVING WITH THESE JURORS AROUND

APPROPRIATION BILL.

The appropriations bill first adopted by the house called for $280,000 in excess of the expected revenue. This amount was cut off in the senate and the bill sent back. It is known that the amended bill will be fought in the house, as the slice was taken from pensions and the school teachers' fund. Governor Slaton asked some time ago that the appropriations budget be sent to him ten days before the legislature adjourned. Already there are but four days left of the session and the question of appropriations is still at issue. If the house concurs in the cut made by the senate, all well and good. But if the appropriations are increased again, it will be almost impossible for the bill to get through the senate and come to the governor within the short time left.

The appropriations bill is expected to come up in the house Monday. If there is a split over it, it will block all other legislation for one or several days. This brings up the question as to whether there will be an extra session of the legislature.

Speculation has been rife on this point among the solons for days, and opinions on the question seem to be evenly divided. Unless the house does concur in the senate cut of the appropriations bill, an extra session is inevitable.

The two main questions, tax reform and appropriations, will take up more time next week than any others. Further legislation probably will be sidetracked.

OTHER TAX MEASURES.

Other tax measures in the house have had little success. Speaker Burwell's two bills on this point were killed. One provided for an ad valorem tax of 2 1-2 milles to be taken from the regular 6 mills tax and be used for the schools. The other provided for 1-2 mill to be taken from the regular 5 mills tax and used for pensions. The house has reconsidered its action in defeating these measures, but there is small prospect that they will appear in the legislature again this year.

Representative Fulbright's tax bill providing for an increase of 1 mill in 1914 and 1-2 mill in 1915 was also killed. In fact, the only tax measure to get through the house was that of Representatives Swift, of Muscogee; Cole, of Bartow, and Slater, of Bryan, known as the inheritance tax.

The two big questions will likely interfere with legislation on some very important general measures. There are special appropriation bills, some of which have been passed by the house but of which many more are yet to come up.

SCHOOL BOOKS SIDETRACKED.

The bill of Representative McCrory, of Sebley, is another which is of wide interest. It provides that the state school superintendent shall cause to be published a list of books used in Georgia's public schools, so that bids may be made, the firm making the most attractive bid to have the award of publishing the state's school books in the future, the books to be sold to the children at cost. An effort will be made to have it placed on the calendar Monday.

It is expected that the measure known as the mothers' rights bill will come up in the house Monday. This bill provides that the mother, prima facie, shall be awarded the custody of children of tender age, where the right to them shall come into dispute.

The senate will have a great number of local bills which have passed the house to consider, as well as the tax reform bill.

BUENOS Aires, Aug. 9.—An appropriation of $310,000 requested by the Argentine government for the purchase of a building at Washington for the Argentine legation to the United States, was approved to day by the senate committee.

A Farreaching Decision On Georgia Freight Rates.

The recently announced decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the case of the Board of Trade of Carrollton against certain railroad companies of the Southeast marks an important step in the establishment of just and reasonable freight rates in Georgia. The relief it affords is not limited to a particular community, for the principles enunciated in this wholesome decision open the way to far-reaching readjustments in traffic rates throughout Georgia and, indeed, throughout the South.

There appears elsewhere in today's Journal an interesting summary of the Commission's ruling together with comment on its salient features by Mr. Edgar Watkins, of the firm of Watkins & Latimer, counsel for the Carrollton Board of Trade. To this clear account of the issues involved in the case, little need be added. As Mr. Watkins points out, Carrollton has been subjected to freight rates that were discriminatory as well as excessive. Its shippers were charged rates which, in proportion to the distance concerned, were much higher than those charged competing points. Thus on many commodities the rates from Baltimore to Carrollton were actually higher than the rates on the same commodities moving over the same line and in the same direction to a point considerably beyond Carrollton; that is to say, a shipment which moved through Carrollton to the more distant point would be charged less than when it ended at Carrollton.

This arbitrary manner of dealing, the roads sought to justify by contending that it was simply a logical application of the so-called "basing-point" system. But Mr. Commissioner Clements disposes of this plea by holding that the basing point system of rate making "does not now demand that joint through rates over long distances to local or non-competitive points should be made by adding to basing-point rates either the full locals or high differentials." And he declares further in this connection that:

"In the making of joint through rates on long-distance traffic to local or non-competitive points, the differentials above the rates to the basing points should bear some reasonable relation to the total distance involved, in order that the rates to the local point may be just and to avoid subjecting such local points to prejudice or disadvantage that is undue."

The principle thus set forth is, indeed, significant. While recognizing natural basing points it affirms that "the rates charged towns other than basing points shall no longer be arbitraries but shall have reasonable relation to distance." This solution, as Mr. Watkins says, "is conservative and wise and points the way to a closer approximation to rates based on the principle that the greater the distance freight moves, the greater the actual rate, though the rate per mile lessens with distance."

Following the decision in the Carrollton case and modeled upon the opinions therein set forth, is another with reference to LaGrange and other Georgia towns similarly concerned. The relief thus granted amounts to far more than a reduction of excessive rates, it also lifts a burden of discriminatory rates which, after all, constitute the gravest of traffic evils. The development and prosperity of Georgia depend very largely on the protection of its people against inequitable freight charges. The Commission's decision in these cases goes far toward the reform of existing inequalities and is, therefore, a distinct advantage to the common interests of the State.

It won't do to have Alabama monopolize the baseball standings.

One imagines that if Wilson finally decided that he had to fight, he would put up a good one.

It will be observed in the market reports that butter continues firm, despite the weather.

Progress of the Currency Bill.

The progress of the banking and currency bill though naturally slow has been hopefully sure. Differences of opinion in the House committee which once seemed irreconcilable have been adjusted. Changes here and there which meet conservative demands but which leave the ruling spirit of the bill unweakened have been introduced, thus winning friends from hitherto hostile or doubtful ranks. The measure which will now go to the Democratic caucus for consideration is certainly the most widely approved of its kind that has yet been proposed.

That it will be passed by the House substantially in its present form is a practically certainty. Its chances in the Senate are not so easy to predict, though within the past week Democratic leaders have become more confident. The President remains firm in his determination that an adequate banking and currency measure shall be enacted before Congress adjourns; and that within itself means much.

The "Syndicated" War Scare.

There is a persistent and seemingly concerted effort to force the United States into a Mexican war despite the administration's well-considered and well conducted plans to effect a peaceful settlement of the grave issues involved. Whence comes this pell-mell spirit that does not pause to weigh the human cost nor to avert, if possible, the farflung problems which such a conflict would entail? Certainly, it does not come from the rank and file of our thoughtful, patriotic citizens. Evidently it proceeds from interests which are seeking war as a means to advance their own selfish and sinister ends.

Senator Williams, of Mississippi, in addressing the Senate yesterday declared it to be his deliberate opinion that there is now "an organized and syndicated movement to bring about war between the United States and Mexico, organized and syndicated through newspapers with money behind it, and not all of it Mexican money." His suspicion is by means groundless, for while the President and the State department and the Foreign Relations committee of the Senate are exerting every effort to adjust our strained relationships toward the troublous country across the Rio Grande and are going the well-measured length of diplomatic counsel to avoid drastic procedure, we find other influences doing all within their power to inflame public feeling and to drive Congress to precipitate action.

It is assuring to know, however, that we have at the head of this Government statesmen who will not be rushed into committing the nation to a war that can be averted on reasonable and honorable terms. And it is even more asuring to know that they are supported by the country's sober and dominant thought. What the ultimate outcome of the Mexican situation may be is as yet beyond prediction. But up to the present hour, the administration's course has been eminently proper. President Wilson and his advisers evidently have confidence in the mission of Mr. John Lind who has been sent to the Mexican capital as the President's special representative. That is apparently a decisive move on the part of our Government. Until the success or failure of this particular mission is determined, there is no excuse for hasty action.

The complications or perils which the jingoes direfully forecast will attend Mr. Lind's presence in Mexico are not likely to materialize. His status does not depend upon the recognition of the provisional government of Huerta or upon that of the revolutionary camps. He goes as adviser to the American embassy, through which he may present any plan he has to convey and conduct any negotiations he desires. Huerta's bark is more dreadful than his bite. The probability is that he will think a long time before offering any affront to a special representative of the United States.

If by any chance war with Mexico should be inevitable, it should come as a last resort, as the only possible means of preserving our national honor and of meeting our responsibilities to civilization; it should never come in response to the clamor of selfish interests. Such a war would not only burden the nation with a tremendous cost in money and lives; it would also set back those great causes of economic and political reform in which Congress is now engaged and upon the success of which the people's welfare so vitally depends. It would mean a continuance and even an increase in the high cost of living; it would probably mean the indefinite delay, if not the defeat of tariff revision, of banking and currency reform and of the country's orderly progress along paths of business freedom and prosperity.

Every American who regards his own interests and who truly loves his country will applaud the prudent, farsighted course which the administration is pursuing, a course which will protect our national welfare by peaceful means, so long as that is possible but which will be ready for honorable force, if need be.

Financial reasons probably stand in the way of so many authors accepting these diplomatic jobs.

The Urgent Need of a Western and Atlantic Commission

The State Senate has done well to reconsider its adverse vote on the proposed appointment of a commission to study the future interests of the Western and Atlantic railroad. Senator Sweat's resolution providing for such an inquiry was so garbled by useless amendments that it was finally opposed even by those who heartily approved its original purpose. Realizing, however, the need of prompt action toward solving this important problem, the Senate has recommitted the resolution to the W. and A. committee whereby, it is to be hoped, some adequate plan will soon be devised and put into effect.

This is a matter of such vital concern to the public interests that the Legislature cannot afford to leave it longer in suspense. The Western and Atlantic railroad is the State's richest material possession, being worth at least between sixteen and twenty million dollars—an amount sufficient to pay the State's entire public debt and leave many millions in the treasury. Aside from its immediate and tangible value, the road has an important bearing on freight rate problems and on other far-reaching questions of transportation. Its fortunes are thus woven inseparably with those of the commerce, the industry and, indeed, the whole business fabric of this commonwealth.

How important, therefore, that the State be prepared to deal advisedly with the future disposition of this great property! Hasty or shortsighted action on this matter would jeopardize the value of the road and would be an outrage against the people. The time is not far distant when the Legislature must squarely face its responsibility in this regard, for the present lease of the Western and Atlantic expires a little more than six years hence. Unless the Legislature is accurately informed concerning all the questions involved, it will be unable to deal competently with any of them. It will find itself suddenly entangled in scores of difficult problems with no key to their solution and without sufficient time for their consideration. The result will be the sacrifice of property worth within itself millions of dollars, and beyond all reckoning in its potential value to the people.

If the State is to be prepared to protect its interests when the decisive moment arrives, it must begin now a careful study of the many weighty questions to be determined; and to that end a trustworthy commission, charged with investigating this issue in all its aspects, should be created with the least possible delay. It is essential, of course, that the members of this commission be unquestionably free from any private railroad influence, that they be capable and open-minded to all lines of profitable inquiry. There should be no difficulty, however, in safeguarding these points and in securing a commission that will be truly representative of the public interests.

When Senator Sweat's resolution came before the Senate for discussion last week, it was so amended as to exclude from the proposed commission's investigation practically all questions except that of a new lease. Such a plan is clearly insufficient, for the lease is but one among a number of equally important matters that should be considered. There is, for instance, the very important question of extending the Western and Atlantic to the sea. The State's road is now a local line, limited in power and earning capacity and in many respects dependent upon competing systems for its usefulness. But, as The Journal has repeatedly said and as nearly everyone who has given this subject careful and unprejudiced thought agrees, if the W. and A. is extended to the coast, thereby establishing independent traffic connections between interior towns and the advantageous ocean routes to and from the East, it will be forever beyond the power of competing lines or combinations to reduce its value and it will become the permanent and natural arbiter of freight rates in Georgia.

We may again note the fact that the act of December the twenty-first, 1836, under which the railroad was built by the State, contemplated its ultimate circumstances that this logical plan was temporarily put aside. The time has come when the State should resume and perfect its original purpose. The needs and advantages of extending the road to the coast are far more numerous and far more urgent today than they were three quarters of a century ago. Surely, then, we of today will not show less foresight or patriotism than our forbears of that early time.

Any investigation which fails to take account of the extension of the W. and A. to the sea will be woefully incomplete and sharply disappointing to the people. Any commission for which the Legislature provides should be instructed to consider this phase of the subject and to recommend, so far as is possible, practical means for procedure. It would not be necessary, of course, for the commission to limit its inquiry or report to any one plan of extension.

There is the further question of disposing of certain parts of the Western and Atlantic terminal areas which are not essential to the railroad proper and which, if opened for business development could be made to yield the State a revenue larger perhaps than that it has heretofore derived from the entire lease. The Legislature should realize the fact that the Western and Atlantic property consists not of a railroad alone but also of very valuable lands apart from the road itself and are not necessary to the road's operation. If these lands can be made to produce an independent income without impairing the service or the rental value of the railroad proper, it would certainly be unbusinesslike for the State to *include them in the new railroad lease. Any commis*sion that is created should by all means be empowered to look into this particular question.

Why there should ever have been any objection to these matters being included in the original Senate resolution, it is difficult to see, for they are clearly part and parcel of the Western and Atlantic problem. They must be dealt with by the Legislature; they must be dealt with intelligently, unless the interests of the State are to suffer; they should, therefore, be studied by a commission with as much care as the subject of a new lease.

The Senate committee on the Western and Atlantic railroad, to which the Sweat resolution has been recommitted, has a peculiarly urgent task. Only a few days of the present Legislative session remain but unless some adequate action looking to the road's future interests is taken within that time, another year will lapse before the subject can again be considered; and in the meantime some of the problems involved will grow more complex. It is, therefore, earnestly to be hoped that the committee will make all possible haste in reporting a suitable resolution and that both the Senate and the House will promptly approve it; for continued neglect of this great issue will be nothing less than treachery to the State's vital interests.

Robert C. Ogden

(New York Times.)

The death of Mr. Ogden is the peaceful end of a noble and fruitful career. It is given to few men to serve his fellow-men as continuously and as well as did Mr. Ogden. Successful in business and in possession of a fortune adequate to the aims to which he devoted it with broad views, great practical sagacity, energy unbounded, patience inexhaustible, and firm faith in the triumph of the best in life, he was a born leader for his time.

His chief work was in the promotion of education in the south. He originated the plan of annual conferences of men from the north and the south to consider the problem and to devise ways toward its solution, and he was the head of the broader and better-equipped organization that followed and has been made permanent. His vital idea in this work was co-operation between leading men of both sections having common aims. Profoundly zealous as he was, there was in his nature nothing of the zealot. His mind was as open as his heart was true. It is no idle judgment of an occasional mood to say that he loved his work, loved all that were engaged in it, and really loved those who, from misunderstanding, opposed it. His patriotism was fervent and faithful, but of sectional feeling he was entirely free. This was the secret of the wonderful hold he succeeded in getting on the confidence, the respect, and the affection of all classes of men in all parts of the country. His tact was of that fine and efficient sort that is in reality constant, candid, just, and sympathetic consideration for others.

As president of the board of trustees of Hampton institute, he had to deal with a most complex and delicate series of tasks; he was equal to all the demands made upon him. His administrative ability was extraordinary, but his moral gifts were more so. He was as steadfast as the day, firm, courageous, farsighted, yet simple as a child. His place cannot be filled, but it is his supreme gift to his kind that the work he began and so largely forwarded will continue, vitalized by his labors and inspired by his lofty purposes.

What Is Art?

Has it not sometimes happened to you that on the fifth or sixth rereading of a favorite book a sentence hitherto passed by has leaped out at you with the suddenness of a pet cat and affectionately fastened itself upon you, not to be dismissed? In this manner I find in my favorite "Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft" the following excellent, because workable, definition of art:

"An expression, satisfying and abiding, of the zest of life."

This is comprehensive, since it embraces a huckleberry pie as well as the Ninth Symphony, the kitten's spool dance as well as the Sistine Madonna. It is complete, since it works backward; it presents art as valuable not only as a result but as indissolubly connected with the artist. I can no more conceive of an impersonal, detached, spontaneously generated pie, and after reading "Hamlet" I find myself less pleased with an ingenious view of the hero's madness, let us say, than with an additional shade of personal friendship with Mr. Shakespeare.

The Sistine Madonna is for me a symbol of inestimable beauty and a source of unending delight, a de*light that is not lessened because I recognize its source* in the mind of an outwardly raffish, inwardly iridescent young Florentine, one Sanzio, dead these several centuries.

Pondering along these lines, as Mr. Mable might say, I have been reading certain foreign works of literature, to wit: Tolstoy's tragedy, "The Powers of Darkness;" Hauptmann's "Before Dawn," and Sudermann's "Atlantis." I presume—at least, I hope—every school boy is not familiar with these works.

I shall not reread them. I don't mind having read them because I can brag of it; people brag of lawsuits and operations and what they have to spend for wives. But I should be extremely annoyed if my husband were to bring Mr. Hauptmann or Mr. Sudermann home to dinner. Thank goodness, he is not likely to invite Tolstoy.

But it seems to me that I am in a very unpleasant position. I must either give up my new, welcome, ever to be cherished definition of art, or I must pass into the exterior darkness of those who deny that these three eminent authors are artists.

Or perhaps some Sun reader will be good enough to tell me if modern European writers, particularly German and Russian, find any zest in anything. And if so, why not?—From a Letter to the New York Sun.

Nine Million Amusers

It has been roughly estimated that 10 per cent of us, the people of the United States, keep busy and earn our living amusing the other 90 per cent. This 10 per cent includes those who do the actual work of amusing; singers in grand opera, light opera, concert; actors in the "legitimate" theaters, in vaudeville, in burlesque, in small shows; performers in the various departments of the innumerable circuses, carnivals, street fairs, baseball players, football players, basket ball players, motor racers, aviators, boxers, innumerable exponents of innumerable forms of professional athletics and professional sports.

It includes also the people who promote these amusements; who incorporate companies and manufacture devices to be used in amusing—film companies with armies of employes in the moving picture field, for example; the people in their large offices forces; the people who manage and direct theaters, amusement parks, race courses, athletic fields, etc.; stage hands, mechanicians, electricians and employes in countless other ramifications of the general business of amusement.

It includes also the people who promote these amusements, those who finance them, those who manage them, those who execute them, those press agents, advance men, sign painters, "spielers" and "bankers," etc., who advertise them and draw the attention of the rest of us—the patrons who comprise the other 90 per cent.

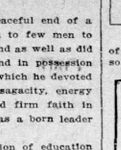
Open Air Plays and Pageantry

By Frederic J. Haskin



Although pageantry and outdoor drama as a means of public entertainment and instruction are innovations so far as America is concerned, a new calling, that of originating ideas for pageants and outdoor plays, is attracting the attention of artists, musicians and dramatists all over the country. Their aim is not only to present entertaining high class drama, but to portray in realistic form the great historical events that have had to do with the development and growth of this nation. Open air theaters at Berkely, San Diego, Bohemian Club Grove, Point Loma and Bakersfield, in California, and at Milwaukee, have proved so successful that plans for similar theaters for Chicago, New York and number of other cities are being rapidly developed.

• • •

In one sense this movement shows a return to the earliest conditions of dramatic presentation. However, it is not the purpose to reduce dramatic art to primitive forms, but rather to bring to the outdoor performance the knowledge gained since the drama has been acted indoors. The use of the open air theater undoubtedly will lead to new discoveries in technique and stage illusions, and so broaden the scope of a conventional art. It is also stimulating the presentation of local dramatic literature.

• • •

The revival of pageantry in England and America within the last ten years has come at a time when both countries were ready to glorify their past after years of forgetfulness, and the agitation for open air theaters comes largely from a spontaneous demand of the people. As men are wont to idealize the characters and conditions of former times, the material for pageants is naturally taken from olden days of glamour. Such an appeal to the imagination has always found favor with those who sought to entertain and please the people. Sculptured figures on tombs, temples, pyramids and monuments show the Egyptians, Romans and Greeks as adepts in introducing into their celebrations many features of pageantry. In European society the accession of a new monarch gave occasion for processions and ceremonies. The age of chivalry brought in jousts and tournaments. Knightly orders have made much of insignia. Napoleon on many occasions used organized processions and brilliant display as a dramatization of his power and to delight the French populace. Even crude circus parades and Roman chariot races, the cheapest form of pageantry never fail to charm. It is only in the last few years, however, that the more substantial values of pageantry and outdoor plays have been illustrated.

• • •

The first revivals were the anniversary pageants of Sherborne, Oxford, York and Warwick, in England, and they attracted international attention. One of the first pageants in the United States was that at Marietta, Ohio, in 1888. The aim was to teach history by the objective method. Scenes from the early settlement were given including the arrival of immigrants, organization of civil government, beginning of village struggles with the Indians, men and the treaty of peace. Attics and trunks were ransacked and many of the participants were able to secure the identical clothes worn a hundred years ago by ancestors of the actors.

The history of our country is replete with material full of dramatic possibilities and rich in human interest which American ingenuity and energy are eager to putting into shape for presentation. Immigration brings legends which furnish an inexhaustible source. Thirteen nations were represented in a Fourth of July celebration in Springfield, Mass. The last Columbus day pageant in Boston developed as much interest in the foreign quarters of the city as among the native citizens. The movement for a sane celebration of Independence day has given a strong impetus to pageantry and outdoor plays as was shown this year in many large cities. The pageant in Washington, D. C., to celebrate a safe and sane Fourth this year included an original play, "Uncle Sam's Birthday Party," a long procession of school children in costume and many floats. It took the place of the usual fireworks celebration and delighted thousands of spectators who assembled on the Washington monument grounds.

The subject for the chronicle play in the pageant is usually local but sometimes there is a special play or masque. The Canterbury Pilgrims at Gloucester, Mass., in 1909, in which 3,000 actors and choral singers took part before 25,000 spectators, achieved high artistic success and illustrated the possibilities of out*door drama. The Coburn Players had the leading* parts, but the cast included hundreds of volunteers from the town and surrounding country. Elaborate fireworks and music, instrumental and organ, were used to deepen the impression and the stage effects were in the hands of artists. It has been claimed that only when such experts are employed can pageantry be brought to perfection, but, on the other hand, the enthusiasm and abandonment of amateurs, particularly young people, has a charm that captivates an audience. Vigor, action, contrasts and incidents are the all important elements.

• • •

In Pittsburg school children recently depicted the history of that city from Indian time to the present day in a most effective manner. The Boston Normal school presented the History of Education at the thirty-fifth anniversary. Students and teachers of the Central High school in Springfield, Mass., last year gave a presentation showing the progress of our country from early colonial days to independence. As a business proposition, where local color is used, such presentations as Boston and Springfield students and teachers gave are highly successful in securing funds for the schools.

• • •

The school pageants and historical plays demonstrate the fact that public education has some other function than to impart to the students learning gleaned from books. The school as a center and a such should have its influence radiating into all quarters of the community. A Hungarian festival was recently given in a Chicago school which not only excited interest in an isolated quarter of the city, and so abolished a civic dead line, but it germinated a festival feeling in the entire student body. A normal school in Grand Rapids, Mich., has established this year a special course in outdoor festivals, and teachers come from the surrounding rural schools for ideas to entertain their communities in this way.

• • •

The spirit of pageantry has germinated the home coming weeks in small towns throughout the country. Keen delight is taken in re-enacting some of the original incidents in the development of a village. The first wedding, first church service, first school or party are typical subjects that arouse enthusiasm and the crude, unfinished festivals go to the hearts of the people. Many incidents related by antiquarians of the village are enacted with lively interest.

• • •

The presentation of great deeds of the French and English pioneers at Quebec's 300th anniversary in 1908 has been unsurpassed in portraying romantic historical episodes, but it did not involve the community's co-operation as did the pageant to celebrate the 250th anniversary of the founding of Hadley, a town in Massachusetts of only 1,800 inhabitants. A local committee under the direction of Clarence Hawkes, the blind poet, planned the entire procession and secured the co-operation of eight surrounding towns. The several floats that Hadley produced included the Deeding of the Indian Lands, Red Man or White, Angel of Hadley, Burning of Hopkins Academy, The Grist Mill, Hadley Witch, Ye Old Time Kitchen, Ye Log School House, French and Indian War, Presentation of Burgoyne's Sword, Hooker's Farewell to His Brother, Spirit of '61, and General Hooker on Horseback. There was remarkable fidelity to the actual conditions of the times presented and the spectators numbered over 25,000. This pageant illustrated what right spirit and skillful management can do in a small town.

IN THE LOCAL PLAYHOUSES

There is plenty of real interest in the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week, that sort of interest that manifests itself far in advance. The popularity of vaudeville has never been greater, and Forsyth attendance has never been bigger than right now.

There are several important acts on the bill for this week. There is comedy and the extra added attraction will be one of the biggest things the Ringling show ever offered. William Weston and company will have one of the important places on the program, presenting "Attorneys."

Ralph Herz, perhaps the best known of all the musical comedy stars, will make his first aipearance in Atlanta. Herz is a capital entertainer and his part of the program will be a contribution of character songs. When the Ringling show was seen in New York the feature that drew more newspaper space and created the biggest sensation was the appearance of the famous Adas family, five girls and two men. They have been induced to take a vaudeville tour and the Forsyth was included early in the route that has been assigned by the Keith offices.

Franker Wood and Bunee Wyde in "Good Night," a contribution in music, rhyme and music, promise to be one of the popular numbers on the program. There will be eccentric dancing, good singing and comedy. Milo Beldon and company, two men and a girl, will present a comedy sketch called "Oh, Doctor." Joe Flynn will tell some funny stories and the Randalls, man and woman who are wonderful sharpshooters, make up the bill.

SOUTHERN COLLEGES SHOW A MARKED IMPROVEMENT

160 Institutions Now Have Standard Requirements, According to Miss Coulton

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Southern colleges since 1900 have made a remarkable advancement, not only in entrance requirements, but in libraries, laboratories, buildings and equipment, according to a statement of the bureau of education, issued today. Miss Elizabeth Avery Coulton, secretary of the Southern Association of College Women, who reported on conditions, declared that in 1900 only three southern colleges had standard requirements for entrance, while this year 160 institutions had adopted such standards.

Miss Coulton attributes the improvement to various philanthropic organizations which co-operated to better the educational system in the south. With the betterment in entrance requirements, she declared, has come a decided increase also in the amount of college work represented by the degree, while in the personnel of the faculty a marked improvement is shown.

MAY EAT ALL NIGHT IF ONLY THE BAR IS CLOSED

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Mayor Gaynor's order of March 25, closing all selling restaurants even to no-drinking diners at 1 o'clock in the morning, has been overruled by a decision of three justices of the supreme court who declared yesterday that a restaurant may serve food at any hour of the night provided the bar is closed.

A restaurant keeper who was accused of violating the law, who said he had allowed patrons to remain eating after the closing of the bar, brought the case to the supreme court for a test.

When the order was first put into affect there was much trouble on Broadway, a number of persons in the midst of meals being unceremoniously ejected.

CHEF IS CHARGED WITH BURNING HIS SWEETHEART

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—John Grady, a hotel chef, was formally booked on the charge of murder today while the police continued their search for traces of his common law wife who disappeared 12 months ago. Search of the Grady home has revealed portions of a woman's corset, half charred woman's supporters, eight hair pins, part of a woman's shoe heel and bits of supposed human bones.

WIFE'S ILLNESS DRIVES OPERATOR TO POISON

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ACON, Ga., Aug. 9.—Despondent over the condition of his wife, who is afflicted with pellagra and is in a critical condition, W. J. Bettis, a transfer line operator, attempted suicide last night at his home on Telfair and Henrietta streets, by taking laudanum.

He was discovered lying on the floor in his room shortly after he swallowed the poison and was quickly transferred to the hospital. With the use of the stomach pump, physicians were able to eject the poison from his system. Today he appears much better and will recover.

He is thirty-nine years old and has a wife and three children.

MRS. HAMILTON KILLED BY LIGHTNING BOLT

Young Matron Was in New Cottage at Blue Ridge Summer Resort

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

VIENNA, Ga., Aug. 9.—Mrs. J. B. Hamilton, a young matron of Vienna, was struck by a bolt of lightning and instantly killed Friday afternoon in a cottage at Blue Ridge, Ga. Mrs. Hamilton, her mother-in-law, Mrs. J. O. Hamilton, and Mrs. F. J. Lewis and Miss Leone Powell, of this city, had taken the cottage for the month at the resort, and were there when Mrs. Hamilton was struck.

Mrs. Hamilton was the wife of J. B. Hamilton, cashier of the Bank of Vienna. She was a daughter of J. G. Forehand, a prominent business man of Vienna.

The remains will reach Vienna Saturday morning and interment and funeral exercises will be held in the afternoon at the city cemetery.

BALDWIN TO HAVE BIG SUNDAY SCHOOL MEET

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MILLEGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 9.—Baldwin county will have a Sunday school convention next Thursday and Friday, August 14 and 15, and an interesting program has been arranged for the occasion. The first day's session will be held in the country at Mount Pleasant church and a dinner will be served on the grounds. The second day's session will be held with the Presbyterian church at Milledgeville.

There will be morning and afternoon sessions each day, with several addresses by notable Sunday school workers.

This city will be host to the state Sunday school convention next May and preperations are already on foot for the meeting.

MEN AND RELIGION BULLETIN NO. 73

Children of Georgia

"And they all with one consent began to make Excuse"

Luke 14:18

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritical phrases, as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, today, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him, who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

"We are unable—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever be the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say so frankly; but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a reformatory for girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills, and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Tolbert, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clark, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee, constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl child of ten to fourteen.

Sick-Bed Romance Ends Happily at Minister's Home

A sick-bed romance that began some three months ago culminated in the wedding Friday evening of Miss Pearl Goudloche and B. C. Harris. The bride until recently had been one of the nurses in Wesley Memorial hospital. The groom has been in business in Atlanta. Last night they left for Gainesville, Mr. Harris' old home, to spend a brief honeymoon, and shortly they will leave Georgia for California, where Mr. Harries will go into business at Los Angeles and where they will make their future home.

The beginning of the romance occurred when Mr. Harris fell ill. His services of a trained nurse became necessary, and fate sent Miss Goudloche. At the home of M. S. Mitchell, 19 York avenue, where Mr. Harris was sick, the couple met. Their wedding was solemnized at the home of Rev. Dr. S. R. Belk in West End. Dr. Belk performing the ceremony.

TUMLINS INCORPORATE THEIR TOBACCO STORES

Both Members of Firm Are Well Versed in Their Line of Work

Yesterday W. N. Tumlin and George W. Tumlin filed a petition in Fulton superior court for the incorporation of their cigar and tobacco business under the name of Tumlin Brothers company. The capital stock authorized is $100,000, at one hundred thousand dollars with a paid in capital of fifty thousand dollars.

The company now has stores at the corner of Broad and Walton streets and in Elkin's Drug Store at the corner of Marietta and Peachtree streets. It has secured leases for stores in the new Hurt building and in the Healey building. With this chain of stores they will have one of the largest businesses of its kind in the south.

The petition recites that the company proposes to engage in the real estate and purchase money note business as well as the cigar business. Its board of directors is to be composed of W. N. Tumlin, George W. Tumlin, E. H. Thompson, R. W. Byers and Grover C. Middlebrooks. The petition was filed by the law firm of Shepard Bryan & Grover C. Middlebrooks.

Graft Instead of Patriotism In Mexican Ideal, Says Oldknow

Atlanta Motion Picture Man Saw Real Battle and Studied Conditions

William Oldknow, the motion picture theater owner, has just returned from Mexico, where he went to take special pictures of the revolution. He visited the rebel quarters near Juarez and brought back not only a fine assortment of views, but also some first-hand impressions of the country and people and their present anarchistic condition.

Mr. Oldknow says that conditions are as bad in Mexico as they well could be. Americans are distilked, and the rebels, as he saw it, are not fight ing so much through patriotism as through a desire to get out by looting their leaders, that all estates will be confiscated and parcelled out to each member of the army.

HE SEES A BATTLE.

Mr. Oldknow and his operator took pictures of a real battle. His son, a boy of fourteen, was also a spectator, and few boys have had the fun and excitement that young Oldknow had on this Mexican trip.

The battle took place at Nacos, on the northern border, just a few feet over the line. The dispatches haven't featured it, but, nevertheless, it was a matter of fact, it started at 6 a. m. and lasted until dark. Fourteen men out of 200 lost their lives.

The railroad is on the boundary line, and Mr. Oldknow, his son and the camera man, together with several dozen rebel soldiers, took refuge behind freight cars on the American side.

"Through doors and cracks they got a good view of the encounter.

"A Mexican soldier doesn't bother about taking aim," said Mr. Oldknow. "He just runs behind a house or tree, throws his gun in the air, fires at random and retreats behind the house. There is no formation, no tactics, no discipline. Why, at the end of the day's fighting, when the federal commander decided to surrender, and the bugles blew stop firing, the rebels, not knowing the bugle signals, went right on fighting.

"We watched the fight for about two hours, I guess, and then I said to my operator:

"Let's cut and take some pictures of this thing."

"So my operator pulled off his shirt, stuck it on the top of his camera as a flag of truce, and we went out for a look, neither army paying the slightest attention to him.

"About dark the federals surrendered. They stacked their arms, and marched between the cars to the American side. The rebels seized their arms and supplies. The American soldiers took is as a great joke."

HOW MEXICANS REGARD US.

Mr. Oldknow says that Mexicans hate the Americans, and this hatred is felt by both sides, the federals and the rebels alike. Hatred of Americans and fear of Texans, Mr. Oldknow says, is the national feeling.

"If it wasn't for Texas, we could whip the whole of the United States," those Mexicans argue," said Mr. Oldknow. "But they have a holy fear of Texans. If it were not for Texas, I believe they would have fought us long ago."

Americans are insulted in Mexico, Mr. Oldknow says. It is no use resenting it. Murder will follow. He told of a young friend of his, an American, whose jaws were slapped. The man took it because to offer a protest would have meant his death.

The country is taken by bandits and highway robbers. It is a common thing for waiting automobiles to be spirited off.

SEES REBEL LEADERS.

Mr. Oldknow saw General Villa, Colonel Ortega, and those pictured with this article, and other constitutional leaders, and took pictures of them and their armies.

Colonel Ortega, Mr. Oldknow says, is typical. He is commander of 800 cavalrymen, and they have no ammunition wagons and no equipment. All their ammunition they carry in belts or in their pockets. They are walking arsenals.

The rebels have the whole northern border but Juarez, Mr. Oldknow says, and gambling. Railroads are torn up and business is at a standstill.

Mr. Oldknow says the consular service in Mexico is bad. This is due, he thinks, to the indifference of the previous administration. He says he is reliably informed that there is $2,000,000 in claims of property destroyed or confiscated since the present trouble started. About 250 Americans have been killed.

People in Texas with whom Mr. Oldknow talked don't blame the present administration, but say that these troubles accumulated during the Taft administration and have been allowed to lap over.

WHY TEXAS IS FEARED.

The Texas border presents an animated sight of military activity. Mr. Oldknow estimates that 40,000 American soldiers patrol the border. There are 14,000 at Galveston alone.

These soldiers are eager to be sent across the border, and the Mexicans have a terror of the Texas posse. It was the fear of settling a posse across that brought action from the Mexicans in the case of Dixon, the American who was shot.

In fact, Mr. Oldknow says it was 100 Texas cow punchers who caused the fall of Juarez. Gen. Orozco, in a daring night attack, made the federals believe that a great rebel army was in the city.

"Both sides are out for the graft in Mexico," Mr. Oldknow says. "The rebels have been told by their leaders that they will each have a share of the great Mexican estates.

"It has taken them so much as the promise of spoils that moves these men to fight."

Mr. Oldknow says that one American he met posed as an Englishman. He found that he got better protection this way.

COLONEL ORTEGA.

SOUTH GEORGIA WOODMEN FORM NEW ORGANIZATION

Annual Outing Brings 5,000 Persons to Wrightsville, Atlanta Man Honored

The Woodmen of the World, camps of south Georgia, Thursday held their annual picnic at "Idylwild Park," near Wrightsville, Ga. More than 5,000 persons attended. Many prominent members of the order were present from all parts of the state, including all the officers of Georgia jurisdiction, viz:

Judge William Faircloth, of Wrightsville, delivered the opening address of welcome. Dr. F. L. Rosenthal, of Columbus, Ga., head consul for this state, delivered the principal address on "Woodcraft." Other prominent speakers were Dr. J. W. Simmons, of Brunswick, Ga., vice consul of Georgia; W. H. Woodruff and W. J. Simmons, special state deputies of Georgia, and Newton Phillips, of Atlanta, state manager for Georgia.

The better to handle these annual affairs, the "South Georgia Log Rolling association" of the Woodmen of the World was organized and the following executive officers elected to manage its affairs:

Newton Phillips, of Atlanta, president and general manager; Dr. F. L. Rosenthal, Columbus, Ga., first vice president; J. T. Johnston, Eastman, Ga., second vice president; C. Bangs, Savannah, Ga., third vice president; Lyce, Wagstaff, Ga., fourth vice president; Hon. Roscoe Luke, mayor of Thomasville, Ga., fifth vice president; J. W. Domingos, Macon, Ga., secretary-treasurer.

ALFALFA ASSOCIATION WILL MEET IN MACON

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MACON, Ga., Aug. 9.—There will be a meeting in Macon on October 25, during the Alfalfa Fair, of the Georgia Alfalfa Growers' association. It is expected that several hundred farmers from all sections of the state will be in attendance.

Many of them will bring exhibits and contest for the premiums offered by both the state fair association and alfalfa association. General Manager Harry C. Roberts, this morning received a letter from Loring Brown, of Smyrna, saying that the meeting will take place in Macon.

This will be the first state-wide meeting of alfalfa growers ever held in the south, and it is believed that it will stimulate greater interest in the growing of this crop.

Brandon for Governor

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ANNISTON, Ala., Aug. 9.—Anniston delegates who have returned from the Northeast Alabama Confederate Veterans association which was held at Schenck's Mountain Springs this week state that following his address a boom was launched to make W. W. Brandon, probate judge of Tuscaloosa county, governor of the state. H. L. Stevenson, a relative of the late Senator Johnston, who was to have spoken there, presided and was made president of the association. C. D. Kline, of this city, made an address to the sons of veterans. It is said that there were about 5,000 persons present at the meeting, which was marked by great enthusiasm.

Tobacco Habit Easily Conquered

A well-known New Yorker who has had wide experience, has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily banished in three days without any return of the craving.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eye, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the benefits reported. No more of that nervous feeling, that constant need of pipe, cigar, cigarette or chewing tobacco to pacify the morbid desire. The author, Edw. J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., Tib.N. New York City, will send his book free on application, to anyone who writes to him. (Advt.)

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

Representative Hardeman Had "One Bill and Got It Passed.

At the time that the comparatively new general assembly of 1913-1914 convened, Representative R. N. Hardeman, of Jefferson, was frank to admit that he had no special "fish to fry" so far as introducing bills were concerned and stated that he did not think he would have any to send to the clerk's desk during the present session.

The days were on, with adjournment sine die clearly discernible on the horizon, and still the gentleman from Jefferson refrained from the personal introduction of any new matter. But at last he has broken his precedent and at less time than it takes to tell it his measure was introduced and passed by both houses. By this time it may have the governor's signature.

The attention of the legislature was called by Governor John M. Slaton to the new amendment to the federal constitution providing for the election of United States senators by the people, and the suggestion made that immediate action be taken in order to insure some means for their election by voters from Georgia if one should occur.

Mr. Hardeman immediately framed such a bill and introduced it. In an incredibly short time it was passed in the house, and unanimous consent being gained, was at once transmitted to the senate, where its progress remained unbroken and it galloped onward to the executive office.

However why Mr. Hardeman has been in the introduction of bills, he has been one of the busiest members of the house. A man of long legislative experience, level headed and true to his constituents, his counsel and aid have been sought on questions of vital interest to the state and he has unflinchingly come to the support of his friends in the house on the floor and in the committee room.

He was especially active in the cause of tax reform and loyally supported Speaker Burwell's administration measures amendatory to the general tax act. Not since has Mr. Hardeman been tried in the balance and found wanting. His colleagues will tell you that and they will tell you further that never will that time come.

Permanent Registration Law for Traveling Men is Advocated.

Among the matter of permanent registration, the Athens Banner has come out as a staunch advocate of such a system for traveling men. It is a question of which the pros and cons have been thrashed out on more occasions than one, but no definite legislation has been accomplishing the desired end has been attempted.

The editorial follows:

"There out to be a provision for the traveling man the permanent registration law. The traveling man who must be away from home on election day—from the state or district or federal election—ought to have a legal way of voting. If he were permanently registered and had a certificate of registration and a tax receipt indicating that all taxes had been paid to the date of that receipt, and had on the certificate a blank for the date entry of the fact that he voted upon such a date—the matter could be arranged to fit no hardship for the traveling salesman and leave no room for the provision to be taken advantage of by those who might be disposed to so do."

Cordele Rambler Would Make Wheatley Lieutenant Governor.

Editorially commenting, the Cordele Rambler opines that the state of Georgia should have a lieutenant governor and accordingly nominates Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter, after having complimented him on introducing such a bill in the legislature.

The paragraph follows:

"Georgia ought to have a lieutenant governor, and it now looks like we will have one, and mainly through the efforts of Colonel Crawford Wheatley, of Americus. The Rambler nominates Colonel Wheatley for the first lieutenant governor, if the place is created. We think it is a very fine idea. He is a gentleman of ability and would fill the place with credit."

WOMAN IS POISONED BY EATING ICE CREAM

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

EAONTON, Ga., Aug. '—Mrs. Joseph Frederick Pogue, formerly Miss Nannie C. Reid, of this city had a narrow escape from death by ptomaine poisoning. Mrs. Pogue was stricken after eating ice cream, and rushed to a local hospital and only this week been able to be removed to her home, after more than ten days in confinement. Mrs. Pogue's home for the past two years has been in Chester, S. C. She is a member of the well known Reid family of this county.

FORMER MINISTER TO PARAGUAY FOUND DEAD

(By Associated Press.)

LA CROSSE, Wis., Aug. 9.—William Finch, United States minister to Paraguay and Uruguay from 1897 to 1905, and for many years publisher of the La Crosse Republican and Leader, was found dead in a bath room of his residence here this afternoon. Death is thought to have been due to apoplexy. Mr. Finch was 68 years old.

Farms for Sale

After the fall crops are picked or harvested there are many farmers that will be ready to sell or rent their farms, as they have been contemplating moving to the city, so that their sons and daughters can have the advantages of a city education and at the same time live at home.

If you are looking for a farm, now is the time to run your Journal Want Ad for such a place and get in ahead of the other fellow.

The farmer, too, who intends to sell his place this fall can get a good purchaser by using the Journal Want Columns.

Put your want Ads in The Journal in August and your farm will be sold before September.

Some Want Ads are inserted free in The Journal—see first Want Page. For charge ads, ask that they be sent for, or telephone them to Main 2000 or Atlanta 423.

Inequalities in Georgia Freight Rates Righted by Interstate Commission

Attorney Edgar Watkins Reviews for The Journal Far-reaching Decision of Interstate Commerce Commission, Which Lifts a Burden of Unjust Freight Rates From Many Georgia Towns and Means a Vast Deal for State's Common Business Interests

Edgar Watkins, of the firm of Watkins & Latimer, attorneys for the Carrollton chamber of commerce, in its appeal for fairer freight rates, has furnished The Journal, at its request, the following statement concerning the recently announced opinion of the interstate commerce commission on this important and far-reaching case:

"The decision of the interstate commerce commission in the case of the board of trade of Carrollton against the railroads of the southeast, is one of far-reaching importance.

"It is a step, and a long one, towards the successful culmination of the efforts began in Georgia in 1906, to secure an equitable system of rates in this state.

"When the Georgia commission decided some years ago that Georgia was entitled to reasonable rates from the ports and enforced such rates, the first important step was taken. With that decision rising intrastate rates and the decision in the Carrollton case requiring equitable intrastate rates, the rate situation in Georgia is adjusted so that every community in Georgia may have the advantages of its location without unjust discrimination in favor of competing communities.

"For years the railroads in the southeast have adopted what they call the 'basing point system' of rate making, by which certain points are selected, sometimes arbitrarily upon which points rates to the surrounding territory are based.

"To illustrate: The rate from Baltimore to Cedartown is, on first class or 1st class, one hundred, Cedartown being a basing point, and Carrollton was charged an arbitrary over Cedartown of 27 cents a hundred, although the freight might have moved from Baltimore to Cedartown through Carrollton.

"In our complaint we defined the basing point system, which the commission quotes in its opinion: 'Fourteenth paragraph of complainants' petition is as follows: 'That the defendants have long adopted a system of rate making in Georgia known as the "basing point system," by which they concede to certain towns a particular rate and to other towns they charge a higher rate without regard to distance from the shipping point.'

"The system of basing points has some reason to support it when a port or a large commercial center like Atlanta is made a basing point, but even in those cases the arbitrary over the basing point should have a fair relation to the total distance the freight is hauled.

Mr. Commissioner Clements, who delivered the opinion in the Carrollton case, said:

"That the basing-point system of rate making does not now demand that joint through rates over long distances to local or non-competitive points should be made by adding to basing-point rates either the full locals or high differentials.

"That, in the making of joint through rates on long-distance traffic to local or non-competitive points, the differentials above the rates to the basing points should bear some reasonable relation to the total distances involved. In order that the rates to the local points may be just and to avoid subjecting such local points to prejudice or disadvantage that is undue."

The commission does not now abolish basing points, but it does hold that the rates charged to towns other than basing points shall no longer be arbitraries, but must have reasonable relation to distance. The solution is conservative and wise, and points the way to a closer approximation to rates based on the principle that the greater the distance freight moves, the greater the actual rate, though the rate per mile lessens with distance.

The reduction to Carrollton is required to be made by November 1, and amounts to approximately ten per cent on the total former rates.

This reduction will not mean a net loss to the carriers, as it will tend to build up business. It does mean that Carrollton, which has been handicapped in the past, will now have an approximately fair field for business and growth.

The benefit to Carrollton is largely more than the mere decrease in rates. Discrimination is much more injurious than high rates; though reasonable rates, as well as equality in rates, are required by the law and this decision.

The advantage is not to Carrollton alone; the people who are served by Carrollton will be greatly benefitted. Nor is the benefit confined alone to Carrollton and the territory served by that growing town. The principle established in this decision opens that equality of opportunity will be open to all the communities in Georgia, and their progress will be unhampered and without artificial restriction or unjust, dangerous and arbitrary stimulation.

THREE DEATHS IN KANSAS RESULT FROM HEAT WAVE

Mercury Registered 108 Saturday, but Forecaster Promises Relief Sunday

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—Relief from the temperatures of 100 degrees and higher that have prevailed over Kansas and in most parts of Missouri and Oklahoma the last ten days, was promised by the local weather forecaster tonight. He said thunderstowers were coming and his prediction applied especially to Kansas, which has been in the grip of a drouth since early in June.

Today's weather reports were another round of high temperatures. In Kansas the mercury again climbed above the century mark, registering this in some parts of the state registered as high as 108.

Three deaths due to heat were reported in Kansas today. Few prostrations occurred because farmers and other outside workers have suspended operations. Engineers are doing the work that is absolutely necessary, such as providing feed and water for livestock and digging cisterns and pipe lines to conserve the water on hand.

Poultry raisers have suffered severely from the drouth on account of the shortage of feed and water. Chickens are being rushed to market and sold at a sacrifice. One firm at Leavenworth sold 20,000 pounds of poultry this week and will make another similar shipment in a few days. Dealers say the country districts will sell practically all their poultry within the next week if present conditions continue.

At Leavenworth a temperature of 108 was reached today. Practically all streams in Leavenworth county are dry and threshing operations have been abandoned on account of the water shortage.

SHERIFF FEARS VIOLENCE; SPIRITS PRISONER AWAY

Harry Stone, Charged With Attacking Nine-Year Girl In Safe Keeping

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 9.—Fearing violence might be attempted, Sheriff Tabler tonight rushed Harry Stone, charged with attacking a 9-year-old girl in an automobile under guard of deputies to Hancock, where the prisoner was placed on a train and taken to the state penitentiary at Moundsville for safe keeping.

Stone was arrested Friday at Front Royal, Va., and brought here. While a group of curious persons have stationed themselves around the prison for the last two days, the sheriff did not anticipate trouble until tonight, when it was rumored that something serious might happen.

TO PICTURE DARKEY ON BIG PIPE ORGAN

Charles A. Sheldon Will Play "Old Folks at Home" This Afternoon

The free concert at the auditorium this afternoon will be devoted principally to light music appropriate to summer time, and the visiting merchants and manufacturers will be the special guests of the occasion. Charles A. Sheldon will be the organist.

A remarkable series of variations on the melody, "Old Folks at Home," will be the special feature of the program. This will be a descriptive number of the various phases of the character of the traditional southern darkey. The four movements are introduced by the delightfully tranquil theme, with harp effect, followed by the echo organ and the tremendous pedal passages carrying a massive variation and demanding the entire force of the grand organ.

The complete program is as follows:

Lefebure-Wely—Offertoire in F.

Ethelbert Nevin—"Day in Venice."

Flagler—American, varia ions "Old Folks at Home."

Wagner—Prelude to Lohengrin. This prelude of the opera takes for its subject the descent of the Holy Grail, which, at the close, is to the whole composition. It is first announced in the mysterious strings, then taken up by the other instruments reaching a glorious climax; afterwards dying away gradually, fading into silence in the dim distance.

Harry Rowe Shelley—"Marche Militaire."

The auditorium holds over 6,000 people, and everybody is cordially invited to be present. The concert begins at 4 o'clock.

PREDICT STREET CAR STRIKE IN DETROIT

(By Associated Press.)

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 9.—Officers of the Detroit Street Carmen's union today predicted that the city tomorrow would be without street car service. As hundreds of motormen and conductors packed the local hall to attend a mass meeting which was expected to last until Sunday morning, it was stated that no reply had been received from the Detroit United Railway in response to the demand of the company's employes for a higher wage scale and shorter hours.

One of the so-called strike leaders declared that a secret conference of carmen today showed that the sentiment of the employes was distinctly against spending more time in attempting to arbitrate their differences with their employers.

Several addresses were made at the mass meeting by members of the union. Because many carmen would not completely hear the words until midnight it was decided to wait until they reached the hall before bringing the issue to a vote.

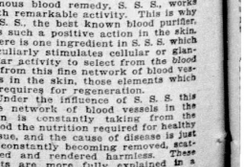
Hooray! Blood Free of Impurities

Eczema Gone! Acne, Tetter, Rash, Pimples, Carbuncles, Boils—Banished!



The under layer of skin is a fine network of tiny blood vessels in which the famous blood remedy, S. S. S., works with remarkable activity. This is why S. S. S. is the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which particularly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine network of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue, and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 190 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin afflictions.

WIN A PRIZE

We believe we have the best chewing gum in the world—Brittain's Golden Gum—and we want to prove it by widespread introduction. Instead of the usual display forms of advertising, we have adopted this extraordinary plan, which will gladly distribute $100,000 worth of rewards to those who answer this advertisement, if our conditions are complied with.

ARE YOU ONE? We will cut the 12 names of cities of America and Europe. For example, the first city is ROME—what are the others? Write them on a postcard or paper, add your name and full postal address, send to us. If you are correct, we will award you a prize and you may obtain the reward by simple service for us such as we will explain to you. We shall award Diadem, Pearl, etc. We do not ask for a cent of your money now or later, but if you like, you can send a two-cent stamp for 2 packages of Brittain's Golden Gum for a present trial. Solve it yourself how great it really is. Make no mistake, this is a genuine offer. Study out the names of cities and the sooner you answer, the more valuable will your reward be. Address:

HOSPITAL PLANNED FOR CRIPPLED AND MAIMED CHILDREN

Citizens, Backed by Physicians of State, Urged Need of Provision of This Kind. Outline of Plan

704 LITTLE VICTIMS NEED THIS ATTENTION

Provision Would Be Made for Furnishing Appliances—Doctors Would Give Their Expert Services Free

In the state of Georgia by actual count there are 704 children who remain crippled and helpless for the lack of funds whereby to secure the attention of modern science. Seven hundred and four little girls and boys with crooked legs, curved backs, dislocated bones, and other ailments which condemn them to a life of pain and inactivity while other children are running and playing merrily in the sunshine.

These seven hundred and four children do not represent all who are crippled and helpless. They are merely the ones that physicians know about because the cases have come to their attention. They are the ones whom mothers and fathers watch with tearful eyes and bitter hearts, knowing that there is remedy for their weakness were there enough money in the family purse to secure needed attention for the little ones.

A large number of them have been to Atlanta to ask for examination by expert physicians, and having found out what is needed to effect a cure have been forced to turn their faces homeward again for lack of money.

For even when kindly physicians have offered their services free, the cost of hospital service has been prohibitive to these unfortunate ones, $15 a week according to a physician who has specialized in making crippled children well, being the lowest amount for which the children can enter a hospital here.

This crying need of the crippled children of the state has brought about a movement to establish a hospital for needy cripple children; and, if the effort is successful, such a hospital will be in operation soon in Atlanta.

Frank Inman, Clark Howell, J. M. Stephens, Joseph McCord, Walter Rich, Charles H. Black and others have become interested in the matter and with several other Atlantians will form the board of trustees of the hospital.

The plan is to make the hospital absolutely free to all crippled children who can not pay for the straightening of their little limbs; and whatever money is raised will be a maintenance fund for the hospital only. Physicians have agreed to give their services free, and a competent corps of assistants will aid in the work.

NEED IS APPARENT.

The need for such a hospital has been apparent to every one who comes in touch with such cases for a long time. A number of years ago the number of crippled children coming into one man's office for attention was only about one or two a month, while now from eight to ten a week drift in for attention. Nine times out of ten they are unable to pay for the needed treatment, though the physician has been willing to do his share for nothing. Braces, medicines and expert services for which there must be remuneration placed health and free activity beyond the reach of the little folk.

In the south there is at present no center for cases of such kind, the experts along those lines assembling for the most part in large cities like New York, but the number of children who have been counted as helpless cripples shows the need of some place where they may be cured, Atlanta being admirably suited to the location of such a hospital, and the majority of physicians consulted have suggested this city.

The state cares for the blind, the insane and the delinquent; but no provision has been made for the cripples, and there are many who think that the duty lies with kind-hearted, public-spirited citizens.

LETTERS SENT OUT.

When the plan was broached, the men who are now interested wanted to know if there was really a need for such a hospital, and 3,000 letters were sent out to physicians all over the state asking for information as to the number of cripple children known to them who would be benefited by such a hospital.

Only 350 letters have been received in answer, but from these it was learned that 704 children were known to the small percentage of men who took the trouble to answer the letters. Ninety-seven counties were heard from, and other letters are coming in still every now and then.

In Seattle, Wash., there is such a hospital of thirty beds, and in five years it has cared for only about 100 children. Still the project has proven its worth, and the hospital is being gladly maintained.

Georgia already more children than Seattle has treated in five years waiting for the chance to become straightened again and if a sufficient number of people will give their sympathy and co-operation, the hospital will soon be open to the little folk.

Those who are discussing the hospital believe that it will be an easy matter to find 200 men and women in the state who will be willing to pledge $100 a year for three years for the maintenance of such a hospital. A schedule of expense has been made out, and it has been estimated that such an amount of money would provide enough to run the hospital each year, allowing a slight margin for emergencies.

The fund will go to the equipment and current expenses of the hospital, and will not be used to pay salaries as physicians and surgeons have agreed to give their services free.

MAINTAIN BRACE SHOP.

In addition to the monthly expenses of the hospital, money will go to the maintenance of the brace shop which will be a part of the hospital, and where the braces and supports for the children would be made to measurement. Also there will be an expert masseuse to attend to the weak little bodies, and every needed phase of the work will be a part of the hospital service.

It is a plan that will commend itself to many, for children make the strongest appeal to the sympathies of those who have to aid others; and those who have suggested the movement feel sure of a ready response.

THE IDEAL COLLEGE

"All that mankind has done, thought, gained or been, it is lying as in magic preservation in the pages of books. They are the chosen possessions of men."

Brenau's literary aim is to introduce its students into the "aristocracy of learning"—to acquaint them, not formally and superficially, but intimately, with all that is best in the histories and literatures of the nations.

It strives to inculcate a thorough and sane knowledge; and, by encouraging an initiative inclination to study, endeavors to give a lasting taste for books that will lead to further study and broader culture after college days are over.

The splendidly arranged courses in the literary department are not only presented by the ablest teachers, but are supplemented by an excellent library of many thousand books on divers subjects.

As the reading room is as ideal place for study and reading most of the student body soon acquire the "library habit," and their pleasant and constant association with the "precious thought," and souls of great men, leads them to new avenues of thought; it unconsciously forms literary taste and discrimination; it develops a genuine liking for literary study; it gradually accomplishes the fulfillment of Brenau's literary purpose; it brings the student into the Inner Circle of Literature and History.

Georgia Cow Pays 8 Per Cent on $3,835.50

There is a cow on the dairy farm at the State College of Agriculture, at Athens, Ga., which has just paid 8 per cent on an investment of $3,-835.50 in about eleven months. This five-year-old registered Jersey cow, Georgia bred, is also Georgia fed—her principal foodstuff being cotton seed meal.

Her record is considered so remarkable as an evidence of what can be done in Georgia, along this line of neglected opportunity that the Country Gentleman in its current issue, carries a picture of this cow and a half page article about her record, and that of other dairy cows, prepared by Prof. Milton P. Jarnigan of the faculty of the State College of Agriculture.

This article is all the more interesting by reason of the splendid showing made through the use of cotton seed meal as feedstuff for dairy cows.

In ten months and twenty-one days the cow produced 7,215.1 pounds of milk which sold at 40 cents a gallon. This amounted to $335.58. Her calf was sold for $50 and manure for $30, making a total income of $415.58. The cost of fed and pasturage was $58.74 and the cost of labor incident to her keep was $50, so that the total cost for the time was $108.74, leaving a net profit of $306.84, which is 8 per cent on $3,835.50.

GOV. SULZER IS SILENT; IMPEACHMENT TALKED OF

Legislature Meets Monday Night and All Members Are Urged to Attend

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 9.—No statement was forthcoming from Governor Sulzer today concerning the revelations made by the Frawley legislative committee. The governor remained at the executive mansion during the forenoon and in the afternoon left with Mrs. Sulzer for a motor trip into the country. He was expected back some time tonight.

Although the governor has given no intimation as to when he may issue a statement in explanation of his campaign contributions and stock transactions, his friends predict he will be heard from next week. Chester G. Platt, the governor's secretary, said the executive would have nothing to say until the committee had completed its work. As senator Frawley has indicated that the committee has gone far enough into the governor's affairs, a statement is looked for soon.

LEGISLATURE MEETS.

The legislature will meet Monday night and all members have been notified to be present.

Lewis A. Sarocky, former confidential secretary to the governor, who refused to testify concerning campaign contributions of the executive, may be summoned before the bar of the house to explain his position. He has told his friends he will go to jail rather than divulge information concerning the executive.

The Frawley committee is expected to meet prior to the legislative session Monday and may decide to present a report which will set in motion the machinery for the impeachment of the governor. If such action is taken the matter will be presented to the assembly, the body which formulated the impeachment.

A committee will consider any charges and a proposed impeachment must have the votes of a majority of the assembly before it can be laid before the senate and the court of appeals, which sit as a court of impeachment.

METHOD OF IMPEACHING.

Removal by impeachment requires concurrence of two-thirds of the members present. The senate at the beginning of the year was composed of thirty-two Democrats, sixteen Republicans, one Independent Democrat, one Progressive Republican and one Progressive. The Democrats lost Senator Roosevelt, who resigned when appointed assistant secretary of the navy, and Senator Stilwell, who was convicted of soliciting a bribe. The Progressive senator, Salant, was unseated and a Democrat took his place.

There are seven elected judges of the court of appeals. All except one, Judge Werner, are Democrats. This gives the Democrats thirty-seven, one less than two-thirds of the full membership.

There is much speculation as to what the attitude of the Republicans will be in event of an attempt to impeach the executive. Senator Elon R. Brown, minority leader, is a member of the Frawley committee, but has not attended its sessions. Governor Sulzer is said to have secured counsel.

At the capitol today there was a suggestion that the governor might avoid further action by the legislature by resigning.

His friends asserted he had no such intention.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

Alcazar—The Three Pecks, two men and a charming girl, will begin an engagement at the Alcazar Monday, and it is believed they will prove one of the biggest drawing cards ever shown in that theater. Manager Jackson, of the Alcazar, laconically expresses it this way: "Three Pecks plus harmony and comedy equal one bushel of entertainment."

The Three Pecks come to Atlanta direct from the Orpheum theater, Louisville, Ky., and they feature harmony singing and refined comedy, the two men being comedians of the highest class and the lady a feature singer with few equals.

The Vaudette opens the week with "The Adventures of Jacques," a two-reel American featuring Warren Kerrigan. It is said that this photoplay is the most gorgeous picture ever put on by the American Film Co., and they have placed many good feature films before the public. In addition to the above feature a Keystone comedy, "The Riot," will be shown. Needless to state that this picture will be a riot of fun. Jack Lamy and Joe Coombs complete the bill.

Lynch's new theater offers Miss Dorothy Hays, the double-voiced singer, as a special attraction for the week. Miss Hays comes well recommended, is of pleasing personality and will certainly please the patrons of this theater. In addition to this attraction three first-class motion pictures will be shown.

The Savoy for Monday offers "For the Honor of Lady Beaumont," a two-reel Eclair. From the start to the finish of this picture every part is full of action. Brilliant court scenes, adventure, intrigue and love, of course is the unscrupulous soldier of fortune, the titled lady, with all her vanity, in love with the titled Englishman, and the Indian maid in the Canadian wilds, who befriends the Englishman and eventually becomes his wife. To watch these complications unravel into a beautiful drama will be your opportunity Monday.

The Montgomery opens the week with "The Flight of the Crow," an intense, absorbing drama with an exceptional plot dealing with high society and the hobo fraternity of the "underworld." Crow, a notorious yeggman, furnishes action during the entire two reels. A Pathe Weekly of Current Events will also be shown.

MONTGOMERY MAN DEMONSTRATES NEW RAILROAD INVENTION HERE

Prominent Men of Atlanta and Montgomery Gathered at Oakland City to See Demonstration of New Automatic Switch Invented by Captain M. L. Shepard—Chamber of Commerce Represented

Two hundred leading citizens of Atlanta and Montgomery gathered at Oakland City Saturday afternoon to witness the demonstration of an automatic switch which its inventor expects will save the railroads of the United States thousands of dollars a year and do away with annual fatalities amounting to 15,000 lives.

Its inventor, Captain M. L. Shepherd, explained the operation of the switch to the crowd.

In the crowd was Charles A. Wickersham, president of the Atlanta and West Point railroad; members of the Business Men's league of Montgomery, of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, and many other prominent citizens of both cities.

Mr. Shepherd's invention, as explained Saturday afternoon, does away with the open switch, that ghastly feature of railroading which reaps a death toll that mounts into the thousands year by year. Wreck after wreck has been blamed on the open switch.

As President Wickersham himself put it, "The trainman seldom forgets to open the switch, but very often forgets to close it."

The Shepherd switch is so constructed that when the last car on a train passes through the open switch, it automatically closes. It is simple in its operation, can be attached to all switches now in use.

Its inventor, Captain Shepherd, is a native of Alabama and an old railroad man. For the last three years he has worked on the switch problem, finally evolving the automatic closed switch.

He chose Atlanta as the place to hold its first public demonstration. A local firm manufactured one from his model and it was placed on a spur track of the Atlanta and West Point railroad.

Saturday about 50 prominent men of Montgomery came to Atlanta. In the party were T. G. Salter, president of the Business Men's league; Bruce Kennedy, its secretary; Nathan Lobman, S. L. Winter, E. G. Branch, secretary of the Shepherd Automatic Switch company; Dr. J. C. Stough, Louis Steiner, Dr. W. J. Hannah, Dr. T. J. Stough, W. L. Shepherd, W. N. Cox, C. T. Nelson.

All were present at the test, together with W. T. Winn, representing the Atlanta chamber of commerce; Mr. Wickersham, Trainmaster Ed L. McGee and Judge John R. Wilkinson. There were also several ladies present.

Formal exercises were held, begun when J. L. Holloway, a Montgomery attorney, introduced Captain Shepherd.

While Captain Shepherd explained the switch an active demonstration was made with a monster engine and a box car, under charge of Conductor Heard.

Mr. Kennedy spoke in behalf of the Montgomery people, explaining that while Montgomery fathered the inventor of the switch, she was not ashamed to give Atlanta the credit for the hustle and enterprise which caused the members of the company to choose this city as the place to introduce the switch to the world. He congratulated both cities on the fact that they clasped hands in this important invention which was expected to prove the greatest benefit to humanity since the invention of steam.

At the conclusion of his speech, Mr. Halloway presented Captain Shepherd a silver loving cup appropriately inscribed. In his speech Mr. Halloway linkd the names of Capt. Shepherd with those of Watts, Fulton and Stevenson.

Mr. Winn spoke on behalf of Atlanta, declaring that as a member of the industrial and statistics committee of the chamber of commerce that he could say that that body would take an active interest in the propagation of the Shepherd switch.

PHYSICIAN IS HELD FOLLOWING GIRL'S DEATH

Dr. Jacob Hall Now Faces Two Manslaughter Cases

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—Dr. Jacob Hall, under $2,000 bond to answer to a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death by an operation of Met Zook, the 18-year-old high school girl whose case involved a dozen young men, was arraigned again today.

He was released pending investigation in connection with a similar operation alleged to have been performed without fatal results upon a Kansas City young woman two years ago.

CARHOLLTON BOY IS KILLED UNDER AUTO

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CARROLLTON, Ga., Aug. 9.—Earl Daniel, son of J. R. Daniel, was run down and killed by an automobile this afternoon on Alabama street. The car was driven by Jessie Benford, son of Henry Benford, who lives at Bowden in this county. The Daniel boy died almost instantly.

The front and rear wheels of the car passed over his body and head, crushing his skull.

JOURNAL WANT AD Horoscope

AUGUST 11

A woman born on this date must be careful in the selection of the man she is to marry. Her most congenial companion will be found under Aries.

This sign governs all the birthdates from March 21 to April 19. It gives the strongest characteristics in the Zodiac and the union of a Leo woman and an Aries man is bound to be harmonious.

An Aries man will always amass wealth and as Leo women are extravagant and fond of show, she will be content with an Aries husband.

While having a tendency to be fickle and flirtatious before marriage, a Leo woman will settle down after marriage to be the best of wives and mothers.

Domestics will do well to watch the Journal Want ads opportunities this week. Lost articles will be found through the Journal Ad Columns and business in all lines will show decided improvement.

Some Want Ads are inserted free in The Journal—see first Want Page. For charge ads, ask that they be sent for, or telephone them to Main 2000 or Atlanta 423.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Proper Houses For Chickens In The South

MY EXPERIENCE is that not one house in one hundred is deep enough. In other words most buildings are too narrow that when the chickens are confined inside of them during at least one-third of the year in bad weather during the winter months the roosts are placed near the front where a draught blows directly on them and in sleeping at night they are not comfortable, and you can not get results from hens that do not get a good night's rest and have to sleep uncomfortable either summer or winter. The same thing applies during the summer months. Most poultry buildings will eventually be erected with a ventilating roost that can be placed up close to the front of the building where they can get sufficient fresh air during the hot nights of summer, and roost comfortable in the rear of the building on their regular roost during the winter months. Chickens can not stand heat so wet as they can cold, and wind and cold damp draughts are fatal to chickens. Very often in the early spring and during winter we will have several days of southeast winds and whenever we have such you can expect more or less trouble of the worse kind to follow directly afterwards. Therefore, you should be prepared to take care of your chickens properly during this kind of weather.

The most satisfactory house I have used up to the present time has been a two-story house, 16 feet wide and 100 feet long, with the roosts and dropping boxes in the rear. This house is six feet high in the rear and nine feet high in front. It has a floor space of 32 feet by 200 feet when both floors are used, and I have been able to get better results from this building by keeping four hundred to five hundred hens in it and have done so with less work and less labor than by any method I have ever practiced up to the present time. There is only one mistake I think in this house. It should be four feet deeper and fifty feet longer which would enable me to keep twice as many hens in it with the same labor of looking after them as is required now under present conditions. The introduction and use of these houses to care for such large numbers of hens has solved the proposition of egg farming and profitable commercial poultry keeping, together with the discovery of raising so successfully in great quantities of alfalfa over the south. This cheap feed is the keynote of which will bring success and make poultry keeping profitable where heretofore it has been unprofitable.

With three to five houses 20 feet wide by 150 feet long and two stories high constructed as stated above any one can easily care fore one thousand hens in each of these buildings. say five thousand hens in five of these buildings and one man can easily take care of these five thousand hens, and then have time to do other things. With this number of White Leghorn pullets properly housed and fed with unlimited quantities of alfalfa hay one can easily expect fifty per cent of eggs annually if the birds have been bred from the proper laying strains and properly raised on free alfalfa range. These results can easily be obtained, and with one man producing 2,500 eggs or eight cases of eggs per day you can readily see that a great future is in store for the commercial poultry interest of our country. Of course the conditions are the most important ones and are the things that convert the money after you have raised the young fowls.

The housing of young chickens and bringing them from the egg to maturity is a more serious proposition and harder one to solve than properly housing and getting the eggs after the chickens are grown. No one can ever expect to raise profitably young chicks unless they have been fed well, kept free from insects and have an unlimited range with plenty grass (alfalfa preferred) and are bred from the right kind of parent stock. A chicken is a chicken 'tis true, but the blood lines and proper raising means all to you, that is if in a period of two or three years old and as good as they grow. Have to sell at once. See 85c each. 451 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.

POULTRY FEED

PROGRESSIVE LIVE STOCK AND POULTRY FARM.

J. N. & J. H. McLENDON, Owners.
Dawson, Ga., Oct. 26, 1912.

Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed Co.,
Memphis, Tenn.
Gentlemen:

Please make us a price on Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed, the Egg Producer.

For awhile we were able to buy your feed from our wholesale grocer here, but they are out of it about half of the time. I have tried to get a supply from them the past week, but they do not always insist on selling me other feed which is not worth the bag it is put up in.

Kindly let me hear from you at once, as my chickens are not laying half as they did when I had your Aunt Patsy's Feed.

Respectfully,
J. H. McLendon.

Ask Your Dealer for Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, the Egg Producer.

THE PROPER WAY TO FEED HENS TO PRODUCE EGGS IN THE FALL OF THE YEAR

If you want your hens to lay during the Fall and Winter, read what the RIVERSIDE POULTRY FARM has to say:

RIVERSIDE POULTRY FARM,
STANDARD SINGLECOMB WHITE LEGHORNS.
Riverside, Ala., Oct. 31, 1912.

Mr. J. P. Gentry,
Memphis, Tenn.
Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter asking how we liked Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed, we have this to say, and you can judge for yourself: You remember the day you were here we had just mated a pen of 50 pullets, and it was agreed that we should try your feed on these birds first. We have been feeding these pullets on Aunt Patsy's poultry Feed (dry mash) in a hopper or trough. Have also fed Aunt Patsy's scratch feed in a deep litter so as to make them scratch for exercise. Yesterday we gathered 31 eggs from this pen, and the day before that, 25 eggs, a record breaker with us so far as eggs are concerned, from pullets in the early fall.

Since feeding Aunt Patsy all of my birds are in a thrifty, healthy condition, and I am so pleased with results that I have ordered another lot of the feed.

With personal regards from the writer, we are,
Yours truly,
Riverside Poultry Farm,
E. D. Kimball, Mgr.

ATLANTA NATIONAL BANK BLDG. PHONES 4234-4235.

INSPECT these today and see us tomorrow: 25, 47, 56, 60 Westwood avenue. No home in Atlanta has a prettier landscape spread before it than these do. The undulating contour of the park, freckled with a variety of modern bungalows which cap the crests of the numerous cliffs. The scattered trees lend their part to the portrait, and the encircling drives put the finishing touch on the scene. Leaving these one and two story homes, we pass around to West Ontario avenue, where we have three or four more new furnace-heated six-room homes that are only one block from the car and are built of only the best labor and material, and roundabout them we have plenty of elegant lots, 50x200, on which we are prepared to build to suit you. You should see this beautiful park anyway, so go look it over. Take the Hunter street to Copenhill car, go to No. 37 Copenhill and see this pretty elevated corner 8-room, furnace-heated home, with hard floors, furnace installed, charming fixtures, sashed-in flower porch, sleeping porch, best plumbing, solid brick foundation, all street improvements in and altogether a nice home. Will sell easy or take some small property, vacant lots or good notes as part pay. This is close to the new North Avenue School, one-half block of car and among good neighbors.

LOOK ALSO at No. 384 St. Charles avenue, a ten-room 1 1-2 story house, with two bathrooms complete; furnace installed, tile mantels, hard floors; has six rooms on ground floor. Ample space here to rent a floor out and have plenty left. Lot is 50x200; side drive. Can be had for $6,500. Would exchange.

FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE

GOOD BUYS

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen-acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

Auburn Avenue Investment

NEAR the corner of Jackson street, fronting 104 feet on Auburn avenue and running through the block 110 feet to Old Wheat street, we offer six houses, bringing in an income of $47 per month. Take into consideration the fact that this piece of property is near three good streets, runs through the block and has a steady, monthly income of $57. These facts assure a steady enhancement in value, the property in the meanwhile bringing in substantial income. Price, $9,000. Terms.

High-Class Building Lots

BELOW we offer several choice building lots in unsurpassed neighborhoods. A look at any of these will convince you of their desirability and also of the scarcity of similar ones:

ON PEACHTREE CIRCLE, just off Peachtree and Fifteenth streets, fronting the wide plaza formed by three streets and facing some of Atlanta's handsome homes, we offer a lot 100x254 feet; price $11,500.

FACING Piedmont Park, we offer several lots, 67x200 feet, at $115 per foot.

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, just beyond the Driving club, facing east, we offer a 60-foot lot with plenty of trees. This lot has an ample depth of 160 feet. Price $5,750.

$175 FRONT FOOT, absolutely the best corner on north side, two car lines, all thoroughfares and two car lines. There is nothing in Atlanta which has the come out and future of this lot. A certain and sure money-maker. $6,000 cash, balance easy.

$10,000—FOUR APARTMENTS, six rooms each, close in, always rented, at $100. This is 12 per cent on your money; better than bonds; no janitor, no cook or light bill.

$5,500—4 ACRES—7-room house, servant's house, stable, etc., in fine oak grove just off East Lake drive, 3 acres fine, rich land, can make enough on this place to pay for it. $700 cash, balance yearly.

$5,000—Brand-new six-room bungalow, splendid north side street near Ponce de Leon avenue; lot 50x180, furnace heat; hardwood floors, beautiful fixtures; fast growing section. Buy now and reap the benefit of enhancement in values. Reasonable terms.

$4,500—Beautiful six-room bungalow, Greenwich street, West End, lot 208 feet deep; furnace heat, cabinet mantels; all other modern conveniences. $1,000 cash.

$2,500—Rents for $40 per month. Splendid seven-room home, north side, near Jackson st. Terms within your reach, small monthly payments at $30 per month. Will exchange equity for vacant lot. To the home-seeker with limited means, this is a splendid opportunity.

$4,500—Good eight-room house, near North Boulevard; convenient to a good school, and car line; this is one of the best buys on the north side. Terms of $1,000 cash.

$3,000—Good six-room cottage, Inman Park, just off North Decatur car line; east front. Terms of $150 to $200 cash, balance $20 per month. This will go fast. Get busy.

$3,000—Close in north side, near Peachtree street, we offer a good nine-room, two-story house, that will rent for $45 per month. Cheapest piece of property in this vicinity. $7,500 cash.

$2,800—South Boulevard fronting Grant Park, has six large rooms, and is surrounded by good neighborhood with the beautiful park as a front yard. Lot is 55x250 feet. Terms; fine garden, fruit, grapes and berries, which is half of a living.

$4,500—Beautiful nine-room, two-story, furnace heated home on double car line, Grant Park section; price reduced from $5,000. No loan. This is located on Park avenue, the prettiest street in this community, and is worth the money.

$5,500—Pretty 6-room bungalow, one block off Ponce de Leon avenue; hardwood floors; everything nice and cozy, with the price and terms being the most attractive. Cut from $6,000 for quick sale, on terms of $500 cash. This will please you.

South Forsyth Street Corner Brings Something Over $300 a Front Foot—Mayson's Avenue and Moreland Avenue Homes Change Hands—West Pine Street Sale—Houses Leased During Week—Money Continues to Grow Easier

A few small sales were announced yesterday afternoon, and the prospects are for some fairly large transactions to be consummated during this week. One or two fairly large transactions have been closed, both of them being cash sales.

Money continues to show an easier tendency. Actual statistics show that loans are increasing, and several loans at 6 per cent on residence property were placed during the past week. Easier money always precedes an active market.

Easier money also means more building activity, and yesterday several permits were taken for residences to cost $5,000 and over. Three lots that changed hands yesterday will each be improved with a bungalow.

FORSYTH STREET SALE.

A South Forsyth street corner has changed hands. Mr. Galloway, of the Smith & Galloway agency, has sold what is known as the Sullivan, Drew, Johnson & Dunlap property at the southeast corner of South Forsyth and Brotherton streets.

The consideration was not named, but it was something over $15,000, or over $300 a front foot, reckoned by the Forsyth street frontage.

The lot has a frontage of 50 feet and a depth along Brotherton street of 158 feet. On it there is a double frame apartment.

OTHER SALES.

Van B. Smith, of the same agency, sold for C. L. DeFoor to Mrs. Mathilda Wood, a house and lot on Mayson's avenue, the lot being 100x330, taking as part payment a lot 50x150 on East Tenth street, adjoining the Tenth street school. The considerations were not named.

MORELAND AVENUE SALE.

The Martin-Ozburn Realty company has sold for C. W. Hackett to Dr. Henry A. Smith, 260 North Moreland avenue, a six-room bungalow on a lot 50x200. No consideration was named.

PINE STREET SALE.

The M. C. Kiser agency has sold for Bert Kiser to the Beulah Baptist church, colored, No. 81 West Pine street, which the church bought as a parsonage.

HOUSES LEASED.

During the past week Smith, Ewing & Rankin have leased the following houses: For T. S. Wilkins to W. S. Brooks, 148 West North avenue, for $100 per month; for Mrs. A. F. Noyes to Mrs. O. W. Thompson, 53 West Baker street for $85 per month; for C. Allen to Mrs. Robert Sugg, 168 and 170 Ivy street for $110 per month; for F. H. Orem to Mrs. Black 28 and 32 East North avenue, for $80 per month; for W. H. George to Mrs. E. S. Walsh, 35 West North avenue for $85 per month; for J. W. Grove to Mrs. Preston Vaughan, 19 West North avenue for $85 per month; for Mrs. E. M. Mitchell to Miss Shockley, 47 West North Jackson street for $60 per month; for Mrs. M. J. Sanford to T. A. Brown, 125 East North avenue for $40 per month; for W. H. Hoyt to Mrs. L. S. Menkee, 48 West End avenue for $45 per month; for I. Silverman to Mrs. L. A. Carter, 240 Washington street, for $40 per month; for J. P. Hunter to S. C. Glass, 386 Spring street for $32 per month; for Mrs. Ella Hudson to W. Wills, 433 Luckie street for $30 per month; for Mrs. E. M. Dunning to Mrs. Green, 105 Rawson street for $27 per month; for Mrs. J. J. Kaesser to Mr. Southwick a flat at 30 West Peachtree street for $25 per month, and for V. H. Allen an apartment in the Hall at $60 per month, and for P. Breitenbucher to Miss Winifred Widner, a store room at 143 Peachtree street for $125 per month.

DECATUR DEVELOPMENT.

Two new brick business buildings are now under construction in Decatur. One is a two-story affair to be occupied by George Brothers with a wholesale and retail department store. The walls for the first floor are up and work is progressing rapidly.

The other building is being erected by W. A. Ozmer, contractor for Mrs. H. E. Goddard, and will be occupied by the Johnson Hardware company which will move from Conyers to Decatur on October 1. It will be one story with plate glass front. Both of these buildings are on McDonough street.

The passenger and freight depot of the Georgia railroad at Decatur is being enlarged and remodeled by the road. Extensive improvements will also be made in the grounds surrounding the depot. Tile walks and permanent driveways will be laid greatly improving the general appearance of the railroad's property.

Rapidly increasing business has necessitated these improvements and they have been urged by the Decatur board of trade for a long time.

The Hopkins Drug company, of Decatur, has been bought by Edwin Davis to Henry C. Jordan, of Tucker, Georgia. Mr. Jordan has a dairy near Tucker and intends to make a specialty of ice cream at his soda fount in this store.

Mr. Davis will not leave Decatur. His plans for the future are not definite but he will probably enter some other line of business there.

Gives Up Responsible Business Connection to Give Attention to Realty Business

R. Bolling Hickson, who has been connected with F. W. King & Co.' in the wholesale candy business for the past eighteen years, for several years past as manager of the Atlanta branch, has resigned from that position and has joined the sales force of the Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency.

Mr. Hickson for the past ten years has been handling real estate and has found it to his advantage to give up the candy business and devote his entire attention to the real estate business now.

Mr. Hickson has many friends here, both in general and in the real estate business who will be interested in this announcement.

Profit Taking on an Immense Scale Brought Backset in Corn

Sellers of Corn Were Influenced by an Official Forecast That the Drouth in Southwest Would Be Broken by Monday

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Profit taking on an immense scale by owners of corn brought about a backset in prices today after an opening bulge due largely to the government report. The market closed nervous at a range 1-2c lower to 1-8 up compared with last night. Wheat finished 1-4 to 1-4@3-8 down, oats 5-8@3-4 to 3-4 and provisions showing a decline of 5 to 25 points.

Sellers of corn were influenced in a great degree by an official forecast that the drouth in the southwest would be at least partially broken before Monday. On the other hand, the continued excessive heat during the last twenty-four hours was joined with the government report in not only producing an excited advance at the outset but in furnishing a basis later that at a certain limits gave support to the huge quantities of corn sold out.

Belief that all the damage actually done so far to the corn crop had been discounted by previous advances in the market formed a decided factor today in shaping the course of prices. This opinion made itself especially manifest after September had been rushed to 73 cents, a new high point for the season. There was talk, however, that the September market was congested and might yet be subjected to an uncomfortable squeeze.

Bearish estimates from Washington and beneficial rains in the spring crop region weakened wheat. Another element was selling bulls was the news that the stock on hand at Kansas City had reached the largest total ever known. The decline was checked by active buying by commission houses with resting orders that seemed to be without limit as to amount. Primary receipts of wheat today were 1,675,000 bushels; a year ago 1,332,000 bushels. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equaled 366,000 bushels.

Oats sagged under unloading resulting from the publication of the government report. Particular stress was put on the circumstances that farm reserves are the biggest on record.

Provisions gave way because of the break in coarse grain. Free selling by the cliques long more than offset the effect of higher prices for hogs.

THREE MACON MEN TO NATIONAL SHOOT

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MACON, Ga., Aug. 9.—Major W. Polhill Wheeler, Captain Charles C. Harrold and Sergeant A. S. Brown, of Macon, will go to Camp Perry, Ohio, to represent Macon and the state in the international rifle shoot. They will leave for Atlanta tomorrow night, in Atlanta they will join a party of militiamen who will participate in the shoot, and on Monday morning they will leave on a special train for Camp Perry.

Macon is represented in three divisions. Captain C. C. Harrold is team spotter at the shoot; Major Wheeler is coach of the principals in the rifle match, and Sergeant Brown is on the alternate team.

Major Wheeler has always shot splendidly at the international shoot and it is the belief of the Macon militiamen that he will maintain his usual good record. He created as the best shot that will go from Macon.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WILL PAY AUDITOR'S BILL

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MACON, Ga., Aug. 9.—The county commissioners this morning voted to pay the bill of $1,500 submitted by R. W. Jemison, the public accountant, for an audit of the books of the county officers. This bill was presented at a special meeting after long discussion and over the earnest objections of Commissioner Ike Winship.

He declared that the thought the bill excessive, was unalterably opposed to paying it, did not propose to be influenced in his action by an accountant employed in duties and was in favor of going to court over the claim.

The Aggregate Yield of 739,000,000 of Wheat Tops Last Year's Record, 730,000,000

The Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago, in its annual summary of crop returns, for 1913, says: "In all important crops of the country are above the average, ample for domestic use, and an abundance of breadstuffs for export. The enormous yields of the previous season have left an unusually large surplus of crops consumed on the farm, so that with larger yields in corn and oats the amount available is only slightly increased. The total, final, and almost constant rise in the yield per acre in the country, indicative of better farming methods. Ten and twenty years ago, the climatic conditions such as were prevailing over the greater part of the country this season would have resulted in almost a crop failure, but the retention in the work of the quality of soil which it is in need to assure a better return for the labor is showing its results in average yields in a year of unfavorable weather, of excessive and insufficient rainfall, which from time to time afflicted the country. Right from the center of the central part of the Mississippi valley are no longer attended by the abandoned acreage. This year let an admirable and effective showing of the better methods used on most of the farms, the reduction in the acreage of winter wheat, and of an oats crop that a few years ago was considered unprofitable.

The world's greatest need—wheat—the chief breadstuff of the civilized world and of more of the people of this nation, has not only been a good crop, but an exceptional one. The aggregate yield of the four crops last year's record of 720,000,000, and with 30,000,000 more bushels in sight than the visible supply of all farms at the beginning of the crop season, there is raised this year a total of 739,000,000 bu. at any time in recent years. There is over and above the domestic need, 175,000,000 bushels of wheat for export, a quantity somewhat in excess of the United States becomes a heavy exporter of wheat.

The corn crop is the greatest in the country that figure in the domestic use and which is raised in this country. The yield is that of oats. This year conditions were unfavorable to the fullest possible yield, but the large acreage and early high temperatures in the central states affecting the yield, so that the total crop does not exceed 3,000,000,000 bushels, as was the case before did the crop pass the billion bushels mark, and the yield per acre was the average.

Topping all our domestic crops is the native grain—corn. Four-fifths of the corn of the world is raised in the United States, and in one great crop of the country; its use as a food for man and for the production of many other of nature's grains. Production averaged 2,670,000,000 bushels in the past ten years, and is the staple production of the great West; nearly two-thirds of the total production of the country coming from the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas. Last year the country produced the largest crop in time of 3,125,000,000 bushels, exceeding 1911 by 600,000,000 bushels; of this amount over seven hundred million bushels, 30,000,000 bushels, which was 400,000,000 bushels over the 1911 crop.

The year's corn crop will not be a record by many hundred millions early in the month, before the burning temperatures swept through the Southwest and Ohio valley "gured on a repetition of the 1911 crop. The trade does not ignore the heavy damage that has occurred in Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, but the conditions of Missouri and Illinois since that time, when the "crop" ook at 3,000,000,000 bushels from the prospect, and reduced the estimate to 2,800,000,000. Conditions are good through northern Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and northward, and eastward from Ohio. The rest of the crop belt has had its share or rain of importance this summer. The crop was started under perfect soil conditions as to moisture and in February and March the smallest yield of years will be had, less than half the acreage of 1912 was planted, and corn was planted. August rains can be very helpful to the crop, but the damage has been done by the high temperatures occurred at the time the corn was bursting out of the top of the plant, so no recovery is to be expected.

The consolation of the western farmer is the large crop of 1913, and the enormous surplus over on the farm. On the March 1 report of the department of agriculture, the reserves, that is the corn still held on the farms, aggregated 1,280,000,000 or 400,000,000 more than at the same time in 1912, and the largest ever. If the farmers today are holding a very large, an unprecedented crop of corn.

The great rival of corn in weight and value is that of wheat. In the main the crop is the second largest on record with a total of 686,610,000 tons as against last year's magnificent yield of 730,000,000 bushels. The spring wheat yeat is valued on the farm at a billion dollars. The acreage planted in fall and spring wheat and the extreme cold weather played havoc with all agricultural operations.

Cotton promises at this period of the year to be a great crop, in view of last year's yield and ranking next to the prodigious yield of two years ago. The indications are for 14,700,000 bales, compared with 13,700,000 last year. The extension of the acreage of cotton in Texas and Oklahoma has been the chief cause of the larger crops, another has been the remunerative prices of the past year, which makes the raising of this crop in any year a certain and profitable one.

Cotton, unlike other crops, is not harvested at one time; the ripened bolls are being picked while the bolls of new flowers are forming, and the size of the crop depends more largely upon the character of the fall than any other part of the year. The biggest crops have come unexpectedly. Though seasonable rains, warm sunshine and absence of early frosts, big crops have often come on the heels of what looked like disastrous midsummer.

Taking the country over the outturn of the crops may be summed up by sections:

Central West—Average returns only on oats and corn promise average; wheat, exceptionally large; hay fair. Fruits short on account of dry area in the Ohio valley.

North Central States—Excellent in all crops, save lighter spring wheat yields on the western border. Corn the most flattering prospect in years; oats promising more than normal yield. Potatoes and other vegetables excellent.

Western States—Drouth conditions impaired oats yield and causing considerable damage to corn. Wheat yield above normal, exceptional results, save in the western third of Kansas and Nebraska. Potatoes very badly hurt, and much under average yield indicated in the big productive region of the Kaw valley.

South Atlantic and Gulf States east of the Mississippi—Excellent crops of all kinds; cotton promise the best in years. Corn somewhat below record yields on account of the early planting having been damaged by dry weather, late planting in good condition.

Southwest—Very dry for some time; wheat only large crop this far; oats good in Texas, poor elsewhere; corn suffering over the best part of the region, cotton needing rain to maintain present condition, but not badly hurt.

Pacific Coast—Poor southward on account of drouth and crops falling short of usual yield northward, and average yields of grain, with promise of good fruit yields.

Mountain States—Wheat chief commercial crop and good yields reported. On eastern slope dry farming not as successful as usual on account of light moisture during the winter. Irrigated lands giving large crops.

Northwestern States—Wheat hurt by poor start, but harvested in bucket; oats and excellent corn and hay crops, promising record yields.

R. G. DUNN & CO. REVIEW

R. G. Dunn & Co. review says: Confidence still holds sway in business circles. Optimism in the west and south has been tampered somewhat by the damage to corn, although it is the opinion that much of the loss in that cereal will be offset by the gain in wheat. Generally considered, agricultural prospects continue promising, and the purchasing power of the farming community will be enhanced by abundant harvests and remunerative prices. For the leading staples, the forecast reflects the usual summer quietness, yet encouraging reports outnumber those of an opposite character. Most stations indicate expansion, foreign commerce being larger than a year ago and railroad earnings for July exceeding 1912.

"A slight increase in the volume of new orders is apparent in iron and steel, but consumers are buying cautiously. Preparations are being made for fall business in dry goods.

"Failures this week numbered 265 in the United States, against 255 last year, and 31 in Canada, compared with 20 a year ago."

Cattle receipts fair with better assortment this week than previous weeks. Quite a few Tennessee cattle were on the market; one car of 1,200-lb. steers shipped in from Warner, Tenn., that in a class to themselves and were sold promptly to the packers at $6.50, which was the top price of the week. These were two-year-old steers and fat, and the price was not considered too high for them. This one car only goes to show that Atlanta is like other markets; they will pay strictly for good stuff. Medium grade cows and heifers were fairly plentiful and prices ruled steady. Good cows sell from $4.50 up, fat and ragged bunches in the pens, although there is always a ready market for this class. Prices vary according to flesh and condition.

Prospects for Better Weather in Southwest Caused Break in Cotton

Official Forecast for Unsettled and Showery Weather in West Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas Caused Heavy Selling

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Prospects for better weather in the southwest caused a sharp decline in the cotton market today with prices selling into new low ground for the movement. Covering caused slight rallies in the late trading, and the closing tone was steady, but last prices were 13 to 20 points net lower.

Local map readers noted the presence of a broadening low barometer over the southwest and private predictions of showers based on this development were confirmed by the official forecasts which called for unsettled and showery weather in West Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, with increasing cloudiness for east Texas. Moreover heavy rains were reported in western Louisiana which seemed to be pretty near the drouthy section, the map confirmed yesterday's private reports of rain at Galveston and showers were shown at a couple of points in the Texas Panhandle. On the whole, consequently, a more favorable opinion prevailed as to southwestern prospects, and recent buyers on drouth and deterioration reports were credited with selling actively this morning.

The Liverpool market showed no special feature, but the cables were a shade lower than due if anything, and the local opening was steady at an advance of 5 points on August, but generally 6 to 8 points lower.

There was some buying attributed to trade interests at the start, as well as scattered covering of the sort noted yesterday afternoon but the market quickly weakened and during the middle of the morning sold 13 points net lower on August and from 19 to 22 points below the closing prices of yesterday on new crop positions. December contracts touched 10.92 or a couple of points under the lowest price of last Tuesday, while January broke to 10.91 or even with the low level of last April, and the lowest price reached since that position sold at 11.67 during the middle of June. Realizing by recent sellers was very heavy at the decline, but the market developed nervous and unsettled during the entire morning.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

George F. Jones & Son: We expect prices to do better until closing of the ginning reports.

Norden & Co.: We believe that the most reasonable course of action is to make use of fluctuations that may be caused by daily weather conditions and the technical position of the market.

Logan & Bryan: Weather conditions in Texas and Oklahoma are the dominating influences, and should that section receive beneficial moisture, long range of prices will doubtless be seen.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 9.—Liverpool is very disappointing with futures 2 to 3 points lower than due; spot sales 6,000, with sales 5,000 bales. Developments overnight were in favor of buying, with precipitation reported coming on the western edge of the drouth in north Louisiana over Sunday. The map shows increasing cloudiness in Texas and some precipitation in the northwest and southeast portions.

Indications are for continued partly cloudy weather in the eastern half with scattered showers. It will become cooler in the northwestern quarter of the belt.

The market opened about 5 points lower, but broke quickly 10@11, on the first governmental forecast confirmed private advices of rain prospects over Sunday in the western states and Oklahoma.

Market prospects next week depend principally on the amount of rainfall in the western states. The half monthly condition forecasts by the usual private authorities and Dallas, etc., are expected to show a decline, as the rains came too late to affect the condition figures.

WEEKLY COTTON REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The cotton market has shown continued nervousness and irregularity during the past week. The advance on the government crop report of last Friday, was more than lost on reports of rain in the southwest over Sunday, but the weekly weather report of Tuesday claimed that both Texas and Oklahoma were still drouthy and prices have since recovered part of their loss. Business, however, has remained very quiet. There has been nothing selling here, supposedly against the new crop, but offerings of this sort have been in no great volume. On the other hand,

The Weather

Forecast till 7 p. m. Sunday:

Atlanta and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday.

Georgia: Generally fair tonight and Sunday.

Alabama: Fair tonight and Sunday.

WILLIS I. MILHAM, Meteorologist in Charge.

The area of showery conditions in the cotton belt has moved westward to the central gulf states, rain having been reported as far south as Shreveport and Galveston. The presence of a marked disturbance over Nebraska, in which the barometric pressure is below 20.6 inches, may be favorable for showers in the west.

The barometric depression central over western Nebraska will probably move eastward, passing over the lake region, the atmospheric pressure being high over the southeastern districts.

Temperatures continue high in the southwest and in the central Mississippi valley. The following stations reported 100 or more per cent or above on Friday: Abilene, Des Moines, Dodge City, Kansas City, Oklahoma and Leslie.

C. F. von HERRMANN, Section Director.

COTTON CROP SUMMARY

MEMPHIS, Aug. 9.—Rains of the Mississippi river the promise of the cotton crop is nothing short of brilliant. There are some complaints of weevils, but on the whole they are small, otherwise there is nothing to be said of the present condition that is not good, and the week's developments were almost wholly favorable. Generally rapid progress has been made in the two Carolinas recently, but with all the plant has taken on fruit well and is not overgrown, but is fruiting, rather susceptible to drouth of which, however, there is at present time no inclination.

West of the river there has been some deterioration occurring during the past week. The loss in Texas was in Oklahoma being sharp and in Louisiana and Arkansas slight. The rains of Sunday and Monday in Texas were generally light and not well distributed and the moisture thus supplied has been dissipated by hot grounds and extreme heat that has followed. Many sections of both Texas and Oklahoma have been without rainfall for more than five weeks and the plant has ceased growth and is shedding, while the forming and opening of bolls is reported. It is not too late, however, for soaking rains to be of vast benefit. The area in cotton west of the Mississippi river has been approximately 31 per cent of the total planting.

South Carolina—Abundant moisture and rapid plant growth with heavy fruiting. No kicks. Premature shedding of forms in places, but scarcely apparent in other localities.

Georgia—Plant flourishing and in probably highest condition of the season. Is well fruited, though rapid growth has caused forming elements wholly favorable.

Alabama—Weekly developments favorable. There is every prospect for big crop. Well-advanced, heavily fruited and in localities bolls opening rapidly.

Mississippi—Not a complaint save from weevil, which is doing little harm in places, but scarcely apparent in other localities. As a whole crop is in excellent condition.

Tennessee—Crop in fine condition, though a few localities are beginning to need rain. Heavily fruited and well cultivated.

Arkansas—Over portion of southern and western Arkansas crop is suffering for rain. Top is has forced plant to danger point and much shedding is reported. Elsewhere reports are good and state promises well.

Louisiana—Crop has barely maintained its condition. There was some relief from drouth for some years.

Oklahoma—Past week. Excessive temperatures have taken moisture from soil and in many places no rain has fallen for three weeks, the plant has made only moderate rainfall in that time. Plant shedding, wilting and forming poorly.

Texas—Cotton remained in good condition on northern counties, but elsewhere there was deterioration. In central part of state hot suns followed last week's rains and moisture has been dissipated so that what is seemingly temporary. Many sections had too little moisture to range of crop even with ample rains, which have proved very drying. There is shedding and forming poor and top crop prospect is unduly small. West seems doing fairly well. Not too late for rains to be of vast benefit, but in other parts of the state they are urgently needed.—Turner.

SURPLUS RESERVE ITEM SHOWS SMALL DECREASE

With the Amount of Surplus and Treasury Funds to Be Deposited, Money Is Easier

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The Financier today says:

The statement of the associated banks of the city of New York for the week ending August 9 seemed to reflect very accurately known conditions with reference to the movements of money. There was a moderate increase of $1,157,000 in cash, loans expanded $5,640,000 and deposits of $5,657,000.

The increase in deposits enlarged reserve requirements and as the gain in cash was not sufficient to meet these, excess reserve fell $424,450, making the present surplus above the 25 per cent minimum, $26,683,650.

With this amount of surplus in hand and with the very large amount of treasury funds which are to be deposited in the crop moving sections, the future of the money market appears rather comfortable.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Statement of actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week show they hold $26,683,650 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is a decrease of $324,450 from last week.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE IRON AND STEEL MARKET

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—New orders for rolled steel products came to the mills last week at the rate of 35 to 50 per cent of total capacity. Specifications on old contracts for steel plates, shapes and bars were not sufficient to keep up the general average. The tendency of prices was downward. Concessions were made on marine plates in the east; sheets continued easy with more mills aggressive for business. Car shops and railroads bought some structural shapes and bars to cover old contracts but new buying of railroad equipment was light. Rail orders were confined to miscellaneous small lots aggregating 10,000 tons. Car orders were insignificant and locomotive shops received orders for only twenty-four engines, including ten for the Pere Marquette and eight for the Cuban Railroad, while the Canadian Pacific, however, asked for tenders on thirty engines and the Norfolk & Western called for ten.

The Lehigh Valley bought 500 steel underframes and the car builders are figuring on about 6,000 cars. Included are 2,000 for the Northern Pacific. The rail inquiries for 1914 rolling stock are estimated at 500,000 tons but few or such contracts are expected to be closed in the next sixty days. Steel building and bridge orders were very disappointing, the total calling for scarcely 20,000 tons of fabricated shapes.

The July output of the United States Steel corporation subsidiaries were 407,961 tons less than shipments, the latter being estimated 940,000 tons, indicating new orders at the rate of 20,460 tons per day for the twenty-six active days in July. Unfilled orders July 31 were 9,339,313 tons.

Sales of pig iron aggregated about 100,000 tons in all sections, including about 40,000 tons additional of basic iron at minimum prices. The higher prices asked for foundry iron confined new business within narrow limits. The feature of the week was the numerous small sales. The big output was sharply curtailed by steel companies and merchant furnaces, but some of the decrease was due to the holidays early in the month.

METAL MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Metals quiet and more or less nominal. Copper unchanged to lower; strength. Lake $16.60; electrolytic $15.75@15.62½.

Iron unchanged.

PIG IRON BUYING CONTINUES

Iron Trade Review Says:

Specifications against contracts in July showed a slight decrease in volume and new orders were light, the aggregate being 3,567 tons, against 4,899 tons in June. Other new business of the week pointed to greater ease of money here and abroad, and improvement in the financial situation as a whole, by reason of *the final settlement of the Bal*kan war. There are some neutralizing conditions, however, including the unsettled situation, resentment by eastern bankers respecting currency legislation and further indications of reduced activity in certain lines of industry, notably iron and steel, in which price concessions are shown.

BOSTON MINING STOCKS.

(By Associated Press.)

WEEKLY REVIEW OF DRY GOODS MARKET

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—While there was some weakening in the prices asked for late contracts on gray cottons for fall delivery, the general position of the cotton goods markets remains substantially unchanged from a week ago. Staple cotton cloths which had been out of range with some other cloths, were reduced half cent a yard to a basis of 6 cents for standard 39-inch bushings, but these cloths have come forward steadily with a tendency to favor the wider goods.

Sales of 15,000 pieces of print cloths sold at Fall River 45,000 pieces were for spot shipment. Nominal prices on regular 64x60s have been reduced 5-8 of an eighth, but there has been no trading. Bleached goods hold steady with shipments of old orders continuing full. Duck is in steady demand for quick shipment. The trade inclines to the belief that cotton may be lower in the fall than now.

Stocks continue low in jobbing and retail channels and buyers admit that if present uncertainties can be removed from the markets may grow firm very suddenly. Prices rule as follows:

Print cloths, 28-inch 64x64s, 3½-8 5,39,3,39 cents; 28-inch 60x48s, 3 1-8 and 5-8; southern sheetings standards 6 cents; standard prints 5 1-2; standard ginghams 7 1-2 cents; denims 9 ounces 14; tickings 8 ounce 13 3-4; dress ginghams 9 1-4.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Cotton goods trading is steady with fair business in contract delivery. Jobbers had a good week, retailers being a conservative buying disposition, but being compelled by their light stocks to operate in all departments. Linens are firm. Burlaps are very stiff and jute quoted at high water mark.

Trading in Stocks During Short Session Was Dull and Irregular

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET

Market Dull, With Very Small Volume of Business Transacted—Closed 15 to 16 Off

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—The net change in prices as the result of the week's trading in cotton was a decline of 15 to 16 points. The high prices of the season were made on Thursday and the low prices on Saturday. At the highest the trading months were 3 to 4 points over last week's close; at the lowest they were 13 to 20 points under. The range was 22 to 25 points.

The market fell off at the week-end on hope of rain over the western map over Sunday. It was a very dull market, the week through, with the drouth in Texas and Oklahoma the main sustaining influence. Bad crop reports sent in alarming reports

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

GOSSIP of the late summer and early fall is filled with the discussion of rumored engagements which duly materialize later in announcements of the approaching marriages which add to the gayety of the fall and winter.

The debutante set of two winters ago will blossom into the young married set, an unusual number of engagements being open secrets to the special friends of the young couples concerned.

The debutantes for the coming winter will include a number of girls who are either the eldest or only daughter of the family and who have a wide circle of kinspeople and friends to make their coming out winter a memorable one.

Miss Margaret Grant, the elder of the two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant is having a delightful taste of young ladyhood at the famous old White where scores of southern beauties have been feted and toasted. Miss Eula Jackson, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Jackson has been the honor guest at a number of lovely parties on her return from school this summer and for the past few weeks has been among the popular young women at Toxaway. Later Miss Jackson will be an attractive young southerner at Atlantic City.

Miss Rosalie Davis the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Davis, who has been traveling abroad during the past winter and is still away and Miss Jessie McKee the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKee, who spent last winter at school at Neuilly after a tour on the continent, will be lovely members of the debutante set. Miss Mary King who is traveling in Europe with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George King, will make her debut this winter. Miss Adgate Ellis the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Ellis, Jr., will be a gifted member of the debutante set. Her lovely voice as well as her charming manner and pretty face making her a delightful acquisition.

Miss Katherine Ellis whose formal debut would have been a brilliant one last winter except for the mourning of her mother, Mrs. Frank Ellis, will be entertained this fall. Miss Ellis at present being a lovely young representative of Atlanta at the White.

Among other attractive young woman who have not decided on any definite plans for their coming out are Miss Mary Rice, the pretty second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rice; Miss Mamie Ansley whose elder sister, Miss Laura Ansley, has been a lovely figure in the unmarried set for the past two winters; Miss Ferrol Humphries, Miss Lucile Kuhrt, another pretty girl whose elder sister, Miss Isabelle Kuhrt is a popular and pretty member of the younger contingent. Miss Nell Prince, Miss Nancy Prince, Miss Helen McCullough and others.

* * *

THE announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Madeleine Downing, of Brunswick, and Mr. Raymond Demere Knight is of very unusual interest.

The bride is one of the most popular young women of Brunswick, and has visited in Atlanta a number of times where she is delightfully known. Mr. Knight is one of the leading young attorneys of Florida, and a descendant of the old colonial families of Demere and Houston, of Georgia. He is a cousin of Right Reverent Albion W. Knight, bishop of Cuba and Panama, who will officiate at the wedding which will take place at Calvary church, in New York City, on the return of the bride-elect who is spending the summer abroad. After a month's stay in Maine Mr. Knight and his bride will return south and make their home in Jacksonville.

ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT WRITES OF MINERAL BLUFF INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

The music of saw and hammer, which is inciting considerable interest in the silent, picturesque little mountain town of Mineral Bluff, is indicative of another step in educational progress, which has been undertaken by the Southern Mountain Educational association.

On account of congested conditions last year in the Mineral Bluff school, the Southern Mountain Educational association has, through this urge for greater space, been forced to begin the erection of an up-to-date class hall estimated to cost about $1,300. This hall to be used, not only for recitations, but mothers' meetings, lectures on civic improvement, entertainments and closing exercises.

Deeply interested have the people of the community become in the further progress and success of the Mineral Bluff school. Many manifesting this interest by small contributions of money from their meagre incomes toward the erection of the hall, while others are gladly giving their time and labor. The building to be completed by September 1.

Contributions to this fund, also scholarships for the coming year (cost of a scholarship, $50, will be gratefully received from all friends interested in philanthropic educational work.

The Mineral Bluff school will reopen September 1, beginning another year of joyful work, extending its privileges and influence of uplift to a class of intelligent and worthy girls who have been denied a chance in life, but quietly striving to prove themselves active and useful members of any community.

During the first two or three weeks of the opening month, attention of the pupils will be directed to canning, preserving and jelly making. These products of our orchard and garden and handiwork of the girls will be put on sale. The proceeds to be utilized for further improvement of curriculum and building.

We have two splendid teachers engaged for the coming year. Our domestic science teacher is a graduate of the Georgia Normal and Industrial college. She comes to us highly recommended by president and teachers.

The Mineral Bluff school is a demonstrated success. Allow me to state just here that it is not the offering of an endowment fund, but of hard work on the part of the Southern Mountain Educational association. This association, founded by Helen Ferry, commenced work without one dollar in sight. The result of its efforts stands today as a beacon light to worthy, ambitious girls, who through poverty have been denied their birthright—the right of an education.

Long live the Mineral Bluff school.

MRS. EDWARD W. LA ZARUS,
President Southern Mountain Educational Association.

Fall Models in American Beauty Corsets

The American Beauty gains new friends every day. The new Fall models are a trifle longer and lower in the bust, and very straight, indeed.
Beautifully made—cut to bring out all the grace and charm of a woman's figure.
Made of batistes and coutils—sturdy materials that will wear, yet not the most expensive. This accounts for the moderate prices of the American Beauty corsets—they have the lines—(but not the materials) of the very finest corsets. Sizes to suit all, $1 to $5.

August Furniture Sale

——We hold but two furniture sales a year—one in February; the other in August.
——For the other ten months of the year, therefore, our regular prices must be low enough to compete with stores that hold sales about every sixty or ninety days.
——It is from these normal low prices that present August reductions have been made—10 to 20 per cent on regular lines; 25, 35 to 50 per cent on odd pieces, broken suits and discontinued patterns.
——Every piece of furniture we own is included in these reductions—space here to tell of only a few:

This $75 Sideboard at $40

This sideboard, just as pictured, is developed in veneer mahogany. Perfectly made of seasoned lumber, doweled and screwed with close-fitting grooves, carefully built by competent cabinet makers. It is 58 inches high, the top 60 inches long and 28 inches deep. The mirror is 48x12 inches.
The nearest thing you could get to this sideboard in plain oak—not quartered oak (let alone veneer mahogany)—but just plain, every-day oak—would cost you $37.50.
To get a sideboard of this quality in veneer mahogany at $40, therefore, is an opportunity—a most remarkable opportunity.

Remodeling Sale Means:
Great Bargains in Women's and Child's Summer Garments

WE MUST, immediately, clear the floor of a large part of our store—so, as to make way for the carpenters, decorators and other workmen who are going to remodel our Ready-to-Wear Dep't.

Therefore, we shall SACRIFICE the prices on all Summer garments—Women's Dresses, Suits, Coats, Underwear, etc.—and Children's Dresses and Underwear! There are bargains here galore—too many to itemize—but to give you an idea, we mention just a few below!

Don't fail to visit Frohsin's tomorrow—all Summer garments are going to be sold at a mere fraction of the prices they should bring at even this time of the year!

Remember, there are many more bargains like the following:

$37.50 Crepe Dresses, Reduced to $14.75
$10 Linen Suits, Reduced to $2.95
$15 Silk Coats, Reduced to $6.75
$2 Crepe Kimonos, Reduced to $1.19

Atlantans Don't Know Atlanta!

The busy man operates in a restricted sphere of activities, his thoughts and attention closely riveted on his own business, oblivious to the rearing of new walls and spires of his own town. He beats a narrow path twixt his office and his home; and while in a sub-conscious way he "KNOWS ATLANTA GROWS," yet of the individuality of its growth he is in a large degree ignorant. Old concerns greatly enlarge their capacity. New ones begin on a large scale, and become tremendous factors from their inception. The BYRD PRINTING CO. as an instance, have more than doubled their capacity and moved into an especially constructed 5-story concrete building, DEVOTED IN ITS ENTIRETY to the various departments of this intensely modern PRINTING PLANT. The management will be glad at any time to take Atlanta or out-of-town business men on tour through the plant. The trip will be interesting and educational, and you are cordially invited to call and inspect the plant and its workings.

It is indeed a source of pleasure to the young ladies to tour over the beautiful, picturesque bitulithic roads of Fulton County, and a source of education for them to see the model farms, poultry plants, factories and industries of many kinds.

All summer long the workmen have been busy, renovating and remodeling the building from bottom to top, and the work on the campus has added much to its neat and attractive appearance.

The registration for the coming session is larger at this season than for many years. It is estimated that before school opens, rooms will be at a premium.

To keep well abreast of the times, Cox College has added some splendid teachers to its already strong faculty in both literary and conservatory departments.

Next session begins Sept. 10th. For beautiful illustrations and catalogue, address, The Secretary.

18 Three-piece suits, which were $50 each, included

We will place the line on sale Monday at 9 a. m. at a price that will clear them at once.

Original prices were $25.00 to $50.00. Choice in this sale for $15.00.

All ready, specially displayed on our second floor, your choosing will be easy.

There will be plenty of competent sales people to attend you promptly and satisfactorily. Come early.

These are not shown as new fall models, but, with minor changes, you can have a new suit. All sizes can be found, though, of course, not every size in every style, but, if you come early, you will find your size in a pleasing suit.

This yearly bargain particularly interests women who are making journeys and is a welcome event for women outfitting their girls in college and boarding school apparel.

As the object of this sale is quick and final clearance, none of these suits will be sent C. O. D. or on approval or sold subject to return or exchange.

Black Broadcloths, Serges and unfinished Worsteds in many handsome styles; among them plain ones; others are braid and satin trimmed.

These are among the greatest values of the sale, and women knowing suit values will quickly take them.

Some were $50.00; most of them were $30.00 to $40.00; none of them were less than $25.00. Your choice $15.00.

In this group many suits were price-ticketed $30.00 to $40.00; some were $45.00 and $50.00. Take your choice at $15.00.

Suits of novel weaves including stripes, checks and mixtures, and some rough weaves, Irish and Scotch fabrics and novelty English suitings and diagonal wales.

You will pronounce this group very "smart," and the young woman seeking mannish styles will find her suit in this lot.

This group was formerly priced $45.00, $35.00, $27.50 and $25.00.

These are not shown as new fall suits, but are $25, $35, $40, $45 and $50 wool suits left over from our immense stock of spring and late winter models

After a pleasant morning spent in fancy work, dainty sandwiches and iced tea were served.

Quite a congenial party of young people left Monday afternoon for a ten days' camping party at Henderson's mill. The party includes Miss Florence Wells and her guests, Misses Cora Henderson, of Tampa, Fla.; Virginia Withers, of Atlanta, Irma Mason, of Decatur, Bernice Breedlove of Monroe, Robbie Blasingame, of Winder, Grace Whitehead, Jane Gaither, Eleanor Butler, Eleanor Henry, of Taylor, Tex.; Sallie Mae Cook, Messrs. Nathan Cohen, Will Cook, Carlton Lee, Fred Barnes, Tom Adams, Sanford Steadman, Emmett Rogers, Jamie Knox and John Bob Weaver.

Miss Cora Henderson, of Tampa, Fla., the guest of Miss Florence Wells, was the honor guest at a theater party on Thursday afternoon at which Miss Honer Simms entertained a few friends at the Lyric theater. After the theater refreshments were served at the City pharmacy. Invited to meet Miss Henderson were Misses Florence Wells, Hyda Heard, Frances Henderson, Frances Godfrey, Annie Higgins, Julie Trippe, Mrs. C. S. Thompson.

Miss Mamie Vining entertained a few friends at her home on Monticello street on Thursday afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Lollie Landers, of Social Circle. Rook was the game for the afternoon, and later the guests were entertained at the Lyric theater, with refreshments at the City pharmacy. The guests included Misses Lollie Landers, Lucy Wooten, Dorothy Lee, Alline Simmons, Latrelle Meadors, Ena Belle Peek and Inez Toomas.

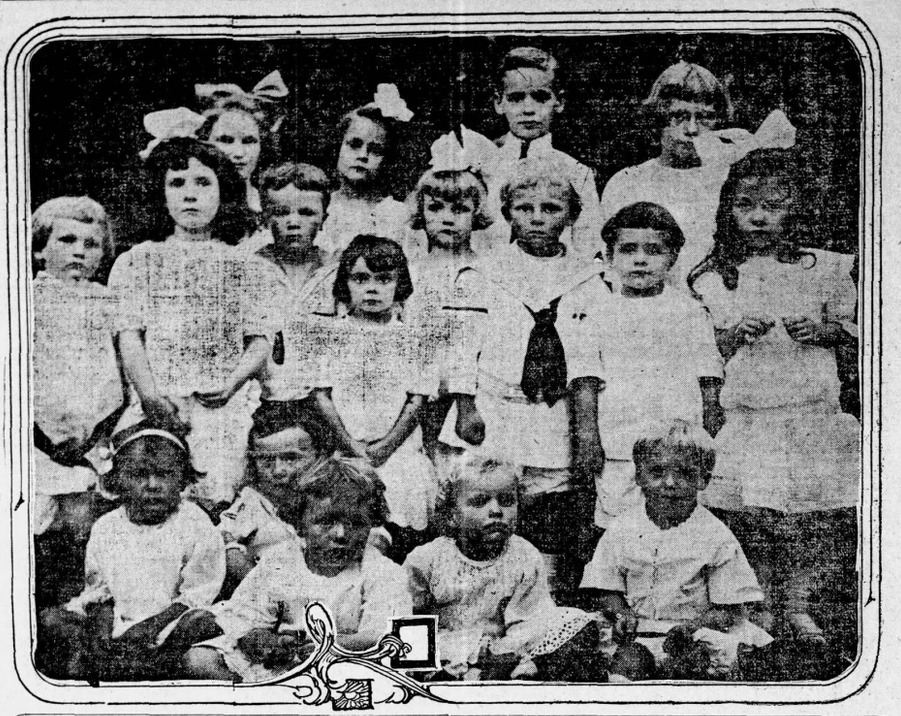
Miss Eloise Cooper entertained a number of friends on Friday evening at her home with a promenade party in honor of Miss Frances Godfrey and her guests, Misses Annie Simmons, Vera Cone, Mary Brown and Mary Walton Trammell, and for her house guest, Miss Cullen Battle, of Atlanta. The attractive decorations of the house were ferns, growing plants and numerous vases and bowls of garden flowers placed on cabinets and mantels. A large number of guests from Oxford and Covington were entertained and at a late hour a delicious ice course was served.

On Friday morning Miss Eloise Cooper entertained with a delightful luncheon in honor of her attractive guest, Miss Cullen Battle, of Atlanta. Ferns, foliage plants and many colored zenias were used in the pleasing decorations of the house. The table in the dining room had for a centerpiece a large bowl of zennias resting on an exquisite lace cover. A delicious six-course luncheon was served. Invited to meet Miss Battle were Misses Annie and Jessie Dickey, Emily Melton Mary Starr, Sarah Branham, Annie Sue Bonnell, Edith McDonald, Frances Godfrey, Janie Gaither, Julia Aiken, Clara Belle Adams, Grace Whitehead, Florence Wells and Cora Henderson, of Tampa, Fla.

A beautiful event of the past week was the rook luncheon at which Miss Janie Gaither entertained a number of friends at her home on Conyers street in honor of Miss Frances Godfrey and her guests, Misses Brown, Cone, Trammell and Simmons. The guests were entertained on the pretty vine-covered porches, which were attractive with their decorations of ferns, plants and pretty rugs and seats. The tables each had as a centerpiece an artistic arrangement of ferns and nasturtiums. At the close of the game a delicious three-course luncheon was served at the tables. Miss Gaither's guests included Misses Godfrey, Cone, Brown, Trammell, Simmons, Annie Mae Lester, Mary Starr, Mary Blalock, Florence Wells, Cora Henderson, of Tampa, Fla.; Bernicle Breedlove, of Monroe, Eloise Cooper, Cullenn Battle, of Atlanta, Grace Whitehead, Louise Moore, of Macon; Lucy sh, Clara Belle Adams, Mary Speer, of Newborn, Gussie Berman, of Elberton, and Jeannette Stowers, of Mississippi.

Another pretty compliment to Miss Godfrey and her house party was the bridge party given by Mrs. Greene Callaway at her pretty home on College street on Wednesday afternoon. The house was prettily decorated with ferns and a wealth of garden flowers. The table in the dining room had as a centerpiece a pretty arrangement of maiden hair fern and phlox, resting on a pretty lace cover. A salad course was served at the tables at the conclusion of the game. The guests included Misses Frances Godfrey, Vera Cone, Mary Walton Trammell, Annie Simmons, Mary Brown, Emily Fitts, Mary Dillard, Honer Simms, Frances Henderson, Annie Higgins, Julie Trippe, Eleanor Butler, Eleanor Henry, Eva Stephenson, Mary Starr, Annie Mae Lester, Hyda Heard,

YOUNG PEOPLE INVITED TO MEET MISS O'NEILL OF CHARLESTON



The above cut shows a number of the young people entertained Thursday by Mrs. Robert Adger Smythe at her home on Fifteenth street at a lovely party in honor of her young niece, Miss Emma Thomas O'Neill, of Charleston, S. C., who has spent the summer in Atlanta, the affair being a pretty farewell compliment to the young visitor who will leave this week for her home. Games were played in which attractive trophies were won and lovely souvenirs were given each guest. The table from which the sweets were served was placed on the porch and beautifully decorated with little fairy lights and flowers.

How to Lose Your Tan, Freckles or Wrinkles

(From Woman's Tribune.)

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sea trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson or more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolized wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and use this nightly as you would cold cream, washing it off mornings. In a week or so you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, so apt to form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 ounce dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also.—(Advt.)

SOCIETY'S INTEREST IN ATLANTA'S FIRST POLO MATCH

The pictures show the sponsor and their escorts and a number of other interested spectators at the polo match which was an event of Wednesday at Fort McPherson. The young women invited to sponsor the game were, Miss Myrt Hancock, Miss Tommie Hancock, Miss Aline Fielder, Miss Lyda Nash, Miss Louise Bradbury, Miss Mary Carl Hurst, Miss Rebie Wilkins, Miss Elise Brown and Miss Virginia Hoffman. The chaperons asked were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winecoff and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Freeman, of Greenville.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

WEDNESDAY afternoon Atlantians had their first glimpse of polo, the event being one full of interest from the spectators' standpoint.

The game as played at Fort McPherson, the big parade grounds bordered on four sides by avenues of shade trees lined with automobiles whose occupants watched with interest the game in which the horse plays such an important part.

The porches of Officers' row were bright with groups of visitors, although numbers of the cottages have been closed, as their owners are at Camp Perry for the international meet.

General and Mrs. Robert K. Evans motored out, their car being surrounded throughout the afternoon by chatting groups of friends, Mrs. Evans wearing a gown of embroidered linen and a black hat trimmed with paradise aigrettes.

Mrs. J. G. Oglesby and Mrs. Frank Hawkins were two attractively gowned women watching the game from the shelter of the former's big touring car.

Others among the hundreds who went out to the post for the game were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. John Hill, Mrs. Roy Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Meador, Mrs. McWhorter Milner, Mrs. P. D. McCarley, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Meador, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Ransom, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winecoff, Dr. and Mrs. A. J. McLeay, Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, Mrs. Fred Watson, Miss Glodys LeVin, Miss Marion Goldsmith, Miss Marian Acheson, Miss Mary Allgood Jones, Misses Jessie and Margaret McKee, Miss Jeannette Lowndes, Miss Louise Riley, Miss Alexa Stirling, Miss Ruth Stallings, Miss Helen Thorn, Miss Margaret Moore, Miss Penelope Clarke, Miss Jennie Mobley, Miss Josephine Windle, Miss Wyolene Purtell, Miss Annie Sykes Rice, Misses Mary and Georgia Rice, Miss Louise Alexander, of Augusta; Miss Daisy LeCraw, Miss Elizabeth Dawson, Miss Priscilla Paton, Miss Louise Windle and others.

* * *

ONE of the prettiest affairs of the week had as the honor guest Miss Virginia Harrison, of Brunswick, Mrs. Spencer Atkinson entertaining for her lovely young guest at a bridge tea, for which numbers of the younger set were invited.

Summer flowers used throughout the rooms and write asters with mist fern on the tea table made an effective setting for the prettily gowned young women wearing the daintiest of frocks and flower-trimmed hats.

The honor guest was a lovely figure in a gown of shell pink batiste embordered and worn over pink charmeuse.

Invited to meet Miss Harrison were Misses Penelope and Frances Clarke, Miss Katherine Richardson, Miss Edith Dunson, Miss Adrienne Battey, Miss Ruth Northen, Misses Edith and Antoinette Kirkpatrick, Miss Emma Kate Amorous, Miss Annie Lee McKenzie, Miss Margaret Hawkins, Miss Ruth Stallings, Miss Mary Murray, of Alabama; Miss Mary Hines, Miss Virginia Ingecomb; Miss Sarah Rawson, Miss Cobbie Vaughan, Miss Nancy Prince, Miss Mary Helen Moody and Miss Ruth Aiken and Miss Winnie McKinnon, of Brunswick.

MRS. FRAMPTON ELLIS, who was formerly Miss Eloise Oliver, and one of the prettiest of the June brides, was the honor guest at a tea at which Mrs. W. A. Speer entertained at the Piedmont club Friday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis spent a part of their honeymoon at Atlantic City, where the latter was one of the smartly gowned young women who was an attractive figure on the board walk. Friday Mrs. Ellis wore a lovely gown of white lace and a picture hat of blue, trimmed with a cluster of blue plumes and pink roses.

Mrs. Speer wore a white lingerie gown worn with a white hat, trimmed with plumes, and was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. John Slivey.

Among the guests a number of out-of-town visitors were charming figures, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Virginia, and Miss Mildred Hazen, of New Jersey.

Miss Hazen wore a frock of silver-green charmeuse with a tunic of flowered chiffon, a rose-colored girdle giving a bright touch of color, the same being used on the little bonnet-shaped hat which framed her face.

Her hostess, Miss Mignon McCarty, was lovely in a gown of white crepe and a small hat of white trimmed with maline, a black velvet ribbon tying it on under the chin. Miss Buckner's gown was a mustard-colored crepe worn with a black hat trimmed with chiffon.

Miss Sarah Rawson, who has just returned, after spending some time at Magnolia with Miss Lucy Hoke Smith and later at Atlantic City, wore the loveliest of summer frocks, a charming creation in white chiffon, the corsage a kimono effect finished with angel sleeves, the slim skirt bordered with ruffles opening over a petticoat of embroidered net.

Mrs. Marshall Johnson was another pretty guest wearing a white gown and white hat.

Invited to meet Mrs. Ellis were Miss Lula Dean Jones, Miss Carolyn King, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Bessie Jones, Miss Marion Goldsmith, Miss Mary Brown, Miss Susie Hallman, Miss Emma Kate Amorous, Misses Edith and Antoinette Kirkpatrick, Miss Adrienne Battey, Miss Mignon McCarty, Miss Mary Hines, Miss Margaret Northen, Miss Annie Lee McKenzie, Miss Jennie D. Harris, Miss Elizabeth Morgan, Miss Clifford West, Miss Laura Cowles and Miss Katherine Walker and Mrs. William Tilt.

TWO scholarships will be awarded this year by the Atlanta chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy. One will be in the collegiate department of Miss Woodberry's school and the other will be in either the primary or collegiate department of Miss Hanna's school.

Applicants for the scholarships must be descendants of Confederate soldiers. Mrs. T. T. Stephens, 450 Luckie street, will receive the applications; and the winners will be announced soon.

Atlantians Take Part in Gayeties at the White

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.—The gayest week of the season here was ushered in on Monday evening with the first Germat of the summer when Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta, led with E. Pendleton Turner, of Washington.

The chaperons included Mrs. White, wife of the chief justice, and Mmes. James H. Preston, John D. Potts, Garret B. Wall, Sanford C. Kellogg, A. W. Calhoun, Billups Phinizy, Frank Ellis, John Kerr Branch, Arthur Cary, James Branch, Jacob Phinizy, John Herndon French, George D. Kahle and John E. C. Kohlsaat.

Mr. Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta, was the chairman of the committee that included the mayor of Baltimore, Colonel J. Harry Preston, Mr. George W. Stevens, Dr. John Herndon French, Mr. Henry W. Anderson, Mr. Thornton Lewis, Mr. E. P. Turner, Mr. J. R. Thomas, Mr. William Wheatley, Mr. John Kerr Branch, Mr. F. Marion Whatley, Mr. Thomas McAdams, Mr. R. C. Hale, Mr. James R. Branch, Mr. John W. Grant, Mr. Doughty Manly, Mr. Hunter Breckinridge, Mr. Jo Lane Sterne, Mr. Schuyler Leggett, Mr. Frank Ross and F. L. Ross.

Numerous supper parties followed in the grills where Mr. and Mrs. Paine, Mr. and Mrs. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis and others from Atlanta had large parties.

Among the charming gowns noted at the German were those worn by Mrs. Paine, Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Billups Phinizy and her daughters, Mrs. F. A. Ellis and Miss Katherine Ellis.

There was another German last evening and the hal poudre on Monday evening promises to eclipse anything ever given here.

The social program also includes a fancy dress dance for the Juniors, who have been learning the season's new steps used at the White House in Washington, under the tutelage of Mr. Victor Zebley who spent a portion of the season last winter in Atlanta teaching the new dances.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

(By the Countess of Blankshire.)

LONDON, Aug. 9.—All London has been reading with interest and pleasure the reports of the doings of their majesties in the County Palatine. There has not been a royal tour better arranged and private letters which have reached London from the court during his sojourn in Lancashire express the greatest possible satisfaction with everything, including the weather, which is not always a reliable commodity in this great country. It is difficult to realize the amount of foresight required properly to arrange for such a tour, and even in the matter of planning the railway journeys the utmost skill had to be exercised. I thought of the tour as chiefly one of motor cars until I was handed by Sir Robert Turnbull a copy of the train program, from which it appeared that, except Friday and Sunday, not a day passed without the royal train being in use.

There are not only the actual train journeys of the king and queen to set out, but the royal train when empty had daily to make its way to its home in the carriage shed in Edge Hill, and on more than one occasion it left the king and queen at one station and picked them up at another quite a distance away. For instance, it left them at Colne one day and met them at Rochdale. On another occasion it conveyed them to Earletown and brought them back from Bolton and yesterday leaving them at Ashton, it awaited them at West Leight.

* * *

Nor was the royal train the only one to be arranged, for his majesty's motor cars were sent to Lime street last Sunday. Lord Derby's guests had special provision made for them from London on two days. The drivers of the motor cars and trucks for those vehicles had to be taken to Blackpool in order that later in the day they could travel from Blackpool with the cars and horses, etc., to Colne. Then on Wednesday a special train conveyed the king's horses and carriages from Euston to Prescot, and on Thursday a special with 78 men and 70 horses of the First Life Guards had to go from Addison road station, London, to Prescot, and the same day 46 members of the Irish Guards band went from London to Seaforth. Today will see a special train with horses and carriages go from Prescot to Manchester, and another with the Life Guards and their horses will have brought this royal escort to Manchester by 7:30 o'clock in the morning. Again for the return there will not only be the royal train from Manchester to Euston, but a train with the Life Guards, a train with horses and carriages, and a third with motor cars, all making their way back to London. I understand that despite all this movement of a very special kind the ordinary service was but little interfered with.

* * *

Gosip is crediting Queen Mary with a desire to learn the art and mystery of golf. I have my doubts. The queen has never shown any predilection for outdoor games. She is content with a course of physical drill every day, and she would hardly care to give up the time necessary to learn and to play the game with any enjoyment. The king has never cared for it, and I believe thinks it wastes a good deal of the time of his younger subjects, and that that time might be put to very much better uses. The prince of Wales has taken it up, but only in a half-hearted way, when he has been down at places like Newquay and elsewhere. There is a golf course actually within Windsor Great Park, and with one of the greens within a stone's throw of Frogmore house, where her majesty is to spend Goodwood week, none of the royal family have taken advantage of this fact. The prince himself is more inclined toward cricket and games of an active kind which put some physical strain upon him.

* * *

A story was recently published stating that Princess Mary was frequenting the Bath club, and that the prince of Wales was often a visitor there in the big swimming bath. I have never seen the prince of Wales in the club, of which he is not a member, nor have I heard of Princess Mary being there lately. She was described by the writer of the paragraph as having engaged in a ladies' swimming competition in which she did not get placed. This bit of gossip made the princess very angry apparently, and at her request an official statement was issued denying that she had been in the Bath club for two or three years. The Bath club is the best of its kind in London, and is far more exclusive than the swagger Royal Automobile club in Pall Mall. That the name of the club should have figured so prominently in an official denial has caused extreme annoyance to the members.

* * *

Mr. Larence Housman, who has thrown out a very striking suggestion with regard to the militant suffragists, is a prominent figure at the meeting of the Men's League for Women's Suffrage. The members of the organization are generally known as "the lambs." Possibly this is due to the very mild way in which they follow their nominal role of protection toward the suffragists. I saw one of them engaging in this process at a Hyde park meeting, and the ease with which he was knocked down and then permitted himself to be slapped in the face with the caps of the youths around him, did not speak well of his fitness for the task. Mr. Housman seems to think that something can be done, arson and bomb explosions having failed, to compel the legislature to give women the vote, if the suffragists would only start imitating the legendary role of Lady Godiva. I have, however, always understood that Lady Godiva was a singularly beautiful woman, and that only one man attempted to look at her unclothed figure. He did so with disastrous consequences to himself. I am afraid that if most of the suffragists of my acquaintance took to doing the Lady Godiva act no one would look, but it would be for quite other reasons than those put forward in the Coventry story.

The trouble with the whole movement is that really beautiful women will have nothing to do with it.

Suwanee House Party

The guests include Miss Frances Anderson, of Atlanta; Miss Florence Anderson, of Atlanta; Miss Leola Wallace, of Atlanta, and Miss Mildred Adams, of Cedartown.

Among those spending the week-end with the guests were Mr. Ted Bowdoin, of Atlanta; Mr. H. W. Rhodes and Mr. Weldon Palmour, of Gainesville.

Many social events have been given in honor of the Misses Rhodes and their guests.

Among these was Mrs. H. W. Rhodes' luncheon. The out-of-town guests were Mr. Verner Shadburn, Mr. Gladstone Howe, Mr. Erskine Howe, Mr. Harry Power, Mr. Martin Edd Brogdon, Mr. Ernest Ledbetter, of Buford, and Mr. Louis Brogdon, of Atlanta.

Misses Louise and Katie Mae Rhodes entertained a progressive conversation party on Tuesday evening and a moonlight picnic was given Wednesday evening by Mrs. H. B. Rhodes.

Swimming Pool Picnic

An enjoyable picnic will be given by the Civic league for the benefit of their school property fund on Tuesday, August 12, beginning about 10 o'clock a. m.

It will take place on the lawn of Mrs. Cosens, on Boulevard drive, between Warren and Howard streets.

Summer Foods As Cause of Dyspepsia

Many Also Get Diarrhoea---What To Do in Either Case

Summer ought to be the months of most perfect health, but owing to contaminated water and milk, unripe fruit, germs, and insects the average of health is not good at this time of the year. There is much skin trouble from acid fruits, and much dyspepsia and diarrhoea from cold foods and iced beverages.

The skin trouble is easily stopped by discontinuing fruit for a few days, and by the use of a mild laxative to clean the bowels and tone the blood. The dyspepsia is likewise corrected by the use of a laxative that has combined with it the elements of a digestive tonic. Hence the best remedy to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, as its name indicates, is a pleasant laxative combined with the virtues of pepsin, which we all know is the best cure for indigestion.

Use Syrup Pepsin also for summer diarrhoea. Avoid astringents, physics and cathartics, as they are unnecessarily harsh. Thousands of good American families use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, among them those of Mrs. W. A. Taylor, Beloit, Wis., who finds she can give it to her baby without causing cramps or pains, and Mrs. Wm. O. Richter, Clayville, Va., who considers it a laxative tonic absolutely unexcelled. They know of no pleasanter cure for constipation liver trouble, indigestion, summer diarrhoea, etc. It is valuable to all the family from infancy to old age. Children like its taste. All druggists sell it at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter being the family size.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington street, Monticello, Ill.

Guaranteed Pure, Long Staple Cotton Felt

The Only Bonded Mattress Dealers Offer

The Gholstin Sanitary Felt Mattress

Is guaranteed to be the best mattress possible to produce at any price. It is made of purest long staple cotton woven into layers of indestructible, sanitized felt. Each layer is placed with exactness one upon the other so that perfect uniformity is secured. This felt is encased in the best ticking—plain stripe or fancy.

We agree to forfeit $100 to any purchaser who can find other than staple cotton felt in The Gholstin Sanitary Felt Mattress.

Ours is the oldest, largest and best equipped mattress factory in the south. We permit none but skilled employees to make The Gholstin, because it is built by hand and requires expert knowledge.

We do not renovate or make over mattresses. We have no way of knowing to what contagious disease an old mattress may have been exposed. We advise you to be sure that the factory which makes your mattress is sanitary. In addition to supplying our customers the best mattress possible to make we safeguard their health.

Interesting Meeting of Equal Suffrage Assn.

At the usual semi-monti ymeeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association at the Carnegie library on Wednesday, an interesting program was enjoyed by a large audience.

Mr. Grossman gave a graphic account of the trip to Gainesville, Ga., for the purpose of organizing a suffrage league there. The committee were well received, but as in Atlanta there was opposition in some quarters against women having the right to vote. Previous to the committee's going to Gainesville the local committee there advised them as to the debate on this question of suffrage. Some who were previously for suffrage changed their minds, but so did many who were before the debate anti-suffrage. Whenever Mrs. McLendon's name was mentioned there was enthusiastic applause.

Dr. Harding, of Atlanta, made a beautiful appeal in behalf of women having the right equal with man to say who should make and administer the laws for her and her children, and delighted his audience by its justice.

A breakfast was tendered the visitors.

Many names were received to form what will be called "The Gainesville Equal Suffrage association." Mr. Grossman was given a rising vote of thanks for his help at Gainesville.

A paper by Dr. Soule was read by Mrs. Soule in the absence of the doctor. He quoted the scripture to prove that women were created equal with men. "Male and female created he them." That the word used to express male and female in the original meant, "thinkers." It was a splendid tribute to women.

Miss Ray Kline followed with an interesting talk on "The Story Teller's League," saying that although it had originated in a foreign country it flourished here also. That in Atlanta there were seventy-five members and they needed more story tellers. There was one at the library. The children were always delighted when their afternoon came to hear them.

Mrs. McWhorter gave an instructive talk on what had and had not been done in the legislative assembly. There was news of the child's labor bill, the kindergarten bill and many others in which the league is interested.

Mrs. Daniels presented a resolution to be signed by the various clubs and associations in Fulton county to be petition to the commissioners for the appointment of a matron to the jail, which was heartily received by the league and adopted. There are over a hundred women in the jail, many of them scarcely more than children.

Afternoon Party

Miss Dora Eberhardt was hostess at a heart dice party given during the week past in compliment to Miss Lillian Daniel, of Hogansville, the attractive guest of Mrs. J. E. Spurlock.

Miss Eberhardt was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. W. Eberhardt, Mrs. J. E. Spurlock and Mrs. F. S. Fetcher.

The house was decorated with ferns and garden flowers.

Mrs. Holcomb won the prize for top score, a pair of silk hose, and the consolation, a handsome flower pin, was awarded Miss Lois Wilkerson. The honor guest received a pair of silk hose.

After the game luncheon was served.

Those invited to met Miss Daniel were Miss Adelaide Calloway, Miss Margaret Jeter, Miss Lois Wilkerson, Miss Eloise Baldwin, Miss Maggie Fields, Miss Essie Lee McDonald, Miss Sudie Mae McCreary, Miss Mattie Lou Bailey, Miss Belle Cooper, Miss Mary Edna Daniel, Mrs. Holcomb, Miss Julia Steel, Miss Dora Eberhardt, Miss Ruth Eberhardt, Mrs. Dora Eberhardt, Miss J. E. Spurlock and Mrs. R. W. Eberhardt.

Mrs. Williams Entertains

Mrs. P. L. Williams entertained Saturday evening in honor of her guest, Miss Lily Olive Brandt, of Savannah.

Cards were played, and at a late hour refreshments were served.

Those invited to meet Miss Brandt were Miss Della White, Miss Eva Williams, Miss Ethel Simms, Miss Kate White, Miss Carrie White, Miss Maude White, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Thompson, Mrs. G. A. Boatwright, Augusta, Ga.; Miss Cora White, Mrs. Ollie White, Miss Myrtice White, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Buckner, Mr. Waldo Weaver, Mr. John Purefoy, Mr. Charlie White, Mr. Edward Williams, Mr. Gerald Williams, Mr. Hugh Sheats, Mr. Price Eubanks, Mr. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Howell.

"MAGNIFICENT START WAS FIRST WEEK; SECOND TO BE STILL MORE BRILLIANT"

Bolling H. Jones, President of Merchants' Convention, Declares Southern Prosperity Will Be Celebrated in Atlanta This Week in Splendid Style, Big Barbecue Chief Event of Week – Convention Registration Moved From Auditorium to Piedmont Hotel

"A magnificent start and a still more brilliant close!"

So the past week of the Southern Merchants' convention and the outlook for the next were characterized by President Bolling H. Jones yesterday.

"I am entirely delightly over the big attendance which we had the first week and over the interest and enthusiasm shown by the visitors in all our convention proceedings. I look for still larger crowds the coming week. The program is bristling with entertainment features of all kinds. The good time already enjoyed by the visitors will form only a prelude to the great doings which the final week will bring forth.

"All the southeast has been represented here and I find the merchants reflecting a splendid spirit of optimism in their outlook upon the crop situation and upon the trade of the fall.

"Prosperous times are ahead of all the mercantile interest of the south and this fact we propose to celebrate in befitting style next week, and we want all the dealers of Dixie to be on hand early to help us do it. We are expecting them to come in by the hundreds daily.

"The big central feature of the week is the great barbecue, which is to be impromptuly served at Ponce de Leon spring Wednesday afternoon by J. R. Little and R. K. Rambo, both past masters in this pleasing art. Theater parties and attendance at the ball games will make the rest of the week gay with pleasure and interest. A grand wind up of the 1913 gathering of southern merchants—that's what we are going to have here next week."

Registration offices this week will be moved from the auditorium to lobby in the Piedmont hotel, where Secretary H. T. Moore will have the same efficient force of registrars and ushers which handled the crowds so satisfactorily last week. There will be no further sessions at the auditorium this week and the change of headquarters to the Piedmont hotel is for the greater convenience of a more central place for the delegates to register.

The following are the events scheduled for this week:

Monday, August 11, 8 p. m.—Vaudeville. An entire theater engaged.

Wednesday, August 13, 1 p. m.—Barbecue and Brunswick stew.

Saturday, August 16—Au revoir.

SUCCESS COMES FROM PERSISTENT ADVERTISING

Lawrenceville Merchant Makes Instructive Talk on Aggressive Publicity by Retailers

J. H. McGee, of Lawrenceville, Ga., addressed the Merchants convention last Thursday on the subject aggressive advertising. His address follows:

Whether we realize it or not advertising is today the greatest commercial force in the world. It is more than publicity, it is more than descriptions of merchandise. It creates higher standards of living, it creates a demand, it teaches people to want more things and better things. It is a great promoter of improvements. It has done away with ox carts and log cabins in this country. It helps to educate and refine people and in this way make them better citizens. As an instance the advertisements of Ivory soap have taught this whole nation to be more sanitary and clean.

It creates sentiment and moulds public opinion. It also creates energy and ambition and helps to prevent laziness. High class aggressive advertising will improve the services of any store. Advertising is destined to become a great art. Within the next hundred years there will be advertisements that will become as famous as great paintings. It is worthy of the best business talent of our country.

This much in a general way about advertising. Now to be more specific and get down to my subject in a practical way. First, what is the purpose and aim of aggressive store advertising, because that is the kind that the most of us here today are interested in. It is at least two fold in its purpose; first, direct purpose is to sell the goods advertised; second, its indirect but more important object is to so interest and train the public that they will naturally come to our stores for what they want.

It is possible, nay it is not only possible but it has been done in thousands of cases. People have been trained by aggresive persistent advertising so that when they think of a certain article they will unconsciously go to certain places and call for it. The greater part of human nature is composed of habit, the most of the things we do we do just from the force of habit. You will be surprised if you just notice how largely you yourself are controlled by your habits.

The aim of the far seeing advertiser is to make the public buy his goods not from choice but from habit. I am sure we would all like to have thousands of customers who will do this, and it can be done. I am in business in a town of about two thousand inhabitants and in a fine farming section. In my town we have two good semi-weekly newspapers that have large circulations. I have been advertising in these papers and in other ways for a number of years, and I make it a point to carry largely nationally advertised goods and I am sure that I have customers who just automatically when they need goods in my line without any thinking or effort about the matter come to me for them, and I am sure that many of you have the same thing.

But some of you say, I can't do it. Yes, you can. All you have to do is just to get at it, and stick to it. The oftener any thing is done the easier we can do it, but you must stick everlastingly at it. You can't teach people a habit in any other way.

Aggressive advertising is not an experiment. It has already made good, the immense business of the large mail order houses of this country running up into millions and millions of dollars stand as a monument of the success of aggressive advertising. They have been built upon it and absolutely nothing else.

If we country merchants expect to stay in business we have got to get busy right along this line and if the wholesale merchant don't want to loose out they have got to cooperate with the retail merchants and we have got to inaugurate such an advertising campaign as the world has never known, and turn the attention and the trade of the people back to the local merchant. By devoting the study and attention to this that it deserves and with the hearty cooperation of the wholesale people this can be done and the sooner we do it the better.

NO ACTION YET ON HOTEL INSPECTOR BILL

The Tax and Appropriations Wrangles Delay Measure Demanded by Travelers

No action has yet been taken in the house on the bill providing for a state hotel inspector. The bill received the favorable report of the house committee on sanitation and hygiene several weeks ago, but on account of the delay incident to the tax fight and the consideration of the appropriations bill, it has not yet been reached on the house calendar.

The travelers of the state have been waging a long fight for the relief that a hotel inspector would give them and are looking to the present legislature to accord them the measure they desire. Tax and appropriations are important matters, but they are not more important than protection to the traveling public who are compelled to suffer the impositions of certain hotels every day throughout the year.

The legislature should wake up to this need and pass the bill before the session is over. The measure is without doubt reasonable and clamors for enactment now. Let the demands of the travelers be heard and the bill be made law at once.

MOBILE MAN PRAISES ATLANTA SPIRIT

Says When Atlanta Wants Anything She Goes and Gets It

Editor Firing Line: In a live argument with a Mobile advocate in reference to the two cities, after listening attentively to my friend's argument as to the many advantages he claimed Mobile had over Atlanta, I said:

"Yes, you have a fine city, with many natural advantages, but will you kindly tell me why Mobile with all these natural advantages has a population of only one-fourth of Atlanta's?"

"Oh," he said, "Atlanta's hot air."

"Well," I said, "if you possessed more of the Atlanta spirit, or 'hot air,' as you term it, you would now have a real live city. You have only one thing Atlanta would like, and that is your water facilities, and could that have been purchased and transferred, Atlanta would have had that many years ago, and Mobile would now be only a way station."

After a few moments' hesitation, he said, "Well, I will have to admit the facts. When Atlanta wants a thing she not only goes after it, but gets it, and I only wish we possessed more of her kind of 'hit air.' Atlanta will get her 500,000 population within the time specified."

And he finally said, "Here's wishing more cities of the south had Atlanta's spirit of progressiveness."

ATLANTA'S MARKET MEETS THE ACID TEST THAT BUYERS MAKE

Visiting Merchants Compare Atlanta to Other Cities—"Atlanta Gets My Business All the Time," "Am Buying Entire Stock for My New Store Here," "Have Been Buying Here for Years and Will Keep It Up," Are Some of the Expressions of Approval Heard

The buyers themselves say so.

The acid test of any wholesale market is the comparison with other jobbing centers made by the retail merchants with whom the proper buying of goods is a vital matter of self-interest on which largely depends their success or failure.

Atlanta can advertise itself and its wholesale market, the men going out on the road can extoll its advantages in impressive style like the good boosters they are, but unless there is the real basis in merchandise and prices the buyers will buy elsewhere.

Atlanta stands the acid test. The merchants here last week from all over the south whose trade is continually being solicited by salesmen from other cities and who have visited other markets and have made their comparisons, are the unprejudiced men who look on Atlanta's wholesale market and say: "This is the place for us."

Any skeptic doubting the opportunities of merchants to buy to advantage in Atlanta can be quickly convinced by visiting the jobbers' sales rooms during these two weeks and asking the opinions of the retailers who are there busy buying their fall stocks.

A few opinions picked up here and there from among the visiting buyers who look on this market with such satisfaction are given here. Countless more along the same line can be secured by inquiry of the customers at any of the city's wholesale houses.

E. M. Slade, of Meansville, Ga., says: "Atlanta suits me. Atlanta has done her part, and it is up to us retailers to do our part by buying close at home and keeping the money near home. I had rather do business close to home, anyway, but Atlanta stands the comparison well with other markets. Occasionally some bargains can be picked up in another market, but it is often in the bargain hunting that the merchant himself gets 'picked up.' I buy in Atlanta."

Walter Lane, here from Social Circle, Ga., to buy fall goods, is another supporter of Atlanta as a buying center.

"I will admit freely," says he, "that I will buy in Atlanta from selfish motives. It is because I can get the goods and prices here. We owe our support to the home market, but I buy here for a better reason—and that reason is because the Atlanta houses serve me better in every way. Atlanta compares with any market. We buy $5 per cent of all our goods here, and are increasing the proportion all the time."

"Atlanta is the place for the southern merchant to buy," says H. Rudich, of Hawkinsville, Ga. "I have been buying here for years and intend to continue coming to this market."

"I have been connected with the mercantile business for a good many years and am showing my approval of Atlanta as a market by buying my entire stock here for my new store," said M. E. Meeks, of Alamo, Ga., who is just embarking in business for himself."

"It stands comparison with other markets and gets my business all the time," says F. W. Cannon, of Westminister, S. C.

"Many goods can be bought cheaper here than anywhere else. Other things can be bought as cheap. These facts, and the duty to support home markets, is why our firm buys all their line here," says F. B. Latimer, who has a general merchandise busines at Woodstock, Ga.

"I am going to continue to buy in Atlanta just as long as I find the values I can get here now," says Anderson Mercer, of Palestine, Ala., speaking of why he comes to the Atlanta market.

And so run the comments from the buyers in the dry goods houses, the shoe houses, the hat houses, the millinery jobbers' sales rooms and throughout the entire range of concerns that make up wholesale Atlanta.

C. W. M'CLURE OFF TO CONVENTION AND EUROPE

To Preside at National Assn. Meetings at Indianapolis, Six Weeks Abroad

C. W. McClure, head of the McClure Ten Cent company, left Atlanta Friday night for Indianapolis to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Ten Cent Merchants.

The Atlanta merchant was honored with the office of president of this association at its organization several years ago and has remained at its head ever since.

After the Indianapolis convention Mr. McClure plans to spend six weeks in Europe, sailing from New York on the Steamship Amerika August 16.

While abroad he will spend much time visiting the manufacturers from whom his company imports goods to their wholesale house in Atlanta and their chain of retail stores.

While a part of his time will be devoted to buying goods the ten cent merchant's visit to Europe is mainly to get a long delayed vacation.

HOLIDAY GOODS TRADE DEMANDS MORE QUALITY

Such Tendency in Last Five Years Has Been Very Marked

The season for selling holiday goods to the retailers, which is now getting under way, finds a higher class of such merchandise on exhibition at the jobbers' sample rooms than ever before.

That the tendency of the public is toward better class things for Christmas presents is evident from the stock records for the last ten years of Montag Brothers, large wholesale dealers in such goods.

Their buying from manufacturers is naturally varied to meet the demand. During recent years a large part of the line of cheaper holiday goods have been abandoned entirely, while larger quantities of higher-priced articles have been the rule.

"This tendency is very marked," says J. C. Mathews, of this company. "Many of the cheaper-things, such as shell novelties, papier mache articles, and goods of imitation leather have dropped off so sharply in demand that we have practically cut them out of our displays.

"Our sample rooms this year show more sterling silver novelties—to cite one illustration—than ever before. All the better things are more in demand. It is, of course, pleasing to us, but it is based on the public demand.

STAMPS GETS READY FOR BIG BARBECUE

"We had a number of callers this week," said W. O. Stamps, of Fain & Stamps, yesterday, "on account of the merchants' convention now in progress. We certainly appreciated the calls and are always glad to welcome our friends. The convention is proving a big success and we are going to make it still more enjoyable for the visitors here next week. I am a member of the barbecue committee and I know what's doing for that event. We will make it the finest event of the kind ever held in the city."

An Invitation

To Visiting Merchants:

MENACE OF MAIL ORDER COMPETITION

This Was Subject of Address Before Convention by Prominent Alabama Retailer

There is one phase of our modern business life we shall have to meet sooner or later; there is one great menace, there is one great conspirator against the very life of our existence, a competitor who asks no quarter and gives none, who is both unfair and powerful.

A few years ago this form of competition was unknown. The gigantic progress of these mail order houses the past few years show in no uncertain way the vast possibilities they may seek in the future.

The Chicago mail order houses alone sold nearly a quarter billion dollars worth of merchandise in 1912, and where did this business come from?

Your territory! My territory! They sowed catalogues; they harvested dollars. This is a twentieth century business problem, and we must solve it by progressive twentieth century methods, with sagacity, with cooperation, with systematic understanding of the points to be met.

MUST MEET IT.

It is not a matter of choice with you or with me. This is a condition we must meet as it is and not as we would have it. We would not have this hybrid competition if it was left with us, but it is not left with us. So we must meet it like men. For to what extent will this class of competition reach and what may be the effect on the mercantile life of our country? I do not wish to portray too dark a picture, but let me tell you merchants, what the result will be. First, let it be remembered that our knocks and our verbal statements against these firms count for naught. Their business increases year by year. From just a small beginning fifteen to twenty years ago you see them now going into new territory and reaching out for every advantage over the local merchant.

You find them shipping carloads of merchandise in every direction. You find they are opening up distributing depots and warehouses in all the big cities. Go to your depot, your express office, your postoffice and inquire for yourself.

You will find, too, that 75 per cent of the shipments consist largely of profit bearing merchandise, though they embrace groceries, in their shipments. Again they are making false statements in the pages of their catalogues relative to the local merchants. They say, "We can undersell your local merchant, because we buy in immense quantities, we take the entire output of a factory or several factories. We sell direct from factory to the consumer, adding a small profit. With glowing word pictures they point and describe articles misleading in the extreme.

WHAT THEY SAY.

And this is not all. They tell your customer, Mr. Merchant, right in your territory, a thousand miles from Chicago, that you can not compete with them, that you buy from a jobber, that you buy in a limited way, that you can't buy as cheap as they and to prove it they quote prices to your customers, Mr. Merchant, cheaper than you can buy your merchandise. Not for one moment do you believe they give undervalues. They certainly give values or how else could they increase year by year and pay immense dividends?

Only recently I read in a trade journal an account of warehouses being opened up in New York, by two of Chicago's largest mail order houses and in some of the largest western cities you find distributing plants under their management.

UNFAIR STATEMENTS.

This is not the only adverse phase to this proposition. Year by year through the distribution of their catalogues they seek to create a prejudice in the minds of your customers against the local merchant. They have taught your customers and led them to believe that you merchants make 100 per cent on your merchandise; that your prices are unreasonable, unfair and dishonest.

Yourcustomers will buy sugar, coffee and nails, and the staple articles, from you, Mr. Merchant, but when it comes to shoes, clothing, buggies, machines, jewelry, farm implements and the like, they send their orders to Chicago. Your customer forgets that you pay the taxes, that you contribute to churches and schools, that you have rents, clerk hire and incidentals to pay—but they forget all that when it comes to buying—and the Chicago mail order houses use this very fact now, mind you, to show why you are unable to sell so cheap. Do you catch my point? The very fact that you buy in a small way and have these expenses they use as an argument against you. They claim for themselves a minimum expense—reason they can sell so cheap—you know the local merchant is the "handy man." He takes the butter, eggs, wax, hides and farm products, and is very accommodating generally to his trade. He extends favors and credit, and his customers use him, don't you forget. Nor is this all of the greatest menace that threatens our existence.

ACQUIRING FACTORIES.

Year by year they are getting control of factory after factory, and should the Chicago mail order houses combine and form one gigantic trust and get control of all the important factories, where will the merchant be? He will be forced to buy his wares from the mail order houses. They will dictate the prices through the factories he must pay. And we can only judge the future by the past. For with the rapid spread and growth of this kind of competition the future maintenance of our position is imperiled and should command the earnest consideration of all progressive and intelligent merchants.

CLOSE RELATIONS.

We should have a better and closer relation between factory and retailer. There should be a hearty co-operation like that which this convention seeks to conserve, between the factory and merchant, so in conclusion it would be a wise policy for this convention to inaugurate some step looking to that end and bring about a vigorous, systematic comprehension of this form of competition and at the same time preserve the integrity of the merchant as an important factor in our modern civilization.

RETAILERS SHOULD FORM LOCAL ASSOCIATIONS

Lewis Declares They Could Be of Great Mutual Help to Each Other

"I am sure the southern merchant who has had the pleasure of attending this convention," said E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten Cent company, "realizes fully the necessity of an association in his home town of some kind that will tie merchants closer together and get them in line for exchanging ideas in regard to the credit they extend, and the help they employ. There could be an association formed by the merchants of any town, it matters not how small, if there i sonly one-half dozen merchants in the town they could unite together in a way that would be of great benefit to them.

"Going back to extending credit, I will say that Mr. A had bought a bill of goods from Mr. Merchant, whom we will call Mr. B, and promised to pay him in thirty days. Sixty days have gone by and he has not paid yet. Mr. B should most assuredly inform his brother merchant and make him wise along this line. Mr. A would not get a chance to sting Mr. Merchant, who we will call Mr. C, but it will be only a short time until the trade that goes to the smaller towns, would be worth a hundred cents on the dollar though it was charged for sixty days.

"I wish to say this much and hope it will be of some benefit to the merchants, those that have and those who have not attended this convention.

"In employing help one should be very particular to instruct any employe just as he would expect to be instructed himself. He should be able to offer enough inducements to cause this employe to take a smuch interest in his store as he would of his own. If he can not do this it is useless to think of making a valuable man of him.

"There are all kinds of merchants just as there are people who follow a trade for a livelihood, for instance the brick masons. One man could build his wall and it would not stand, and another brick mason could carry his wall one hundred feet high and then it would stand the gale and not fall over.

"You remember the wise man who built his house on the rock and the floods came and the winds blew but the house stood. Another foolish man built his house on the sand the rain came, and the wind blew, and the house fell and great was the fall of it. Therefore Mr. Merchant went into the business, with no experience whatever in merchandise, outside of the employing of help. Sold goods for less than they cost. Thought not that his trade did not demand. And extended credit where he should not have done so. His credit was closed down, and he wound up in bankrupt court, and great was the fall.

"The other man got some experience before going into business, bought in small lots, displayed his stock well watched his business close, kept a clean store, discounted his bills, took time to instruct his help, and great was the growth of this man."

JENKINS WRITES ON GOOD AND BAD SUCCESS

Says There Are Some Kinds of Success Really Worse Than Failure

Editor Firing Line:

Since scandles are so common and have a market value, and the exclusive stories of criminals bring high prices, covering page after page in the leading papers, why not in line with the ideals of the day give some attention to the excessive rascality of modern times that has no parallel in the world's history?

Who will tell us the truth about the purchase of legislation, about the bribery of judges, about the corruption of congress, of councils, and of communities, and the way that has been served for cunning scoundrels to secure control of the nation's wealth? What they have done is called success and men doff their hats to such high class criminals and encourage by their friendly attitude more rascality and deeper exploitation.

We would give credit to the honest success and not forget the honest unsuccessful and not forget the honest public could and should willingly share this with all honest men. Success is all some people want. They dream about it, talk about it and would ride pell-mell over the dead bodies of their victims for it.

One of the greatest dangers of the success habit is that it spoils some lovely and lovable dispositions, separates congenial companions and wipes out filial loves and friendships of long standing. In some instances we have known character ruined and minds unbalanced with the deep-seated "success idea." So many regard it as the only thing worth while. They neglect and forget the sweeter and better things of life.

Success is not everything and we know some who prefer being honest and unsuccessful to being dishonest and successful. The worship of success is an evil because it becomes the life rule at the expense of so many good qualities that can not well be spared. We meet daily with men in search of it like some wild animals in search of prey. As hunger knows no law neither does the appetite for success. It would be an unpardonable sin in their estimation to lose, therefore foul and desperate means are used if fair ones fail. The trick must be turned. They want success and must have it for with the spoils gained they can buy fine homes, automobiles, land and all the good things of earth that comes to one with it.

Success even wins the smiles, bows, nods and approval of those who are ever ready to worship at the shrine of the successful. The worship of success taints all of our institutions and gets into the lifeblood of those wanting appropriations for this and that the other, some of which are very unnecessary and all of which are an additional expense and burden to the taxpayers.

Look at our own state—Georgia—that has already gone far beyond her income to satisfy this longing and craving idea—success—in some who feel they must stand at the head. Little mercy should be shown those who ride rough-shod over the principles of honest people that they may have success.

Talk with them about it and they will become optimistic by telling us what we should do to better our names in religious, business and financial circumstances, and how to improve our opportunities in life. Give a few dollars to the church and a few more to charity and consider the account with conscience appeased and squared. But it is folish to think so because it has created and left desolation in its trail. It has changed the morals of business, the ethics of statesmanship, and perverted a nation of people more than any other one cause. It is not always superior brains that wins, and we do not believe in the theory of "survival of the fittest" altogether. It is not superior brains that win success so much as inferior conscience. If the Christian religion is true, the day of reckoning will come when there will be no accounting of either the methods employed or of the men who use them. There is another kind of success and some who are winning it, toward whom all the good will and helpfulness of honest people is due, and that is him who has blazed the way by sheer force of effort and intelligence, backed by character.

These have succeeded as traveling salesmen, as merchants, as laboring men in making an honest living for themselves and families.

They do not resort to underhanded methods, invent lies and set traps to weak your influence and lower and make you appear in an unfavorable light, but are satisfied and contented. They have made mistakes, perhaps bad ones, have suffered and the loved ones at home have suffered with them and for them, but so long as enemies have spared their lives they will come back with the fulness of hope and strength and high resolve and make good.

We are willing to doff our hats to success of this kind and love them as we do ourselves for having passed through the fiery furnace and coming out unsinged.

Respectfully,

W. M. JENKINS.

Atlanta, Ga., August 8, 1913.

Tom Yon, Florida road man here for convention weeks at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, has a sales record for the first week that is possibly not equaled by any other salesman in the city. He has been visited by every one of his company's Florida customers who registered during the week, and sold fall goods to every one of them.

One of Atlanta's Leading Light Industries That Is Well Worth Visiting — Work of Atlanta Designers Copied in New York

Just how neckties are made, covering the process from the bolts of silk to the labeling, is what will be shown visiting merchants by the All Star Manufacturing company this week and next.

The company invites every delegate who comes to Atlanta to pay a visit to its factory, at 66-70 West Mitchell street, and see how the Atlanta-made ties are turned out.

There are fine points in designing styles for neckwear, as well as other articles of dress, and Atlanta's neckwear men claim to have these fine points down just about as fine as any manufacturer anywhere.

Speaking of this feature, M. L. Minor, an official of the All Star Manufacturing company, and the first man to start the tie-making industry in Atlanta, cites a recent incident to show how Atlanta designers are regarded by their competitors in the east.

"Just last week," says Mr. Minor, "I learned of no less than three traveling men from New York, representing neckwear factories there, who bought some of our makes of ties from retail stores in Atlanta.

"It is a known fact to us in the business that designs originated here in Atlanta have been copied by some of our big competitors in the north. And yet some dealers think we copy all our patterns from others and that they are going to headquarters because they go farther from home."

Though the All Star Manufacturing company is a new name on the Atlanta firing line of manufacturers, except for the name feature it is an old and well-established business. The new name was adopted following the recent consolidation of the Warren Manufacturing company and the Robinson Neckwear company, both of which have been making neckwear in Atlanta for many years.

RHODES FORCE GIVES CHIEF SURPRISE PARTY

Mr. Ernest L. Rhodes, president of the Ernest L. Rhodes company, was given quite a surprise party at his summer home, "Hill Crest Villa," at Austell, Ga., Friday evening, by the employes of his millinery house. The occasion was in honor of his fiftieth birthday.

After a hard day's work on Friday in spite of his anniversary and with numerous interruptions from friends, at 5 o'clock he was glad to leave for a quiet evening at home. But the plotters were at work with the assistance of his wife and there was to be no quiet time for Ernest L. Rhodes. A friend kindly delayed his trip home by an automobile ride so as to give his office force time to reach there first, via train. They reached Austell first and the picture of a beautifully decorated lawn with Japanese lanterns, ferns and pot plants, with his family and friends waiting, was the pleasant and gorgeous sight which greeted him.

The long table was arranged on the lawn and was laden with everything good to eat. In the center with a mirror for its background was an immense birthday cake, with fifty candles, whose brilliancy added an increased pleasure to the merry crowd.

...t the greatest surprise of the evening came in the presentation of the silver service—a gift from the employes of the Ernest L. Rhodes company. It was an elegant silver compote, with twelve silver plates and one large silver serving spoon—each piece being engraved with an old English "R." Mr. Claude Jones, vice president, made an eloquent presentation speech to "Ernest L. Rhodes, as a friend and fellow-worker."

Mrs. Rhodes very gracefully played the role of hostess for the evening and was assisted by her mother, Mrs. W. Hayden Jones, and by Mr. Rhodes' mother, Mrs. F. P. Rhodes, of Lexington, Va., and little Misses Harriet and Virginia, the charming little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes. Just before leaving the guests were surprised with a watermelon cutting upon the lawn which was an added pleasure. The entire event was a splendid token of esteem and love in which Ernest L. Rhodes is held by his employes and as such will be remembered for a long time.

Another new store is that of F. L. McMahan at Tallapoosa, Ga. This is not a new enterprise, but a fine, large brick store building will replace the structure that he occupied before being burned out several months ago. Mr. McMahon bought heavily in the Atlanta market while here last week for the convention.

DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES SHOW BIG INCREASE

Wholesaler Tells of Revolutionizing Developments in Drug Trade of Today

What the growth and development of trade in that part of their stock known as sundries has meant to the retail druggists can be surmised from some interesting comparisons and comments from I. A. Hirshberg, president of the Hirshberg company, wholesalers of that line of goods.

"Today 50 per cent, I would estimate, of the average druggists' investment in stock is in sundries," says Mr. Hirshberg. "How fast it is increasing I can realize best by recalling the conditions ten years ago when I started in this business. Then 25 per cent would easily have covered the average proportion in sundries.

"In the city stores the range of articles carried under the head of sundries is ever widening, but it is in the small town and country drug stores that the great change has occurred.

"Fifteen or twenty years ago a person entering a country drug store would see practically nothing, but drugs and medicating on the shelves. The stores were mostly small affairs conducted by physicians for their own convenience, some of them closed part of the day while the proprietor made his professional calls.

"Today the small town drug store is the most attractive store in town with a thousand and one articles displayed which have no connection with the matter of serving sick people.

"With a splendid modern soda fountain, a cigar counter, and his variety of novelties coming under the head of sundries, the druggist has an active business not dreamed of by the old-time pharmacist. And the development of the sundries line has brought it about.

"The number of articles so classed is increasing at a very rapid rate. Nearly every new, high class novelty for any purpose is marketed through the drug stores. Thousands of salesmen with new things in the line of novelties are calling on the drug trade. There are at least twice as many articles as ten years ago.

"The great difference between sundries and drugs is that trade on the former can be built up because they largely sell by display while the medicines sell, of course, only on absolute necessity to buy.

"The druggist needs a new name. Druggist no longer covers it."

Well-Known Jobber Employs Some Unusual Words During Convention Week

Some of the men in the notion department at the Ragan-Malone company had a slight suspicion several days ago that W. C. Barnwell, the genial and hard working manager of the department, was possibly being mentally affected by the pressure of convention preparations.

It was because he suddenly without warning starting flinging around some very odd sounding words. They were figuring over some statistics at the time when he turned on Nat Gunter and said:

"Here, you statisticalize this. Make the best statisticalization you can. Let us see just how good a statisticalazator you are."

The notion man declares he is still quite sane, however, and insists these are perfectly good words if they're not in Webster's. Anyway when they were shot at Mr. Gunter he immediately became the capitulazator.

C. J. Barnett has joined the sales force of the J. K. Orr Shoe company and will go on the road for them next week.

He will travel in Florida, making headquarters at Ocala, which has been his home for some years.

Mr. Barnett is a former Florida traveling man who will be remembered by knights of the sample case in that state who have been traveling there for some years. For the last few years he has been connected with a retail mercantile business at Ocala, but prior to that time was on the road selling shoes.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

Convention Speaker Declares That $690,000 Is the Loss by Fire in the United States Every Day—Advocates a Campaign of Education to Bring About More Care With Reference to Fires

One of the most interesting addresses at the Southern Merchants' convention was the one delivered by H. E. Choate, treasurer of the J. K. Orr Shoe company, at Friday's session on the importance of merchants keeping their stock insured. The address follows:

I could wish that so important a subject had been assigned to abler hands.

It is to be presumed that in a general way no clear-minded business man would for a moment oppose a negative answer to this query; but, unfortunately, a great many of us will accept as a matter of course the advisability and safety of certain lines of conduct and afterwards assume a risk in disregard of such rules as far as we are individually concerned.

Ben Franklin wisely observes that "experience is a hard school, but fools will learn in no other and scarce in that." I think our philosopher might have substituted "men" for "fools," for I am persuaded that the maxim applies to the human family as a whole, though of course in varying degrees; for it seems that most real progress must be had at the price of painful experiences of one sort or another rather than through deliberate planning.

Take, for example, the progress of life insurance. Less than two generations ago it was regarded as a commodity to be acquired only by men of large means; it was even opposed by well-meaning men upon moral grounds.

LIFE INSURANCE.

But how do we regard the matter now? It is not stating the case too strongly to say that we have come to look upon it as species of immorality for a man who has not an estate sufficient to keep those dependent upon him from want to neglect to provide for their protection in case of his death by life insurance.

And so from that form of insurance which affords protection in case of death to those dependent upon us, we have developed a great variety of forms of insurance, covering almost every contingency that is likely to overtake us—from having our pockets picked to housemaid's knee.

Many of these forms are more or less speculative because they cover contingencies that are more or less remote and that do not affect us vitally when they happen, and their discussion has no place here.

But there is a form of insurance that is vital to every business man—every merchant especially—and that is fire insurance.

I will not say that it has a superior claim to life insurance, but certainly there are circumstances in which it is of equal importance.

In the one case we protect our families in case of our death; in the other we protect our capital, which protects our families not only after our death, but during our lifetime. Not only that, but it helps to protect our credit, which is itself a pretty handy asset for most of us to have around; and, in case of fire, protects that greatest of all assets—our commercial honor!

HUMAN SIDE OF LIFE.

In my experience as a credit man, I see a good deal of what we are used to call, for the want of a better expression, the human side of life. I have seen men under stress of great and trying difficulties exhibit a resourcefulness, a courage and a rectitude of character that I had not suspected them of combining in their make-up; and on the other hand, I have seen men who were ordinarily honest yield to pressure of circumstances where I had expected to find them steadfast.

I have occasionally been disappointed in men, sorely disappointed in some, but I could never, even when I had been severely stung, agree with the critic who declared that the more he saw of men, the more highly he thought of dogs. It is my deliberate judgment that most men are essentially honest and the percentage of men who do not want to do right under all conditions is comparatively small, but the trouble is that under the acid test we do not so much yield our good intentions as that our moral vision becomes somewhat clouded.

And so, I have seen men who never had any other idea than to pay their honest debts, when overtaken by a fire without adequate protection, or with no protection at all, shift the burden of the loss, or a part of the loss, upon their creditors and not them, and that with some sacrifice and, to my mind, a less sacrifice, have paid in full. They had simply convinced themselves that the fire was an act of Providence and that Providence sometimes working in a round-about fashion was hitting at their creditors anr not them, and that anyway, it was through no fault of theirs that the fire occurred.

There is a great deal of misdirected sympathy for men whom we loosely class as unfortunate who are, in reality, simply improvident. They are victims of circumstances simply because they do not observe ordinary precautions against those circumstances.

There are a great many exceptions I well know, and my sympathy has ever been responsive to those lines of Burns springing from the anguish of his own bitter experience

"They who fa' in fortune's strife,
Their fate we should na' censure—
For still the important end of life
They equally may answer."

I may sympathize with the man who is overtaken by disaster, even though he could have avoided it, but I own a greater respect for the man who has the forethought and good judgment to fortify himself against such a mishap.

NOT A USELESS EXPENSE.

Some men look upon fire insurance as a useless expense. They will tell you that they have been in business for twenty years and have never had a fire; and the only thing that will convert that type of man to the idea of fire protection is for him to be overtaken by a disastrous fire and have wiped out overnight the accumulations of his twenty years of toil, hardship and self-denial, when he has to face the world without capital, without credit and almost without hope.

Others will tell you that the rate is so high they can't afford it, overlooking the fact that the rate is high because the hazard is great, which is the strongest reason in the world why they should cary insurance.

I want to tell you gentleman that in my humble judgment a business that can not pay for fire protection has no license to exist. It is just as legitimately a part of the cost of doing business as is the freight, or the taxes, or the rent you pay, and your profits should be figured accordingly.

I admit that in the small towns and in the country the rate often seems prohibitive, but there is a well-grounded reason for this, and I want to say a word along that line.

When Henry Grady met General Sherman in Boston, and, referring to the late unpleasantness, jocularly accused that general of being "somewhat careless about fire" when he visited this city in the sixties, he touched upon one of the chief characteristics of the American people.

Do you know, gentlemen, that this country pays to the demon Fire a daily toll of $690,000—do you get that, $690,000 every day of the year?—or approximately $250,000,000 annually? Or to put it another way, about $2.50 for every man, woman and child in the United States. Do you realize that this is from 10 to 20 times greater than the per capita loss of European countries?

WHAT'S TO BE DONE?

What are our business men doing to overcome this largely preventable loss?

Not a great deal, am afraid, in proportion to the gravity of the problem, though I am glad to say that the largest organization of business men in the country, the National Association of Credit Men, is making a systematic and persistent effort to stimulate thought along that line.

The truth is that until recent years we have been supinely indifferent to the situation, fondly cherishing the delusion that the insurance companies pay the bills.

"I should worry—and help the insurance companies swell their dividends," is about the attitude of the average man. "Let them bother."

Never was there a more fallacious idea than that the insurance companies pay these losses. The insurance companies pay not one penny of them—they merely collect and distribute the amount; and for doing this and for guaranteeing the payment they charge a commission. But this property, amounting to approximately a quarter of a billion dollars and representing so much of the productive energy of our people, is absolutely annihilated every year and is a tax, not upon the insurance companies, but upon the people who pay the insurance premiums.

How can the rates be reduced? you may ask. By the prevention or minimizing of the fire loss, because the rates are, in most cases, the reflection of the hazard, as ascertained by the law of averages, on the particular class of property you wish to insure.

MORE CARE NEEDED.

To reach the source of the trouble, fundamentally, we need to start with the education of every child in habits of observation and prudence regarding the things that cause fires, but to answer the question more nearly within the lines of the purpose of my remarks, I wish to offer a few simple suggestions.

Get behind your municipal authorities and see that necessary provisions are made for the prevention of fires, such as proper building restrictions, the requirement that such things as waste paper, straw and other inflammable materials be not allowed to accumulate on a person's premises, awaiting the carelessly thrown match or the vagrant spark; that oils, gasoline and other combustibles be so isolated or safeguarded as to minimize the chance of their taking fire; that adequate facilities for extinguishing a flame once started be provided.

If you do not live in a municipality, or even if you do, a few buckets of water kept on hand ready for use in an emergency, will often save the loss of a building, or mayhap a community. But better than this, consult some rating bureau, such as the Southeastern Tariff association, whose headquarters are right here in Atlanta, and ask them what you should do to reduce your rate.

Get your neighbors to co-operate in this, for numbers always count. But don't overlook that lower rates must, in a majority of cases, be predicated upon improved conditions and that the burden of making those improvements rests upon your or your community.

In conclusion, I want to say a word about insurance contracts. First, make sure that the company behind the policy is able to keep its contract. Read your policy carefully and if you have more than one on the same property, see that the written portion of all the policies are in exact agreement with each other.

Notice carefully what the companies require in regard to books of account and keep your books where they won't be destroyed by the fire that destroys the property insured.

Keep up your expirations and have renewals delivered to you a few days before the expiration of the old policies.

The local agent may b ea bully good fellow personally, but just remember that if he hasn't written the renewal when the fire overtakes you, the company is more than apt to prove an alibi.

CHANGE IN MANAGEMENT OF VOLLMER MAN'F'G CO.

Frank B. Green, who has been associated for the last year with the Vollmer Manufacturing company, manufacturing jewelers in the Moore building, is now at the head of this company.

H. J. Vollmer, who started the business here several years ago, has disposed of his interest and has moved to Jacksonville, Fla.

No change will be made in the immediate future in the name of the concern, which is incorporated under this style.

The growth of the business was rapid under the direction of the former head and Mr. Green shows his intention of further development by plans for the installation of some new machinery and additions to the force. The company draws its trade from the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

Well, the Show's on and the going is powerful good.
There's been a whole lot learned here in Atlanta this past week and there are bunches of bright ideas tucked away ready for use in the coming days of business all over the country.
One of the biggest things that the merchants from out-of-Atlanta are finding out all the time is that Atlanta has no superior, no not one, when it comes to showing the goods and giving the values.
Atlanta's reputation as a market is none of your mushrooms. It has grown slowly, steadily and because it has been carefully cultivated.
You merchants who haven't yet put in a few days at this Convention, come on in. Get here tomorrow and stay all week. Anyhow come if only to spend a day.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

S. E. Brannon, of Jonas Brothers & Co., states that his company is still receiving cucumbers at their salting station at Ellenwood, Ga. "We have already bought 7,500 bushels of cucumbers," said he, "and we expect this number to run close to 10,000 before the season is over."

H. L. Singer, of the H. L. Singer company, left Saturday for several weeks' stay in the North Carolina mountains.

Hon. W. P. Smith, representative of the American Tobacco company, was a visitor at Fain & Stamps Saturday.

Ben C. Jones, traveler for the McCord-Stewart company, was in Atlanta several days last week entertaining his merchant friends from his northeast Georgia territory.

So successful has Bill Quarles been in helping advertise Red Seal shoes that he is now wearing a watch fob of the famous drink, Coca-Cola. He is very popular among all the big advertisers. The force at Fain & Stamps say they wish he would help advertise shirts, collars and other such wearables so that he might share the samples with them.

L. C. Miller, of Jones Brothers company, last week secured a mixed carload of the Jones products for shipment to Greenville, S. C. R. E. Dawson, of this company, is working on pool car shipment of mixed goods at Jacksonville, Fla.

J. C. Owens, of Fain & Stamps, who spent last week on vacation at his home at Concord, Ga., was in Atlanta a brief time Friday, but returned Friday night so as to be at home in time to attend Saturday morning the revival services that have been in progress in Concord the past week. Mr. Owens was a regular attendant at the services in the mornings, but devoted the afternoons to fishing.

Cliff Edwards and Will Gaston, accompanied by their wives, went on a fishing trip Saturday at Mr. Edwards' home near Marietta. When they went to examine their automobiles to see if everything was in readiness they discovered that somehow the cars had been plentifully supplied with liquid refreshments. They pretended great astonishment at the find and marveled how it came to pass. But as they were attended by their wives it is thought that the liquid will not be given as much attention as might otherwise be the case.

A. L. Calvin, with Fulton Market company, is spending today at his old home at Locust Grove, Ga. He says he had quite a number of his customers here for the convention.

J. A. Joyner, member of Atlanta council, United Commercial Travelers, and a former knight of the grip, has established a new up-to-date grocery store at Jackson, Ga. He has named his new store "The Comulgee." The opening and selection of the name were celebrated with the awarding of prizes.

J. C. Mason, of the Consolidated Paper company, spent three days last week in Atlanta among the convention greeters. None enjoy mingling with a jolly crowd of merchants more than Mr. Mason. As usual he will spend Sunday at his home at Cuthbert, Ga.

E. E. Shyer, of the Consolidated Paper company, came in Saturday from Augusta, Ga., after a good week's business. C. S. Farley, of this firm, was at headquarters a few days last week from his home at North, S. C.

Fain & Stamps shipped two cases of Georgia Beauty brand of Georgia cane syrup to Hartford, Conn., last week. A resident of Hartford and his family summering at Indian Spring, Ga., learned to like the famous Georgia product and when they returned to their home they found they could not do without it. So they had two cases shipped them through Fain & Stamps.

W. R. Simpson, of Jones Brothers company, turned in some good business last week from Columbus, Ga.

W. P. Streater, of the E. L. Adams company, was the chief singer at the reception at the Piedmont Driving club Thursday. He mounted a chair and lead the chorus through many of the favorite old songs.

Among the visitors at the E. L. Adams company during the past week were W. O. Ham, of Ham & Carter Co., of Jackson, Ga.; J. M. Austin, of Kenwood, Ga., and L. H. Coe, of Estanollee, Ga.

While the fertilizer has not yet fairly begun, W. E. McCalla, the wholesale dealer in fertilizers, is getting ready for the approaching season. He uses the Firing Line ad columns and lets the trade know what he has to sell.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Thornton, of Athens, are spending the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wallace, of Atlanta. Mr. Thornton travels for Talmadge Brothers, and company, of Athens.

J. B. Thornton, of Athens, and R. L. Wallace, of Atlanta, paid the Firing Line a pleasant visit yesterday. These two firing liners are among the most wide awake and alert knights of the grip in the state.

ENTERPRISE CO. ENJOYS LARGE INCREASE OF BUSINESS OVER LAST YEAR'S RECORD

Manufacturer of Ladies' and Misses' Dresses Ships Goods to All Parts of United States, Big Factory Turns Out High Quality Garments – Sold in Department Stores Everywhere

A 30 to 40 per cent increase in total business over corresponding month of last year is the record of one of Atlanta's manufacturers steadily so far in 1913.

It is the Enterprise Manufacturing company that is making this showing. Sol Wiseberg, one of the officials of this company, gives not only this interesting statement of the growth of their shipments going all over the United States, but says that for the last six weeks their business in local territory has been well ahead of last year.

"Fall business is going to be fine unless all signs fail," says Mr. Wiseberg. "We have had a good increase over last year, largely because our customers are scattered all over the country, but there has been a big improvement in nearby territory in the last month and I am very optimistic over the general outlook for this fall in Georgia."

One hundred and twenty-seven people are employed in the humming factory which turns out the ladies and misses dresses this concern sells. It has been established in Atlanta since 1871. In their factory is the largest cloth cutting table in the south, a stretch of hardwood 110 feet in length.

The company has its designers in New York who send patterns of the latest styles to the factory in Atlanta. The product is sold largely to the big department stores throughout the country.

T. J. Brooke, of T. H. Brooke & Co., accompanied by his family, is spending several weeks' vacation on the Florida seashore.

E. L. Adams, of the E. L. Adams company, will spend this week-end with his family at Indian Spring, Ga.

RIVIERE COMMENTS ON FELLOW-SALESMAN

BY HAL RIVIERE.
City Salesman McCord-Stewart Co.

On the other hand, take Mr. Hugh A. McDonald. Now when I say take Mr. McDonald, I don't mean take him in reality, bodily, and go off with him. As he is a gay young widower, some one who has a string on him might object to your taking him and so you would get in trouble. But I mean consider his case; think over his qualities and disposition; take him as opposed in temperament to Mr. Burge. You will find they are exactly opposite in all essential points. Mr. Burge is dynamic; Mr. Mac is static. If there were such things as an irresistible object and an immovable body, Mr. Burge would represent the former and Mr. Mac the latter. For Mr. McDonald is immovable in his integrity and in his high conception of all that goes to make up a high-minded Christian gentleman. These qualities and his sweetness of disposition have won him the love of all who know him and the title of "The Bishop" has been bestowed upon him.

That is just the reason he goes on year after year and sells the same customers in that easy way of his, holding their love and respect and confidence, for they know he will never deceive them.

But alas for the frailty of humanity! Even The Bishop will bear watching. It seems a pity to tell it on him, but a high conception of truth makes me feel it my duty to tell to all interested, that he has traits that will bear watching. It is whispered that he has become very much interested in a certain pink lady that has been seen frequently around our place of business of late, and that he thinks so much of her that he goes all over his territory telling his friends about her and continually sings her praises. Now if a young fellow like myself should become enamoured of a pink lady and go gallivanting over the country talking about her, it would not seem so bad; but to put it very mildly indeed, it is a little unseemly that such things are being told on The Bishop. However, any time that he and the pink lady want to stop at my house, they will find the latch string hanging out.

NEW MILLINERY BUYERS CAME FROM MOUNTAINS TO THE GULF

Great Fall Wholesale Millinery Season Proper Opens Monday—This Market Greatest in South—Atlanta Manufacturers Sell Annually $750,000 Worth of Ladies' and Children's Hats.

BY ERNEST L. RHODES, of Ernest L. Rhodes Company.

The past week of the Southern Merchants' convention has brought a goodly number of new millinery buyers to Atlanta from the many different sections that her energetic firms cater to.

With our own house, we have had them from the mountains of North Carolina to the gulf; from the great Atlantic to the Mississippi, and we know the other houses have, likewise.

However, the coming week opens the great millinery season proper, and all of our jobbing houses commence Monday, August 11, showing their full line of pattern hats and novelties, augmented by many other houses from numerous cities. They have been forced to realize the fact that if they desire any business out of this territory they must send their salesmen to Atlanta, as this city is recognized as the great millinery center of the south, that our jobbers are the most aggressive in this country, and that many thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise are imported direct by her jobbers and manufacturers.

We hear much of Atlanta made goods, yet there is one line that is not well known. That is the manufacturer of ladies' and children's hats. There are over 400 people employed in the three factories here whose annual output amounts to $750,000 a year. These goods are sold by all the leading jobbing houses throughout this country, bearing the tickets of the houses who sell them, instead of the manufacturer's ticket; hence one could not realize the amount of millinery manufactured in Atlanta.

Nor are hats alone all that is manufactured here. We maintain in our own establishment a frame plant, also we manufacture our own tailored hats. But every year Atlanta gains an increase in manufactory and in the variety of goods manufactured.

On being asked why I located in Atlanta, I replied that Atlanta was the core of the apple of the south; that there was no section growing so rapidly in wealth, and she is destined to be the foremost part of this country.

Making an Account

"I want a nickel's worth o' chawkiut candy," said the small boy to the clerk in the corner drug store.

When his wants were attended to the clerk waited expectantly, but no payment appeared to be forthcoming.

"Where's your nickel?" he demanded.

"Why, you charge this to Dr. Peters," said the kid, with a show of confidence.

"Nothing doing. Your father said I wasn't to charge anything you bought. You ain't to have anything unless you've got the money with you. Besides, why should I charge it to Dr. Peters? He ain't your pa."

"Now, that's all right. I had a nickel, but I swallered it. An' I'm goin' right up to th' doctor's office, an' he'll git it. So you jest charge it to him."

Dr. Peters told us this one, so we know its true.—Exchange.

CONVENTION DELEGATES PLAN FOR PERMANENT ORGANIZATION

They Elect Temporary Officers and Will Meet in Atlanta in February to Adopt Constitution and By-Laws – Many Resolutions Passed

The last formal session of the Southern Merchants' convention held Friday resolved itself into a temporary organization of the Southern States Merchants' association, which will be perfected with a permanent organization and constitutionand by-laws at another general meeting of southern retailers to be held in Atlanta in February, 1914.

The temporary officers chosen were J. W. Vaughan, of Cartersville, president; R. O. Crouch, vice president; T. E. Smith and H. T. Moore, secretary and treasurer.

The plan of teh temporary organization was presented in the report of a committee, consisting of J. W. Vaughan, R. O. Crouch and H. E. Choate.

COMMITTE'S REPORT.

The committee's report is as follows:

We, the committee appointed to formulate a plan of temporary organization of this body, beg leave to submit the following report:

We recognize the necessity of mature deliberation in the working out of a comprehensive plan, and we therefore have contented ourselves with suggesting only an outline for a tentative organization, which, if adopted, will enable those in charge to proceed with the perfecting of plans for a permanent organization.

We recommend the adoption of the following as the plan of a temporary organiaztion, to be made permanent as hereinafter provided.

First: That the organization be known as Southern States Merchants' association.

Second: That the headquarters of said association be in Atlanta, Ga.

Third: That the object of said organization be the co-operation among its members in all things calculated to advance their interests and the welfare of our section.

Fourth: That the executive officers of said association consist of a president, a first vice president, a second vice president and a secretary-treasurer, and that said officers be elected at this meeting.

Fifth: That a committee be appointed by the incoming president to formulate a charter and a set of by-laws, to be reported for adoption at a general meeting to be held in Atlanta, in February, 1914, at which all southern merchants here represented and others who may be invited by the officers may be present and take part.

We recommend that the officers, in the absence of a charter and by-laws, be empowered and authorized to do such things as may be necessary to prepare the way for a permanent organization at the meeting to be held in February, 1914, the exact date to be left to the officers to determine.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED.

The convention passed a number of important resolutions before adjournment Friday, which were presented by a committee composed of W. A. Branon, M. S. Cantey, and Bernard Suttles. Diversified farming, the organization of cattle improvement clubs, larger appropriation by congress for preventing floods in the Mississippi river, and the work of the Retail Merchants' association in Georgia were all indorsed by the convention. Thanks were tendered to the wholesalers, manufacturers and bankers of Atlanta for their hospitality and it was recommended that all the convention proceedings be printed in pamphlet form and distributed.

The following was the resolution on diversified farming:

1. Whereas, Statistics show that the cotton crop of Georgia sold for less money than amount of grain, hay, meats and dairy products, shipped into our state during the year 1912.

2. Whereas, It has been demonstrated by the Boys' Corn clubs of the state, that grain can be profitably grown.

3 Wheeras, Diversified farming and rotation of crops will preserve the soil, give general prosperity, and save the credit of farmer, merchant and banker.

Therefore, be it resolved, That we, the southern merchants in convention assembled, recommend to all people throughout the cotton belt of our southern states, diversified farming and the growing of cotton only as a surplus money crop.

The following was the resolution on the organization of cattle improvement clubs:

Whereas, The Southern Merchants' association in convention assembled have heard the plan for the improvement of the grade of cattle and hogs, now being raised by the farmers of Georgia, as outlined by Mr. W. H. White, Jr., in his address, and

Whereas, We consider this plan both practical and effective, believing that it is to the advantage of both merchant and farmer to better the grade of cattle and hogs raised.

Be it resolved, That ach and every member of this association be urged to advocate the forming of a club or clubs in his community and to lend his aid to the betterment of the farmer most profitable by-roduct, good grade cattle and hogs.

Returns to Old Firm

H. J. M'DONALD,
Popular salesman, who has returned to the Atlanta Woodenware company. He was formerly with them for fourteen years.

How Much?

The old-fashioned farmer, who liked nothing more than to dicker, bobs up now and then to rub elbows with the moderns.

In a department store recently one of the old-fashioned kind approached the clerk and inquired:

"How much are you asking for rubber boots today?"

Then, when he was told the price, he looked wise and queried:

"And how much are you gettin'?"—Exchange.

ON WAY TO CLUB RECEPTION

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE CONVENTION

W. T. Reel, one of the merchants attracted to Atlanta by the convention, is now a supporter of the Atlanta market. He became a new customer of some of the Atlanta jobbers and says he is coming back. He is from Edgefield, S. C., and has heretofore bought largely in other cities.

D. B. Meadows, with the Gramling-Spalding company, after a week in Atlanta looking after visiting buyers, will be back in his territory this week.

M. E. Meeks, of Alamo, Ga., returned home Friday to prepare for the opening of his new general merchandise store which he has scheduled for the 15th of this month. He spent several days here attending the convention and buying the stock for the new store.

The two far away territory men of the Ragan-Malone company have stood in the front ranks on the sales record of the week at the Ragan-Malone company. They are Frank Corry and A. R. Whitmeyer.

L. B. Robinson, of the A. M. Robinso company, said yesterday: "We have all been on the jump every day of the week and are looking for business to be even better next week."

P. D. Yates, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, says he even expects more visiting merchants here this week than last and this company says the business of the first week was beyond their expectations.

Thousands of Horses and Vehicles are being used constantly.

They cost less and last longer than any other means of travel where distance is not too great.

We are now replenishing our stock of Buggies, Surreys, Phaetons, Carts, Spring and Farm Wagons in carload lots, which enables us to offer best quality and variety at uniformly low prices.

SEEING SHOES MADE

During the week several hundred of the South's best merchants have found profit and pleasure in a visit to

The Red Seal Shoe Factory

An hour spent there gives one an intimate acquaintance with the hundred or more processes involved in shoe making, such knowledge as could not be gained elsewhere in a lifetime.

A merchant and his clerks cannot know too much about the goods they sell.

Come to Atlanta this week and let us show you, too, how good shoes are made.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

CONVENTION ECHOES

Doings and Sayings of the Great Gathering

CONVENTION ECHOES—Firing line.

M. T. Chapman, of Butler, Ga.; John Shelnutt, of Bremen, Ga.; B. M. England and F. W. Cannon, Westminster, S. C., and H. G. Smith, of Blakely, Ga., were among the end-of-the-week buyers at the Ward-Truitt company.

L. M. Wells, from Ficklin, Ga., was one of the visitors buying dry goods and hats.

Since the oldest attaches of the Ragan-Malone company can remember, J. A. Rowland, of Crawford, Ga., has been a customer of that house. He was one of the buyers of the week.

D. L. Adams, of West Point, Ga., one of the best merchants in the state, always looks up Morris Croft, of the Ragan-Malone company, when he comes to the conventions—or any other time he comes to Atlanta. When he doesn't buy some addition to his stock from the Ragan-Malone salesman he calls anyway to talk over old times. Mr. Croft worked in his store when a youngster.

Lumpkin, Ga. was well represented at the convention last week by three merchants, C. H. Patterson, G. W. Fugh and E. C. Hobbs.

C. T. Gauze, traveler for Montag Brothers, who came in from the road several days ago, will remain in the city through the second week of the convention.

Leopold Haas, with Montag Brothers, will spend the next two weeks on a vacation trip through the east. He will visit the Thousand Islands and Lake Champlain.

M. M. Stanaland, city salesman of the A. M. Robinson company, says the out-of-town men with their visiting buyers aren't getting all the business. He sold one of his biggest bills of the season Friday.

J. A. Addy, with the M. C. Kiser company, is not content with selling the Shield Brand shoes to shoe stores, department stores and other regular dealers in shoes. He recently sold a large stock to a buggy and furniture company, persuading them to put in a special shoe department handling his line.

J. R. Thornton, salesman in Florida for the S. P. Richards company, will be off the road until September 1, when the new season of his company starts. He is in Atlanta at present.

Carlton Hanes, with the Ragan-Malone company, has developed a good business during the convention through his special sample room in the Kimball House, making sales there out of regular hours.

B. L. Fox, Georgia traveler for Montag Brothers, will be in Atlanta for the next two months looking after his house trade on holiday goods.

C. W. Bohler, of the McClure Ten Cent company, spent most of last week in South Carolina arranging final details for the opening next Saturday at Union, S. C., of the ninth store of the McClure company's chain of retail stores and also looking over the field for likely locations for other McClure stores.

One of the buyers at the Silvey & Dougherty Hat Co. yesterday was L. A. Willis, from Rayle, Ga.

Garland M. Turner, who travels in Georgia for the Silvey & Dougherty Hat Co., was just about the most active traveling man in Atlanta last week. There were very few merchants from his territory that he failed to find and make visitors to his company's place.

W. O. Beard, the Gramling-Spalding company traveler, is again devoting all his time to selling Shield Brand shoes and doing it with enthusiasm, too—for the other job he had of helping persuade the legislature to create Griggs county is turning out successful.

The three automobiles the J. K. Orr company used for taking visiting merchants out to the factory to see Red Seal shoes made were kept so busy that another car had to be pressed into service and then some had to make the trip on the street cars.

They say at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company that C. J. Williamson has always been regarded as a self-winding mechanism that never runs down until last Wednesday, when the press of business brought on by convention week had him calling for relief.

Frank P. Morgan, Alabama traveler for the J. K. Orr Shoe company, came over from his Alabama territory yesterday to be here for the second week of the convention.

The J. K. Orr Shoe company has a number of long distance men of the road staff here for the convention. From Mississippi there are three, Joe Chesnutt, John Carter and Jim Gilbert, and the three have been responsible for a number of Mississippi merchants coming.

Sam Cheek, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, tells the story of one sale of the week that shows where the Atlanta market stands with one merchant, anyway. This merchant had free transportation in his pocket to take him on to Baltimore, but bought here instead and called off the trip east.

Walter Brown, who works Alabama trade for the Orr Shoe company, will be here this week. The salesman from Slaytown never misses a barbecue.

The biggest sale of the week at the Silvey & Dougherty Hat Co. was made by B. H. H. Roan—"Big Hickory Handle" Roan, to be correct.

E. S. Harrison, traveler for the S. P. Richards company, is quite seriously ill at his home in Atlanta. He is not expected to be able to return to business for at least a month.

L. S. Peterson, of the Brown, Perryman & Greene company staff, who before this season has been traveling for a New York house, is attending his first Atlanta merchants' convention, and admits he has certainly been missing a valuable opportunity heretofore.

J. D. Robinson, head of the A. M. Robinson company, carries off the honors for taking the largest order of the week at that house. It was a bill sold to a merchant operating a syndicate of stores.

E. L. Kerrison was one of the busiest salesmen in town, mixing with his customers last week, and he is there as a mixer, too.

An opening bill sold to a North Carolina man was one of the features of the week's business that was most pleasing to the Ragan-Malone company. This new merchant came from the outskirts of the Atlanta wholesale district and shows the name the city has among the merchants of that section.

Arnold S. Harris, Florida man of the A. M. Robinson company, will miss the convention because of several pressing engagements on the road.

Jesse W. Bates, J. K. Orr company's traveler and big T. P. A., is spending this Sunday in Atlanta instead of a quiet day at Macon as he usually does. His family has gone to Wrightsville Beach.

"Aragon Jim" is the moniker that has become attached to J. R. Burton, who travels middle Georgia for the A. M. Robinson company—and he encourages the use of it. You see, this Index includes his name and the name of his company's grand of goods. What could be better? He is thinking of printing it on his sample trunks.

All of the Brown, Perryman & Greene company salesmen will be here through this week.

Charles Brown, of the Dade County Furniture company, Miami, Fla., was one of the convention visitors from the faraway territory last week. He spent a part of his time placing a large order with the Rosenfeld company.

Madison, Fla., was represented last week by Mr. Lanier, of the Madison Drug company.

T. L. Myers, from Rockledge, Ga., said at the Silvey & Dougherty Hat Co., where he was a visitor the other day, that conditions in his community are excellent for fall business.

J. M. Frankel, of the Rosenfeld company, is off this week for a three months' trip in Tennessee, Kentucky and Indiana.

BAYLIS COMPANY WILL SHOW VISITORS IDEAL FILING SYSTEM FOR MERCHANTS

Will Demonstrate What Up-to-Date Improvements Have Accomplished in the Way of Providing for a Compact, Safe Receptacle for All Books and Papers

Filing letters and records so that they can be found after they have been filed—a compact, convenient arrangement of all papers and books. What merchant has not puzzled over what is the very best way to settle this problem incidental to carrying on any business?

Over at the display of the Baylis Office Equipment company they have fixed up a little exhibit especially for the delegates to the merchants' convention.

It is to show what they regard as the ideal filing system for any one conducting a general mercantile business.

The wave of development in office efficiency that has swept the country in the last few years with the coming of such ideas as the loose leaf ledgers, card index systems, interchangeable filing cases, etc., which at first concerned only the concerns whose work is all office work, is now being heeded by the merchant and by the smal business man.

In numerous big business offices complete filing systems considered satisfactory a few years ago have been completely discarded and entirely new outfits of office furniture installed. When large concerns can throw out thousands of dollars' worth of equipment the merchant in his small office is reasoning that it would pay him to see if he cannot make some paying improvements along the same line.

The arrangement at the Baylis company's place which particularly interests the general store men is known as the cabinet safe with removable files for accounts, letters and all other records. A large stock of these have been received just recently.

In some states there are specialty salesmen calling on merchants in every town, showing them the advantages of such office arrangement. The outfit is not only a filing system but a safe as well and is expected to interest many of the visiting merchants during the next two weeks.

Big Plant on Supply Parts

Studebaker Announces Innovation for Benefit of Old Cars

By placing at the disposal of its service department, an entire plant, completely outfitted with expensive machinery and able to turn out on short notice parts for every model of its cars now in the hands of the public, The Studebaker corporation has taken an advanced step toward the ideal relationship between a manufacturer and the owners of his cars.

"There are now considerably more than 100,000 Studebaker cars in the hands of owners," asserts General Manager Clarence H. Booth. "So far as we know, all these cars are in daily service, despite the fact that many of the earliest models have been driven upwards of 75,000 miles.

"No mechanical device will endure constant service without at least occasional replacements. These must, if satisfactory, be supplied by the parent factory. Up to date, we have furnished Studebaker parts from this source, though often the process confused to some extent our scheme of production. By setting apart one factory for this purpose, our service arrangements will be partically ideal and our regular manufacturing system uninterrupted."

The plant purchased by the Studebakers is at Pontiac and was formerly known as the Vulcan Gear Works. Later, in an enlarged form, it was used as the main building of an automobile company which recently went into the hands of a receiver. Communication with the main plants of the Studebaker system will be by rail and automobile trucks.

Aside from ensuring a permanent supply of parts for all Studebaker models, an advantage of the plant will be its ability to turn out for each Studebaker dealer a stock of parts fitted to the needs of his territory, thus permitting him to install immediate repairs on any Studebaker car. In equipping the plant, the Studebakers are able to make use of much machinery used in the production of former models, all of which have been built complete in the corporation's many factories.

The service plant will be known as No. 15 of the Studebaker system. W. W. Austin is in charge as superintendent.

SMITH & NORTHCUT RETURN FROM DETROIT

Pierce-Arrow and Hupp Motor Cars Continue to Be Handled by Well Known Firm

John E. Smith and Floyd W. Northcutt, of the well known firm of John M. Smith, have just returned from a visit to Detroit and Buffalo, where they visited the leading automobile factories.

At Detroit, special attention was given to the Hupmobile plant which is one of the finest in Detroit. The careful way in which the Hupmobiles are made, and the quality of materials used in these cars evidently made considerable impression on both Mr. Smith and Mr. Northcutt, for instead of closing up another contract with these people for the same territory as last season, arrangements were made for enlarged territory on this famous car; therefore, during the coming year, John M. Smith will be distributor for Hupp Motor Cars in all of Georgia and in addition to this, will carry a stock of repair parts sufficiently large to assure every Hupmobile owner in the south of prompt service on repair parts.

An interesting visit was made to the Chalmers factory which is a model in every respect. From Detroit, Messrs. Smith and Northcutt went to Buffalo and visited the home of the Pierce-Arrow. This factory is on the site of the old Pan-American Exposition grounds and is one of the best equipped and most modern factories in this country.

The Pierce-Arrow company will continue to manufacture the 38 h. p., 48 h. p., and 66 h. p. cars, all of the six cylinder type. The Pierce-Arrow company are working to their utmost capacity, and report the finest trade in their history.

All the makers of the best known cahs are very busy, and the companies all intend to increase production for the coming season, evidently expecting times to be g ood.

Cadillac Police Car Covers 74,000 Miles

Seventy-four thousand miles in two years and ten days is the astonishing record made by the Cadillac five-passenger touring car which has been operated by the police department of Houston, Tex., for the regular work of hurry calls, transporting officers and prisoners to and from the courts, and the like. The car was purchased in 1911 and has just been replaced by a 1913 Cadillac.

The total of 74,000 miles is a remarkable record, for the average distance a motor car travels each year is not much more than 7,000 miles. The grand total of 74,000 is nearly three times around the globe. Yet this police car did its work night and day, irrespective of time or weather, and over some of the worst roads the city possesses. Moreover, quick action was necessary and therfore it was impossible on many occasions to return for a second or third load. Consequently it was a common practice to load this car with a dozen and even as many as sixteen people.

In spite of the numbers carried, the roads traveled and the distance covered the car is still in good conditon and, after being somewhat rebuilt will be sold at a good price with a guarantee back of it.

Ford President Has His Fiftieth Birthday

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 9.—Henry Ford, president of the Ford Motor company, celebrated his fiftieth birthday Wednesday, July 30. Mr. Ford spent the entire day at his home at Dearborn where showers of congratulations poured in upon him.

Mr. Ford was born at Dearborn, Mich., about ten miles from Detroit, July 30, 1863. He came to Detroit to learn the machinist's trade when eighteen years of age.

The story of the building of the first Ford automobile, of the obstacles overcome by the inventor, of the establishment of the Ford Motor company ten years ago and of its marvelous growth is familiar even to the average school child.

WHO WAS "STUNG" ON DEALS

ALL THE LATEST FEATURES IN CLOSED PEERLESS CARS

There are many striking body innovations in the new series of closed cars which has just been announced by the Peerless Motor Car company.

The window area on all sides has been increased until it is as easy to see out of the limousine on any side as though it were an open car. All frames and casements have been eliminated by the use of the Swiss railway type of window—a heavy plate glass which moves up and down in a groove. The side and intercompartment windows are raised and lowered by straps. Those in the side doors are moved by a special patented device when a handle similar to that on a safe is turned about.

In the new cars a patented auxiliary seat is used which is controlled exclusively by the Peerless Motor Car company. When they are not in use these seats fold up and completely disappear in a recess in the intercompartment wall, leaving the rear compartment entirely open and free from the usual encumbrances. The backs of these seats are adjustible and may be raised or lowered for the convenience of tall or short passengers. They are extremely comfortable.

Regular seats in both the front and rear compartments are of the Turkish roll type extremely deep and stuffed with the highest grade of pure hair.

Nothing so restful has ever previously been installed in a motor car. Another touch of up-to-dateness is given to the fittings by the installation of Pullman type interior electric lights, which disappear into the wall. Touch a button and the light turns about into the open —touch another and it disappears, leaving only a polished and ornamental silver plate in its place.

An electric telephone or chou-phone replaces the speaking tube for communicating with driver. It is louder and clearer—in fact, it is a microphone.

ROAD RECORD IS SMASHED BY THE POPE-HARTFORD CAR

Another well-known California road record was recently smashed by Jack Fleming, driving a Pope-Hartford car, when he made the mountainous run from Oakland to Sacramento, a distance of 132 miles, in 146 minutes, clipping 21 minutes and 45 seconds from the existing record. The new record is believed to be one that will stand for some time.

Fleming started from the foot of Broadway, Oakland, at 3:55 a. m., and checked in at the state capitol at 6:20 after one of the fastest exhibitions of road driving ever made in the west. He used the same Pope-Hartford car which he handled in the Panama-Pacific road race.

The run from the foot of Broadway to Stockton was made in 1 hour and 38 minutes, and, considering the fact that a great part of this distance was over winding roads through the Dublin canyon and between Livermore and Tracy, the average time he maintained is remarkable. The roads are fine throughout the entire stretch over which Fleming raced, but even with the best of roads such time as he made is remarkably fast and is easily one of the best demonstrators of road driving that has ever been accomplished on this coast. Notwithstanding the terrific pace Fleming held from Oakland to Stockton, he even did better on the long stretch between this place and Sacramento. According to the speedometer on his car he covered the 47.3 miles in the fast time of 47 minutes, or better than a mile a minute.

Fleming reported after the record-breaking drive that they would have established even better time but for the fact that they encountered several teams near Stockton and had to slow down in order not to take any chances of accidents. He also had one puncture, which cost several minutes of their time. Between Tracy and Stockton, Fleming reached a speed of 85 miles an hour, which is as fast, if not faster, than was accomplished in the Panama-Pacific road race.

The Sacramento run is one of the best known in the state, and has been the cause of a great deal of racing between expert drivers ever since it was established by T. J. Beaudet in a Cadillac. The excellent roads between the Bay City and Sacramento makes it unusually attractive for fast driving and as the time first set by Beaudet was unusually fast a great many attempts to lower it have been unsuccessful until Fleming made the run yesterday.

This record has been considered one of the most difficult on the coast, not only because of the pace which Beaudet established in the first run, but because of the great amount of winding and dangerous roads to be traversed.

Effects of Riding The Tires Soft

When the tires are ridden soft there is too much action in the side wall, or hinge, which must eventually result in the same injury to the fabric that occurs to a wire when bent numerous times at a given point.

This excessive heating softens the rubber cement, or "friction," on the fabric carcass. In a sense devulcanization takes place. This combined with an irregular tension of one layer of fabric in relation to another, developes a separation, chafing and ultimately a blowout. It might be well to mention that most of the advantage of a large tire is lost unless it is kept inflated properly, as otherwise it is only equivalent to the comparative air volume of a smaller size.

From experiments conducted by us, we have proved that it is not necessary to ride Firestone tires soft in order to secure the desired resiliency and comfort. Having worked out just the right tension of the fabric during construction of the carcass, the quality of the rubber friction on the fabric, the liveliness of the tread rubber and the method of curing (vulcanisation) this produces a superior combination.

Atlanta-Asheville Record

With a Studebaker "Six," brand new and just out of a box car, Frank A. Mears drove from Atlanta to Asheville, N. C., 246 miles, in 9 hours, 15 minutes, breaking his record over the rough and hilly course by more than two hours. The run was checked at both ends and is doubly unique in the fact that it was made by a car which had had no advance limbering up.

Three New Models For Maxwell Cars

In a three-speed announcement—and without reverse English—the Maxwell Motor company places three distinct models before the public as its 1914 line.

A real six-cylinder car without restriction of the slightest nature is the most sensational feature of the trio—in consideration of the fact that the price of the "Six" is under $2,000. Not much under to be sure, but enough under to pay for the freight to any point within several days' travel of the Detroit factory.

If one has any doubt about the 1914 Maxwell "Six" being a "whole car," a ride over any rough or hilly road will convince him to the contrary, he motor appears to be unlimited in capacity for any unusual undertaking, and every comfort feature from springs to upholstery seems to have been selected after the most profound consideration of the confines of luxury.

Big Velie Increase

Director of Sales Charles E. Iltner, of the Velie Motor Vehicle company, of Moline, Ill., is authority for the statement that during the past year sales of the Velie company have increased 114 per cent over sales for the year previous. Mr. Giltner attributes this big increase largely to the demand on the part of the automobile buying public for a car of medium price, possessing all the features of design and equipment that, up to the present day, have usually been only associated with cars of the highest price.

Advanced manufacturing methods and the high standard of quality which is being maintained by the manufacturers of the various parts which go into the making up of a motor car.

Good Service Is Necessary

Overland Manufacturers Always Try to Keep Up Cars in Best Shape

Automobile service is fully as important as automobile sales, in the opinion of a majority of motorists and it has always been the aim of the manufacturers to back up their cars with the best service possible. An illustration of the extent to which this fature has been developed is given in the service system maintained by the Willys-Overland company, of Toledo, Ohio.

Though the Toledo company does not maintain any branch houses or assembling stations, it has established a service system that is unsurpassed in the industry. The secret of the success of Overland service is that every dealer or distributor's contract with the company contains an iron-clad agreement providing that a generous supply of parts be maintained. In this way a fully-equipped and stocked Overland service station can be found in every village, town or city wher Overland cars are sold, and there are nearly 3,000 Overland distributors and dealers in the world.

Should the purchaser of an Overland meet with an accident that would result in a wrecked vehicle, he will find, by calling at the nearest dealer, whether the latter be the one from whom he bought the machine, or one a thousand miles away, that there is a complete line of parts on hand ready for his use.

Big Dealers Handle Big Hupp Output

On the heels of the announcement last week that the Hupp Motor Car company had severed connections with its eastern distributor, the H. J. Koehler S. G. company, of New York and Boston, comes the news that the company has closed a big contract with Charles E. Reiss, of 1896 Broadway, known to the trade as one of the biggest and most experienced distributors of automobiles on the Atlantic coast.

With Mr. Reiss will be associated Capt. J. B. Dudley, well known as an automobile distributor and of national fame as an expert writer and authority on automobile subjects. These men will control the territory of Metropolitan New York and vicinity.

The territory of Newark and northern New Jersey, which includes Jersey City, the Oranges and Plainfield, and formerly distributed from the Koehler branch at Newark, has been taken over by the Service Motor Car company, 373-375 Central avenue, Newark.

The territory, which consists of the northern part of the state, is under the management of F. C. Stowers, who has made a name for himself as a hustling distributor of standard motor cars throughout that part of the country.

Harry Fosdick, who formerly occupied an important position in the sales department of the Hupp Motor Car company, has closed for the territory of eastern Massachusetts, northern New England and Rhode Island, with headquarters at Boston. The concern will be knokn as the Fosdick-Wentworth Co.

Indiana Cars Tour To Pacific Coast

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—The Indiana-Pacific tour consisting entirely of Indiana manufacturers touring to the Pacific coast on a booster and good roads trip, was completed at Los Angeles August 3.

This tour was a splendid example of the co-operation of competing manufacturers in an endeavor to make an unqualified success of the greatest booster trip ever undertaken. Great credit is reflected upon the product of Indiana by the fact that every car which started on the tour completed the journey to the coast.

In view of the great experience Premier cars and Rdy McNamara have had in tours and in going across the continent several times, it was a natural thing that McNamara and his Premier should have been chosen as the pilot to lead the way from Indianapolis to Los Angeles. The driver and his car bore out their past reputation by leading all the way into all controls including both noon and night. The distance registered by the Premier pilot car was 2,749 miles.

A. L. Westgard, chairman of the National Highway commission, and known as the "Good Road Finder of America," whose car was selected to carry the various governors through the several states through which they passed across their state, drove his Premier with the tour to Los Angeles. From Los Angeles, Mr. Westgard turned north to Portland to complete his 17,000 miles of road-laying before bad weather sets in.

Tire Deliveries

In an interview today, Mr. W. O. Rutherford, of the great B. F. Goodrich Co., operating the largest rubber factories in the world, made the following statement:

"Yes, it is true that as soon as the automobiling season was on, our dealers were crowded wih orders for Goodrich tires.

"Owing to the unprecendented demand for this popular make of tires, we have been unable to fill all of our orders within a reasonable time. As a consequence, in some cities, motorists have been subjected to annoying delays, which we very much regret."

"When we have had any changes in prices to announce in the past and wanted quick action, we have invariably used the advertising columns of the daily newspapers. In the very near future we will announce to motorists through the newspapers that we are now filling promptly all orders received from our dealers.

Best Entry List

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 9.—The largest number of entries in the history of the game locally are listed in the city tennis tournament which is now being staged on the courts of the Chattanooga Golf and Country club at Riverview. Play has already begun in the men's singles and doubles and in the ladies' singles. All of last year's champions are present to defend their titles.

Pioneer Automobile Manager Resigns

Mr. C. A. Hawkins, who has been manager of the White company's San Francisco branch office ever since the well known Cleveland motor company have been marketing cars on the Pacific coast, has tendered his resignation to the home office, to take effect August 15, 1913. Mr. Hawkins has large business interests on the coast, and decided to resign because he felt that he could not do justice to the White company's business and at the same time look after his own. During his administration, Mr. Hawkins has built up on the Pacific coast an extremely large business in White cars and trucks, and while his resignation was not unexpected, it is a distinct loss to the White company that he has finally decided to sever his connections.

Bisland's Hit Gave Atlanta Hurling Duel

In Tenth Inning Welchonce Came All Way From First on Long Single by the Cracker Shortstop

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 9.—Another extra inning game with the Vols, but this time the Crackers managed to get away with the big end of the score. Carl Thompson and Forrest More engaged in a neat pitchers' duel for ten innings and the decision up to the last chapter was a draw. In that round Thompson's team mates gave More a knock out, that won the game.

Long, the first man, started the rally with a single by short, but was forced at second on Welchonce's hit. Smith fanned. Bisland gave Harry the hit and run signal and the speedy Cracker was off. Bisland connected with a neat rap over second and Welchonce tallied. This was the prettiest piece of path work seen at Sulphur Dell during the season. Scoring from first on a single calls for unusually fast work.

Atlanta put a man across in the first inning when Gibson dropped Smith's high fly in front of the plate and allowed Agler to score.

Bisland and Callahan were the only to connect safely more than once.

The Vols' lone run came in the fifth when Young, after looking two over, picked out one to his liking and sent it sailing over the right field fence for the circuit. They came near tieing things up in the tenth, but Thompson steadied and retired the side with a strike out.

Both Thompson and More did nice work on the hill and if the latter's support had been a little tighter he would have stood a better chance.

VOSS JOINS LOCAL CLUB

The Crackers have the services of two good hurlers now, according to reports this afternoon. They are Pitcher Lawrence, of the Knoxville team in the Appalachian league, and Pitcher John Voss of the Macon, South Atlantic league club.

Lawrence will not report to Atlanta until the end of the Appalachian season, while President Ethridge says that Voss will report to the team in Birmingham next week.

Lawrence has won 21, lost 3 and tied 2 games out of his 26 starts this season, and is going like an eight-day clock.

Voss, the ex-Mercer star has been holding Macon in the race. He is in fine shape, as was demonstrated by the game which he pitched against Charleston on Saturday, winning in easy style.

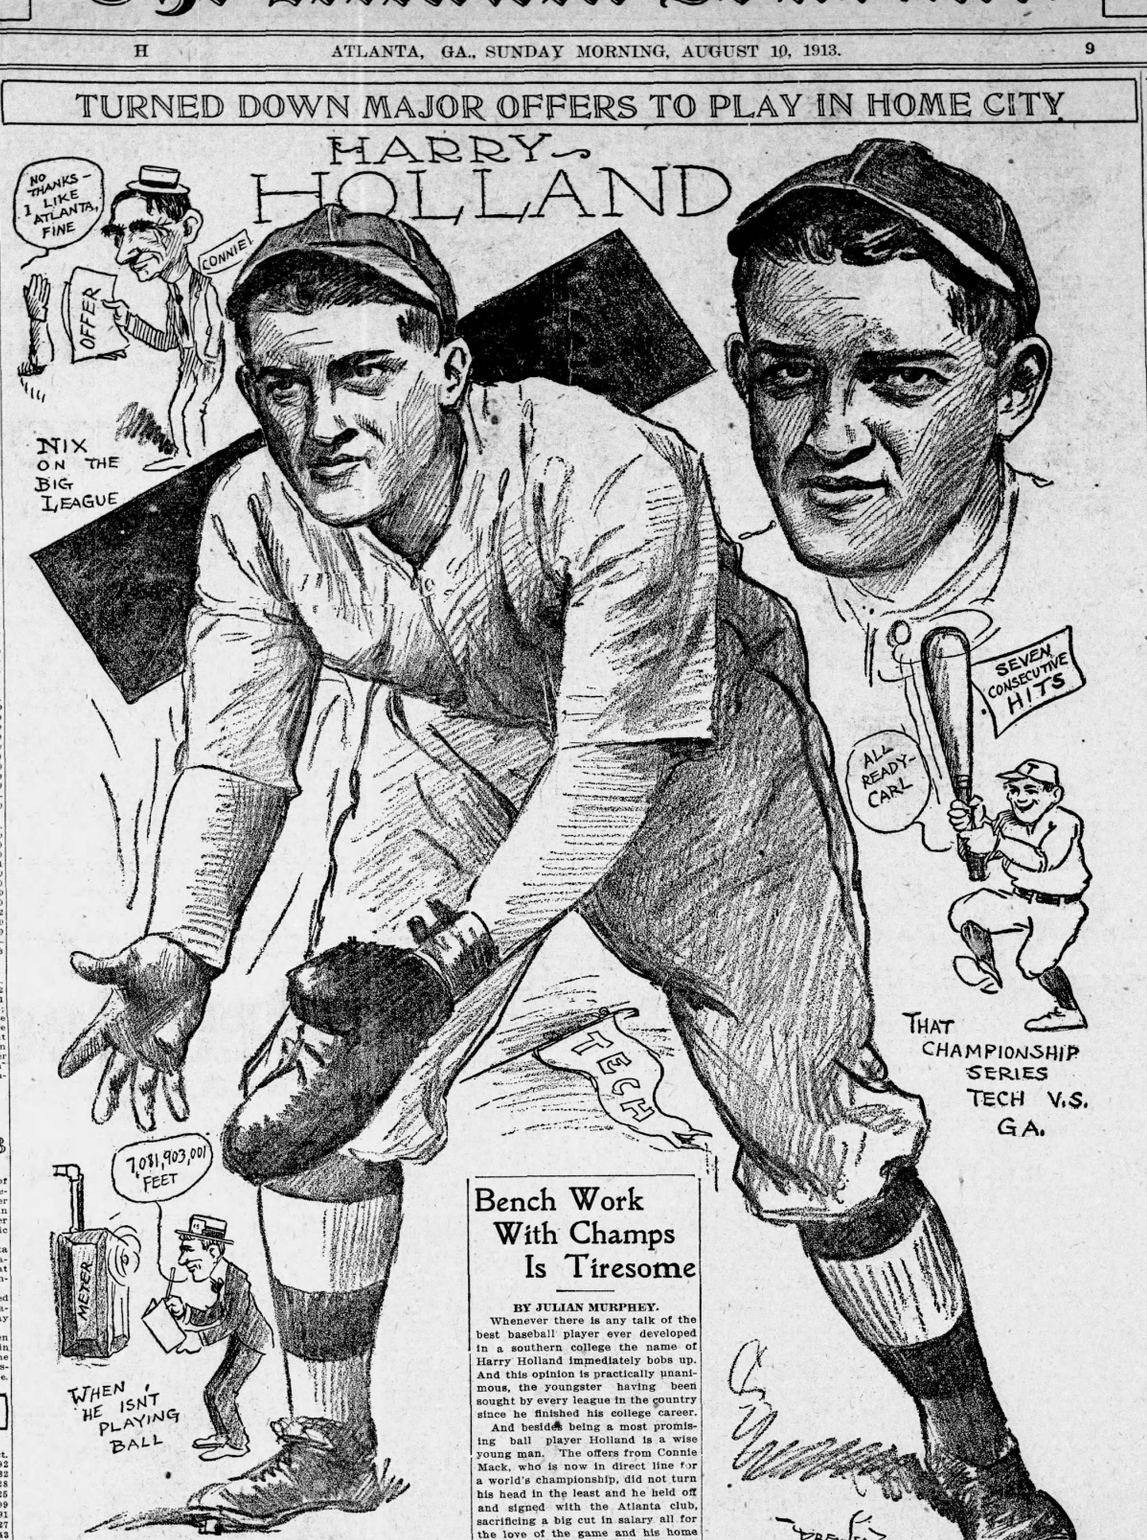
TURNED DOWN MAJOR OFFERS TO PLAY IN HOME CITY



Bench Work With Champs Is Tiresome

BY JULIAN MURPHEY.

Whenever there is any talk of the best baseball player ever developed in a southern college the name of Harry Holland immediately bobs up. And this opinion is practically unanimous, the youngster having been sought by every league in the country since he finished his college career.

And besides being a most promising ball player Holland is a wise young man. The offers from Connie Mack, who is now in direct line for a world's championship, did not turn his head in the least and he held off and signed with the Atlanta club, sacrificing a big cut in salary all for the love of the game and his home town. When he signed with Atlanta his club was in a bad hole for infielders and he came to the rescue.

Harry Holland is the kind of youngster who wishes to play ball and play it all the time. He does not care for bench duty, much preferring to play for the Atlanta Class A league club than sit on the bench with Connie Mack's star collection of major leaguers. And in figuring out this he showed his sense. Many a young ball player is absolutely ruined by long bench duty and it would have been a long wait had he signed with the Mackmen. McInnes, Collins, Barry and Baker, the Mack infield, are all youngsters and are good for many more years service, all of which would have necessitated Holland sticking on the bench for some time before he even got a fair trial.

LONG IN THE GAME.

Atlanta's new third baseman is an Atlanta boy and has been playing ball around the lots for ten years. Always he was considered the best in his class, but not until he entered Tech and began to whale the cover off the ball and field like a Bobby Wallace did his name get so prominently before the public. In college ball he is what one would term a "dream of a player," and was the terror of every pitcher that worked against the Tech team. He could hit .400 against most any old slabman and at fielding he was right around the 1,000 mark.

WHITNEY WILL STICK 10 ROUNDS WITH WHITE

"Stay ten rounds. Well, I most certainly will, provided my opponent is able to last for that length of time."

That is just the way Frank Whitney feels concerning his approaching ten-round encounter with Charley White, who recently put Jake Abel to sleep in the short space of two rounds. Of late there has been much speculation among Atlanta fandom concerning Whitney's ability to stick ten rounds with the Chicago boy and Whitney's opinion on the subject is worth recording.

White and Whitney fight the same style of scientific boxing and at the auditorium-armory on Wednesday night there is sure to be a big bunch of thrills. Of course the White-Whitney mill is the one big attraction, but the program is not limited to this one big match. Charlie Lee and Kid Young scrap on for a real classy ten-round match with Mike Saul and Eddie Hanlon starring in another ten-rounder. Any one of the matches is good enough for a main bout in anybody's town, but when all three are put on the same evening the attraction is past the "good" stage.

WHITNEY IS HERE.

Frank Whitney is already on the ground ready for his nickers with the Chicago boy. He reached Atlanta late Friday night after several days of hard work in a big Chicago gymnasium. And you can bet he looks fit as a fiddle. Whitney is well known and popular here and is always known to be giving the fans a run for their money, but if he ever looked any better than right now we miss our guess. He is trained right down to the minute and can be depended upon to put up some real clever scrapping, for White is nobody's dub.

White gained a big following here upon his only match at the auditorium, recently knocking out Jake Abel in two rounds. Abel is a rather nifty boxer and when White stored him away in two short rounds the fans began to clamor for a match with Whitney. Never has Whitney been able to do up Abel in two rounds and this leaves the impression that White is Whitney's superior and will dispose of the Cedar Rapids boy before the ten rounds are up, but Whitney says no.

The last time Lee and Young met there was a most gruelling match and this show it promises to be even better. Young has learned that he has to train to compete with Lee and this he has done while Lee has kept in his usual good shape and is out for a second decision over the newsboy champ.

MORE SPEED NEEDED IN MOTOR FEATURES

Two extra events have been added to the motordrome card slated for Tuesday evening, a special three-cornered match race between Graves, Swartz and McNeil being the added feature with Lockner and Glenn fighting out the final heat in their spirited match which was started Friday night. The main feature slated for Tuesday's card is the Forrest Adair sweepstakes with the final heat going ten miles.

Many of the Atlanta sport lovers have become deeply interested in the big motorcycle events run each week and among these is Forrest Adair. It is for this reason the big sweepstakes race for Tuesday evening is labeled "The Forrest Adair." Later other well-known fans will be paid the same honor, there being many well known Atlantians who never miss a race.

It has been some meets since any records have been broken and it is about time one of the riders was cutting loose to hang up a new mark to be shot at. It won't be long before new stars are added to the collection at the local track and those already here will have to get a bit faster or move out and make room for others. And this very feature is causing the bunch to spurt up a bit.

Here is Tuesday's program:

FIRST EVENT.

SECOND EVENT.

Second heat merchants' purse, Graves, Renel, Richards.

THIRD EVENT.

FOURTH EVENT.

Three-cornered match race, one mile: First heat, Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

FIFTH EVENT.

Very Anxious To Get Stock In Autodrome

Application to Be Incorporated Has Been Filed—Stock to Be Valued at $100—Sure to Be a Go

With more than three score of prominent Atlantians applying for a charter under the name of The Atlanta Autodrome and Athletic association the mammoth automobile board racing track to be built here has begun to attract nation wide attention. The list of incorporators as it now stands does not include one-fourth of those who will eventually become interested in the track which is sure to be one of Atlanta's biggest advertising assets.

The list which the incorporators have signed has been open only a couple of days and already 63 names have been affixed. It is known that many more will sign the paper within the next few days and it is expected that there will be as many as 250 stockholders. Already an application for a charter has been filed in the superior court and this will be granted shortly.

The object of the association is to promote automobile racing and other sports that will take with the public. It is to be incorporated at $100,000 divided into par value shares of $100 each. The common stock amounts to $65,000 with $35,000 as preferred and right away much of this will be taken up.

An automobile board track one mile in length would be a big go in any city and here in Atlanta the home of the boosters, it should be even a greater success. Such a track will rank as the very best and fastest in the world and will yearly bring to Atlanta the best racing drivers the game affords and in this manner give the city the best class of advertising.

Already many of the most noted drivers have communicated with Jack Prince, who is managing the track, authorizing him to put them down as entrants in the opening race. The best riders of the country have for years clamored for a board track of the kind to be built here, believing it is the only kind that will take sufficient speed to break all existing records. The track will be banked 45 degress at the end and 10 on the straight away, thus being capable of taking 100 miles per hour.

Already Manager Prince has begun to prepare for the start of work. The grounds have been secured, the lumber and nails contracted for, the street railway company agreed to place a double track right to the grandstand and the land graded and the actual work of placing the grandstand will soon begin. It is the intention of the owners to have the track ready by the last of October and at once stage a three-days' meet which will be featured with a 100, 200 and 300 mile race.

During the week the association will open a down town office and begin to sell stock. Practically every well known business man who has been accosted regarding the track has given it a big send off and predicted that it will be a howling success. This makes it practically sure that all the stock will be subscribed within a very short time.

The application for incorporation was filed Saturday by Felder, Anderson, Dilan & Whitman, attorneys for the track.

John S. Cohen, T. B. Felder, John Aldridge, Dan S. Walraven, George W. Henson, Mark Nabors, T. M. Webb, Frank Weldon, Jack Prince, Wylie West, Joe Brown Connally, Thomas H. Pitts, Clifford L. Anderson, Charles I. Ryan, Earnest Durham, Harvey Hill, Lowry Arnold, E. Rivers, Arminius Wright, W. G. Humphrey, Oscar Barnes, Walter Rich, Lucian York, Lee Barnes, E. M. Willingham, Edwin C. Brown, Chris Essig, C. C. Needham, C. H. Butts, R. A. Motter, R. A. Smythe, B. L. Crow, J. R. Smith, F. J. Faxon, Albert Barnes, Henry Davis, Shelby Smith, Knox Barnes, J. W. Leroux, W. L. DuPree, Chas. Ezzard, Jr., W. J. Stoddard, Charlie Scipio, Jr., Charlie Elyea, J. K. Gewinner, A. R. Colcord, L. S. Crane, D. T. Bussey, R. C. Abbott, Fred B. Steele, C. L. DuRay, L. F. McClelland, J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., R. E. O'Donnelly, Arthur Thomas, George C. Walters, Earnest D. Duncan, H. M. Beutell, Howard McCall, George D. McCutcheon, Gilbert Johnson, E. M. Durant and W. J. Ryan.

OSBORNE IS GOLF CHAMP

Dr. J. D. Osborne came through with a great article of golf in the final match for the president's trophy at the Capital City Country club on Saturday afternoon and by trimming R. L. Reed 2 up and 1 to play won the tournament. The match was hard fought and close all the way and was not decided until next to the last hole.

In the fight for the second flight cup E. A. Thornwell was a winner, defeating J. Conway 1 up. J. K. Ottley won the third flight match over John Aldridge 6 up and 5 to go.

Considering that the present tournament was the first contested over the Capital City course it was remarkable the number of players who were entered. All were greatly interested and for the past month the links have been filled each afternoon with those who are striving to learn the game. Right now the course is in good shape and it is a pleasure to play.

Within a short time it is more than likely that the course will be increased to 18 holes. This move is now badly needed owing to the congested condition caused by so many new members taking up the game. Julian Mayfield has developed into a past-master at the art of preparing the putting greens and they are now just like velvet. He is chairman of the greens committee of the club and is always putting some timely work on them.

WON'T LAND JUD DALEY

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 9.—It is announced here on authority that Jud Daley, left fielder on the Nashville team, will neither be traded nor loaned to Atlanta.

Manager Smith has been trying to persuade Schwartz to trade him Daley or to lease him to the Crackers, but Schwartz today declined to enter into any trade with the Crackers' manager.

Mack Gets Pitcher

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 9.—Announcement was made today of the sale of "Rube" Dressler, lefthanded pitcher of the Harrisburg Tri-State team, to the Philadelphia Athletics for $2,000.

Boehling Now Real Marvel; Is Youngster

Kid Had Hard Time Getting Thorough Trial in Majors but When He Did He Made Good With a Rush

Earlier this season Fred Falkenberg won ten games for the Naps and was lauded to the skies as the "comeback marvel." The work of the human string was splendid, but, then, Falkenberg is a veteran of many big league battles, as indeed are 90 per cent of the men who accumulate a long list of wins.

Just now the major leagues are gossiping about the wonderful pitching of Joe Boehling, the left-handed star of the hustling Washington crew. Boehling's work is so sensational it threatens to become a scandal.

In May, Clark Griffith was bemoaning the fact that he did not have a first-class left-hander to balance his team, and meanwhile Boehling was sitting on the bench with his ear to the ground.

Boehling was playing corner lot ball in Richmond, Va., last year, when he was "discovered" by Bill Peet, a Washington baseball scribe.

Peet induced Griffith to sign Boehling, and after looking the lad over, Griff sent him to Chattanooga, where he played for a short time. Chattanooga shipped Boehling to Jess Burkett's Worcester, Mass., club and there the boy struck his gait, winning fourteen out of twenty-two games and batting .315.

Late in the fall Griffith recalled Boehling. Why he didn't start the kid the full route this last spring is a mystery.

Like Rube Marquard, Boehling started his winning streak in his first game of the season. It was some time before Manager Griffith trusted the youngster to start a game. When he was given a chance he started right in to win and has yet to meet with his first setback.

The only time that Boehling had to admit defeat this season was in the exhibition game with Bill Dahlen's Superbas in Washington this spring. The Superbas beat him by a score 6 to 2. Benny Meyer hanging one of his offerings for a home run.

Griff pitted Boehling against the Superbas because the Old Fox learned, while he was the manager of the Cincinnati Reds, that southpaws were the best bet against the Brooklyn team. It is probably because that Boehling was unable to beat the Superbas that Griff lost confidence in the youngster's ability to make good this season. However, once Joe was started he proved that Griff had made a big mistake in not starting him sooner.

THREE EMPIRE LEAGUE LEADERS

NATIONAL LEAGUE RESULTS

GIANTS WIN

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—An avalanche of hits in the second and third innings, combined with three errors by Berger, hammer in the latter inning gave New York more than enough runs to win from Cincinnati today. The score was 11 to 2. Packard, for Cincinnati, was knocked out of the box in the third. Mathewson was almost invincible.

CHICAGO WINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Manager Evers' startegy was responsible for Chicago's victory over Philadelphia today, four to three. With men on second and third base in the sixth, Schulte had one ball and a strike on him, and Phillan was sent in to finish his time at bat. He singled to center and the two runners, Murphy and Leach, scored. In the ninth, heavy hitters up, Evers sent in Cheney, who successfully checked the visitors.

ST. LOUIS WINS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—While St. Louis was hitting Rucker opportunely and his teammates were fumbling, Saliee pitched steady ball and was tallied on but once, while St. Louis gathered five runs. Brooklyn made the bases filled two, but Saliee always prevented a score. Today's victory made it three in a row for the home team. It was the first time since June 30 that the local aggregation has won more than two successive games. Score:

Speaker Back Near Leaders In American

Ty Cobb Has Been Keeping His Mark Right on the Heels of Joe Jackson, Who Continues to Lead

Jackson and Cobb still have a death grip on first place in the American league, with percentages of .392 and .385. Speaker's average of .366 is the closest to them.

Milan, the fleet-footed Senator, has a total of 53 stolen bases to his credit, which puts him far above his nearest rival, Tris Speaker, who has swiped 29.

Joe Jackson also leads in slugging, as he has 217 total bases to his credit. Tris Speaker is next with 210, while the only other man over the .200 mark is Crawford. He has an even 200 bases to his credit.

Here are the figures for all who were batting over .250 through the games of Wednesday, August 6:

Welchonce Is Holding Lead For Southern

Tommy Long Best Run Getter in the Circuit—D. Robertson Continues to Show That He Is a Star

Atlanta continues to hold to the run getting and hitting honors in the Southern league. Tommy Long being by far the best run producer, while Harry Welchonce has made more hits than any other player. D. Robertson, the slugging Mobile outfielder, leads the batters with a percentage of .326, as well as at the total base clouting with 193 bags.

In the games through Tuesday Tommy Long had crossed the pan 86 times and Harry Welchonce had bingled out 145 hits. Next to Welchonce comes Robertson with 134 safeties. Considering that Welchonce has played in more games than the Gull crack his lead is rather small, as the race promises to grow even closer before the season is over.

During the past week most all of the hard clouters have held their own, and the .300 crop is about as large as ever. There are eight players over the mark and the entire bunch is made up of regulars.

Wares, the Montgomery infielder, tops the base stealers with 50 pilfers. He is closely followed by Messenger and D. Robertson.

Daubert Nears Batting Lead In National

McDonald, Boston Player, Has Best Average, but Plays Very Seldom—Cravath Holds Lead at Best Slugger

Yingling, the Brooklyn hurler, is still the nominal leader of the National league hitters, while McDonald is the real leader, with a percentage of .370. Jake Daubert continues to hold to fourth place, with an average of .350.

In heavy hitting, Cravath is still the leader. He has a total of 177 bases to his credit. Nineteen home runs, 9 three-base hits, and 19 two-base hits. Miller, of Pittsburg, is right behind him, with a total base figure amounting to 163.

On the paths, Carey, of Pittsburg, is the fastest, with 29 stolen sacks to his credit. Murray, of New York, has 28.

Her are the figures for all who are batting over .250 through the games of Wednesday, August 6:

TWO AMERICAN—Sport

Playing Race In Bad Style

LONDON.—As the attempt to revive racing in the United States has proved a dismal failure, it will probably not be long shall soon be inundated with American "sports" of a most undesirable type. It has already been announced that some of the sporting warmest of the Yankee professionals intend to take up permanent residence in this country or in France, in order that they may be able to indulge in their own sweet way—a way which if all the stories I hear be true, is excessively clever if not altogether the best. Most people remember the last American invasion and some of its consequences. At least one English bookmaker was driven into the ranks by the barefaced robberies that were perpetrated upon him by so-called sportsmen from the other side. Strangely enough the majority of these fellows were received with open arms almost everywhere; some of them even obtained the entree to the most exclusive racing circles, and it was a long time before any one "tumbled" to their little games. When they were found out they quietly returned to the places whence they came. The majority left "mountains" of debt behind them, and it is still owing. I hope when the invasion does take place that British backers and layers will temper their hospitality with a little caution and common sense.

Foreign riflemen are already arriving for the International shoot, to be held at Camp Perry, Ohio, from August 15 to September 9, in connection with the Perrycentennial celebration.

KEATING FAR IN THE LEAD

Walter Keating, the young Virginia league infielder sent by the Macon club by Atlanta, is proving the sensation of the base stealing world, having swiped seventy-two bags in some eighty-five games. While the shortfielder is not fighting so well, he is fielding and running bases like a major leaguer and is certain to be recalled by Atlanta for use next season.

Base stealing is a very important end of the game and Keating will be a big help to the Crackers next season. He has a good eye and is a fair hitter and this coupled with his ability to steal bases makes him a good man for any club.

In the double-header Friday Keating went through the first game without a stolen base, but in the second he ran away with a couple and kept up his average. To date he has averaged almost one stolen bag per game.

"Bud" Goodwin of the New York Athletic club, has been competing in swimming events for several years. He is going well and may break his own one-mile record of 25 minutes 26 3-5 seconds established a year ago.

ELBERFELD LIVES BASEBALL; IS ALWAYS TALKING OF GAME

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 9.—Kid Elberfeld, late of the Yankees and Washington Americans, is the greatest fan in the country, according to the majority of players in the league, at any rate. The Tabasco Kid eats, sleeps and dreams baseball all the time, off the field and on it. He has also had a very long career on the diamond, and for that reason knows whereof he speaks.

It happened at a Cleveland hotel during one of the series of games Washington was playing in that city. The talk had turned to the hardest hit ever made, and every man who was batting has say, the Kid alone excepted. Finally, when the other players had noticed that he was strangely quiet in the conversation on a theme in which he was as well qualified to speak as any present, they all turned to him with one accord and demanded his opinion. He pondered a second before beginning then said slowly:

"Well, boys, I've seen ball players come and go, many of them mighty hitters, but when it comes right down to picking the hard hitter of them all you've got to hand it to the big Frenchman right here in Cleveland. He hit the hardest ball I ever saw hit, and say the saints keep me from ever becoming mixed up with another such drive as he slammed at me several years ago on the ball park in New York.

"It happened in about the seventh inning of a hotly contested game, Larry had been hitting the ball on the 'pick' all through the game, as he usually does when in New York, and I, from my position at third base was thankful that none of the drives had come anywhere near my territory.

"In this inning the 'king' was up first and I recall that I was playing back rather deep at the time. The pitcher, I don't remember now who he was, put one hand in the 'alley' and Lajoie took a mighty poke at it. I was bent over with a hand on each knee, and the sound of wood and leather had hardly reached me before I saw the ball shooting through the air toward me with the speed of a rifle bullet. All I had to do was to take my hands off my knees and close them between my legs when the ball reached me, strike fairly in the center of my glove, and stuck. But I went on. I went right up into the air, and came down flat on my face on the grass about three feet back of the place where I had been crouching.

"For a moment I was stunned. The first thing I knew the Cleveland coaching was standing over me and demanding to know where I was hurt. But I wasn't hurt, though I was dazed a little by the shock of my fall. I took the ball out of my glove and wrung my hand to see whether I had broken any of the bones in it. Luckily no bones were broken all the shock, though the member felt numb for several hours. Clarke Griffith ran out from the 'dug-out' and shook me by the hand, while all the other players congratulated me. But, boys," and the kid wagged his head with emphasis, "if I could have got out of the way of that ball I would never have made the catch. That is why I say Larry is the hardest hitter. And I shall believe he is, too, to my dying day."

Planning for Tour

Turn Wrists To Get Drive

Champion Travers Tells Just How He Gets So Much Distance

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The secret of long driving in golf is given by Jerome D. Travers, the national champion, in his illustrated article in the August Golfer, of which Walter J. Travis, the former international champion, is the editor. Treating of the drive, Mr. Travers has this to say of the swing:

"In the golfing stroke the swing plays a most important part. The movement must be positive, but not too stiff or too flexible. I grip the club firmly in both hands and draw it back close to the ground with my wrists, and not with the arms, as most players do. I do not strive to keep the face of the clubs at right angles to the ball with my wrists. This turning of the wrists imparts greater speed to the club head and is the secret of long driving. To master this turn of the wrist is to add many yards to the long game.

"In regard to what may be termed the angle of the swing, I take the club head along the ground and then around rather sharply until the shaft is almost allel to the ground. In coming down, the club describes the same curve in going up, the club at no time being approximately perpendicular."

Coulon Takes Needed Rest

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—In order to regain his old-time speed Johnny Coulon, the bantamweight champion, has gone to the Canadian wilds to rusticate. Living close to nature and roughing it, Coulon thinks will be of great benefit to him. Coulon some time ago found plans to establish his camp in the Georgian bay region, across the border. He will go there some time, and when he returns expects to be in such shape again as to permit him to re-enter the ring.

Johnny scouts the idea that he is on the down grade, and states that all he needs to bring himself back to his former self is a little time in the woods.

Before he left, he told his friends: "I'm going to hunt, fish, sleep and eat to my heart's desire. It will be the simple life every minute I am away. I'm not going to let the thought of boxing enter my head. Many persons say that I am going back; but wait! I know what is the trouble. I need a little rest."

Evidently Coulon isn't worrying about his title. He doesn't think that he will be sheared of it. Regarding his title crown Coulon says: "I am not the least concerned about Kid Williams or what he plans to do regarding the championship. I know who the champion is, and so does Williams, and it's nobody's business about claiming the title don't worry me a bit. When I get ready to defend my honors, I'll accommodate him. That may be this fall or next spring. But under no circumstances will I consent to box while still suffering from illness."

Coulon's brother, George, who has been in the champion's corner in all of his important engagements, has made the trip to Canada to look after the Logan Square idol.

Home Run Hits Were Plentiful

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Lively slugging, reminiscent of the early part of 1911, featured some of the big league games Friday. Among the home runs made were seven home runs, Luderus of the Philadelphia Nationals, leading with two of the circuit clouts. Two of the Cubs' drives helped Becker aided in the Cubs' defeat with one homer and the others were made by Hoblitzel, of Cincinnati; Bodie, of the Chicago Americans; Wingo, of the St. Louis Nationals, and Wilson, of Pittsburg.

Two users ago the unusual amount of slugging was popularly accounted for by the theory that the balls were made with an extra live core, later an experiment made by a National league umpire and a Boston newspaper man indicated that at least some of the balls then in use were overweight—just enough heavier than ordinarily to make the hurlers unable to curve them much.

Scouts in Camp

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 9.—Eight members of the patrol of Boy Scouts recently added to the Dalton troop, all boys twelve years of age, are spending a few days on a camping trip to Mineral Springs.

Pointers On Match GOLF Play for The Novice

American golfers have been laughed at abroad for the reason that most of us keep a card on every round of the links. The English call this "pad and pencil" golf and have almost as much fun with it as when ridiculing American qualifying and match play tournaments. Only a mere medal play competitions are not as frequent as with us and match play knock out tournaments still are popular. Britishers indulges in friendly matches for a shilling or sovereign and kicks away his ball when the hole has been won by an opponent. When you ask him how he is going if he takes the trouble to keep any sort of track he says, "about 82," or 84, as the case may be.

It is an open question whether the American plan of holding out nearly every putt does not affect more valuable practice at a most interesting stage of the game. Having followed important matches for a number of years, I have become remarkable things happen with the ball less than two feet from the cup. Many a match has been turned from victory to defeat by loss of confidence in holing the little ones.

Successful match players start from the first tee with a determination to win the first hole. They don't merely hit the ball away and trust to luck or some imaginary streak of grit to pull them out of a tight place later on in the match. The hoped-for bit of luck may never come their way and defeat is their just reward.

I well remember playing a match with a man considerably below my class. I laughed to myself as I threw away the first hole. I did the same on the second hole. Eventually I squared the match, but lost out on the extra hole.

As the result proved, I had thrown away the match by not easily winning two out of the first three holes, which I could have done with room to spare had I been attending to my knitting.

In the final round of the recent French amateur championship E. A. Lassen, a former British amateur champion and a player of vast experience, lost the first three holes of the match against Lord Charles Hope, who is only twenty-one years old. On the first hole Lassen drove out of bounds, on the second he was three yards past the hole on an approach putt, while on the third he missed an eighteen-inch putt. Lassen squared the match on the fourteenth, but lost out on the nineteenth green.

A golf match starts on the first tee Theoretically a close match between experts is a deadly duel to see who will "crack" first. By a slight stretch of the imagination a match between overage players can be brought to a test as to which of them cracks widest. Get on the green in the fewest number of strokes you can and as near to the pin as you can. Then govern your putting according to the state of the match. If on the first green, play safe for your par or bogey, unless it is obvious that you must stab for the cup in order to save a half.

Later in the match you must take chances with your putts or play them safe, according to the play of the hole and state of the match. Golf matches between average players and duffers are so delightfully uncertain that the one who can play straight on the pin and go down in two putts with considerable regularity is more dependable to back than a long, wild hitter who is all over the course.

Every Trainer Saves His Best for Saratoga Meet

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—"It seems as if every trainer is saving his best horses for Saratoga," said Lewis Garth, while speaking of the meeting at the Spa.

"You see the purses are rather small at Belmont, and unless a person has paid his entrance fees and jockey mounts there is very little left for the horse that wins, and if he should lose, then it is costly. But no one is complaining about the size of the purses, as the local associations are giving as much as they can afford under the conditions. My object is to try to win some purses at Saratoga and beat some of those boys from Canada and the west, who believe they have the best steeplechasers in the world. When they get through beating The Welkin, Ticket or Leave and one or two others they will know they have been to the races."

This announcement would indicate that there will be some great struggles through the field when the jumping events are called. "Gwyn" Tompkins will have quite a hand of steeplechasers to draw from and so will some of the Canadian owners, and it would not be surprising to see quite a number of Long Island sportsmen cut a figure with some of their cross-country jumping stock.

John Sanford's purchasing English broad mares for his farm at Amsterdam should look considerable encouragement to those interested in the thoroughbred in this country, also to the thousands who are concerned in horse racing, for it reflects his opinion on the future of the sport. Were he not convinced that racing would come into its own again he would hardly have invested $17,000 in two brood mares with foals. Both he and the late General Stephen Sanford, his father, have done much to encourage the improvements of the American horse. Even when things looked so depressing he still kept up his establishment at Amsterdam and produced quite a number of horses which are sold at a loss.

It is such men as Mr. Sanford who will build up the shattered sport and industry. He knows its value from an economic standpoint, as well as its national importance. It is doubtful if Mr. Sanford's Hurricana farm ever paid its yearly expenses, consequently he can never be charged with raising horses for personal profit. It is purely a pleasure and pastime to him. He has never been charged with owning any stock in a racing plant, hence that end of the sport as a profit accruing investment is out of the question.

Eight Yachts Race For the King's Cup

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 9.—Eight Yacht club, is one of the most valuable schooner, hoisted sail Friday for the annual race for the King's cup, offered by King of England. The entries included six knockabout sloops. The original cup, the gift of King Edward VII, an honorary member of the New York Yacht club, is one o fthe most valuable trophies in America, the intrinsic value of which is $5,000, but from an artistic standpoint its value is much greater. The only condition imposed by King Edward when he gave the cup in 1906 was that it should be raced for yearly by yachts over fifty feet on the water. Upon the death of King Edward, the first king's cup was withdrawn from competition at the request of his successor and a second cup substituted by George V.

Gotch Good Shot

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 8.—With a handicap of 23 yards, L. S. German, a professional from Omaha, Neb., was high gun with a score of 100 in the second day's shoot of the western handicap here.

Frank Gotch, the wrestler, entered the lists and dropped 91 targets out of 100 with a handicap of 16 yards.

This year's world's championship series will mean that the clubs of the big organizations, National and American ,the great representatives of the national game of baseball, will receive 25 per cent of the share of whatever is earned by the contesting teams in the seven-game series. The umpires will each receive $1,000 for officiating in the deciding games. Should the Athletics of Philadelphia and the New York Giants be the contenders, the teams will play in each city every other day.

Prough Going In Real Class

Baron Flinger Has Outdistanced All Rivals—E. Brown in Second Place

For five at pitcher took on renewed life right at the end of the season and pitched the best chunk of ball you ever witnessed it is Bill Prough, of the Birmingham club. Right now Prough tops the Southern league flingers with the high average of .826, having won 19 games and lost but 4.

E. Brown, Covaleskie, Cavet, Conzelman and Price have all been outdistanced by the Baron star. E. Brown ranks second among the list of hurlers, with Colvaleskie third, Cavet fourth, Conzelman fifth, Price sixth, and Dent seventh.

One of the features of the week's play has been the rise of Elliott Dent, of Atlanta. He now has an average of .643 for the 9 wins and 5 losses he has hurled.

Perfect Plans For Next Meet

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 9.—It is said that William Clymer, now manager of the Buffalo Bisons, made fifty-two changes in the Wilkes-Barre team of the New York State league last season before he got a winning combination that finally won some twenty-odd games in a row and landed within a fraction of a game of the pennant.

While he has the Bisons going at a pretty fair clip now, and while he hasn't begun to equal his Wilkes-Barre record yet, he is certainly making changes on the Buffalo team at a rate that is astonishing the fans. Almost every trade he makes is a startling one.

Women Golfers to Visit America

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Harold H. Hilton, the British amateur golf champion, is authority for the statement that American women golfers will be the pleasure of seeing foreign women golf champion titleholders in competition as well as the men. Hilton is not mistaken, golfers here are to be complimented on their luck this year. With Ray, Vardon and Taylor from England, and Massy, Tellier and possibly Gassiat from France, there will be enough and to spare of good things in the men's division this year.

Had the enthusiasts here had the selection, no better way could have been chosen for their trip here than Miss Dodd and Miss Ravencroft. There might, however, have been a desire to bring over a few good things as to include that wonderful golfer, Miss

PLAYGROUNDS BIG HELP DEVELOPING THE CHILD

Joe Bean Has worked Wonders This Season by Careful Attention to the Many Children Under His Care

The work of the Atlanta play grounds for the upbuilding of strong bodies and good sportsmanship in the young hopes of the city is drawing to a close for the 1913 season. The popularity of these outing parks, the green spots in the city's pavement shows the great need of such places in Atlanta, and the good work which has been done by Joe Bean and his corps of supervisors.

The last day which these parks will be operated is August 26. The formal closing exercises will be held on rally day, August 22. On this day all the children enrolled in the playground movement will gather at Grant's park for games and exercises.

During the part of the season which is nearly over these playgrounds have furnished a breathing place and a place of wholesome recreation for 25,484 youngsters, and have demonstrated that they have come to stay. Thousands of toddling legs have been strengthened. Thousands of little lungs have breathed fresh and pure air, and have sent the warm blood tingling through the veins. Thousands of pairs of eyes have been brightened with the light that is kindled by the joy of play.

Right here is where the sport writer turns to a sociologist and indulges in a homily on playing. He talks about the expansion of children into men, through play properly conducted. Playground, it is true, are the places where the foundations of many athletes of the future are laid, but is not the picture of the romping boy or girl with hair flying in the breeze and face full of the joyous clean thoughts of the open, as full of hope for the coming generation as that of a champion athlete in embryo. One superior physical man means one clean life, while many children gathered together playing games means that many future citizens are forming good habits and laying foundations which counts as much in the office and in the home as it does on the athletic field.

Children who play in the open and who play right, at the critical age between 14 and 17, are men and women who can be counted on in the future. They are the best asset of a city. The Atlanta playgrounds have already worked with and benefited 25,484 of the city's children.

NO GUTTER PLAY.

Your child does not play in the gutter here, and none of the influences of the gutter and the gang touch him. Supervisors give careful direction to the games. Mind and body act as one, and both receive the training which is the child's in the school of play.

Clean games are played, and above all clean sportsmanship habits which foster an open, useful mind and a strong, enduring body are formed, habits which stick all through life.

AT JOYNER PARK.

The recreation ground which was recently established at Joyner park has already done work which is enough to make the City of Atlanta proud of her playgrounds, and to bring the realization that they are forces in physical education as necessary as the schools are to the mental education.

This park was opened on the 15th of July, and in the first two weeks they enrolled 555 young sportsmen or 39 on every night. These 39 were kept busy from the pool rooms, or more noxious places.

Boys and girls of from 14 to 17 years are reached by this park. They are caught at the age when they want to leave the home and go into the world. This longing to wander is natural at their age, and is a good influence if it is rightly directed. By good exercise and relaxation they are attracted to a place which is really worth while. Not only have the young people been furnished with good recreation here, but there have also been many of the older people who gathered from 7:30 to 9 in the evenings to listen to the graphophone and watch the game.

"It is a great work," says Joe Bean, and any one can see that his heart and soul is in it.

WHAT ABOUT NEXT YEAR?

The question arises, however, what is going to be done next year to carry the building of amateur athletes, and the cultivation of the physiques of the children?

Atlanta needs more play grounds. Many people in the city do not know that these play grounds exist. They are all on the outskirts of the city. They are located as follows:

One in the Third ward. (Mims' park.)

One in the Sixth ward (Joyner park.)

One in the Tenth ward (Stewart avenue.)

One in the Fifth ward (English avenue.)

They are too widely scattered, and by no means reach all of the children.

Again, the season is too short. They are not operated long enough. What are the young men to do now that the open season is over? They will play baseball wor a while and then what will fill the time which has been so profitably devoted to outdoor sports? The city is always full of ever-becoming evil influences.

To allow ten weeks of play is absurd. The climatic conditions of the south offer safe twelve months of playing weather, and under such circumstances the play grounds should be continuously operated except per-iaps for a week or two in January and February. Men should be as liberal with the time for their children's play as nature has been with her opportunities.

The money invested in these play grounds is capital invested in the city's children, and the dividends declared in manhood and womanhood are a thousandfold.

The brilliant success of the play grounds this season has only brought to light the crying need for better playgrounds and a longer season next year.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Montgomery won and still retained the first place by a good margin. Birmingham, however, by taking a double bill boosted themselves into second place, while Mobile by reason of her double defeat dropped down to fourth place. They are three points behind Atlanta.

The Giants walked away with Cincinnati, while Chicago was pulling Philadelphia down by a good margin. This gives the Giants a seven game lead.

The Athletics were shutout by Pertuson's curves, while the Naps started winning again by handing Lefty Boehling his fourth straight defeat.

Wesley Wins Two

The Wesley team of the Baraca league, defeated the Jonathans, 7 to 3 and 4 to 0. Tinsley, of the Jonathans, pitched a good game and but for one bad inning, the fifth, he would have gotten away with the long end of the score. In the second game, Kane's pitching and the batting of Crosley, Seawell and Hardman were the bright features. SCore:

Great Speed With Autos

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Aug. 9.—Earl Cooper, driving a Stutz car, won the fifth annual Santa Monica road race here today by sending his car thundering across the 4 mile course 53 times in 6 hours, 1 minute and 52 seconds, or on an average of 73.86 miles per hour. The record for 445 miles is 74.25 miles per hour.

Barney Oldfield, veteran of a hundred races, finished second with a Mercer in 6:07:45. Louis Nikrent, driving another Mercer, was third in 6:28:17.2.

Aside from the struggle between Cooper and Oldfield for first place the excellent work of Frank Goode, driver of the Apperson No. 11, kept the crowd excited. Apparently Goode was certain of third place until the forty-seventh lap when engine trouble developed and put him out of the running.

Teddy Tetzloff, who won two previous races over the same course, had motor trouble from the start and his Fiat was never a serious contender after the first three laps.

Seventh Win for Red Caps

The Red Caps won their seevnth straight when they met and defeated the fast East Side team Saturday. Everybody played fine ball. The feature of the game was the hitting of Moore for the Red Caps, being at bat four times, getting eight hits, two of which were home runs, and Waldrip made a double play unassisted.

Texas Oil Defeats Standard Oil Co., 5 to 4

The Texas Oil boys won a 7-inning game from the Standard yesterday, due to "too much Hughes" and "not enough Cooper," the former pitching a 6-hit game, while Cooper gave up 12. The features of the game were home runs, Callaghan; three-base hits, Cannon; two-base hits, Hughes and Reynolds. Pope showed good form on short. It was agreed by both managers that a 9-inning game would be played; however, the Standard contended they were entitled to play two more innings after seven had been played, which was denied them by Umpires duBignon and Erskine.

McFarland Is After Ritchie

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—That he would be a better drawing card with Ritchie than he has been appearing on meet Cross, Britton and Murphy all on the game night, is Packey McFarland's modest opinion of how he figures the lightweight tangle. Packey says that 134 pounds will suit him and that immediately after the hot weather is over he will see that Ritchie does not put him off any longer.

"Now that Ritchie has changed the weight scale, he can no longer avoid me, and as I can make 134 pounds and retain my full strength, I am going to be champion at last," says McFarland.

Packey of the Chicago wizard would be as great a card as he thinks is decidedly doubtful and that he would be strong at 134 is equally as uncertain. Here in New York at McFarland-Britton bout would draw well, but in California, where a championship battle would have to be held, the Chicago boxer is none too popular. Even on the Coast there is no demand for McFarland, and his bid for a chance at Ritchie has been but coldly received.

Judging by the Chicago boxer's last twenty-round performance, in which he made no great showing against Tommy Murphy, he would not find Ritchie an easy to down in a long distance engagement. It is now nearly two years since his bout with Murphy, and his stamina, which seemd to be on the wane then, has not improved in the meantime. Now that only the most heroic measures would enable him to scale near the lightweight limit he would find the distance more trying. In all probability McFarland has considered matters too long and will never be champion lightweight.

Sluggers Cop

East Point Wins

East Point defeated Center Hill in a close and interesting game. Both teams played just ball all the way. The feature of the game was a one-handed catch by Hardy on short and the pitching of Driver. Center Hill would like to stranke a game with some team for next Saturday. Call Atlanta phone 1417, or address E. Bailey, 475 Gordon street.

Blanton Sets Record For Pitching Games

BOSTON, Ga., Aug. 9.—In pitching six ball games in five days, "Kid" Blanton, an amateur pitcher, of this town has no doubt established a new world's record. In two of the six games he shut his opponents out, in another he scored a no-hit game.

In Perry, Fla., last Monday, Blanton worked in a game against the Perry club, which is considered to be the fastest independent club in Florida due to the non-arrival of the other pitchers. Blanton was obliged to pitch two games against the Perry team on the next day—Tuesday. On Wednesday he pitched for Boston against Quitman, Ga. On Thursday he did not work, but on Friday he went to Camilla, Ga., where he pitched another double-header, winning the first game by a score of 7 to 5 and also the last by a score of 2 to 0.

Many Hurlers Who Are Stars Very Bashful

Nap Rucker, Bob Russell and Rube Marquard, Are Three Southpaws Who Shun Publicty

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 9.—Strange, isn't it, how some pitchers court publicity an admiration, while others shun the limelight?

Brooklyn has in Nap Rucker one of the most retiring stars in baseball. Red Russell, the southpaw find of the White Sox, keeps in the background whenever possible. So does Rube Marquard, of the Giants.

You can practically set it down as a fact the above trio is the most bashful set of twirlers in the big leagues. The strange part of it all is they are southpaws. We have frequently heard how a left-handed twirler is this and that—he is supposed to gradually weaken his heart by throwing from the left side of his body. Now add to the various features his bashfulness.

Those who have tried to snap pictures of Rucker, Marquard and Russell are the first to discover their dislike for publicity. They never have much to say on the field. When their mates are kidding around during practice hours you find the three quiet and unassuming.

Yet they are among the leaders in their profession. Marquard had nineteen straight victories last season and nearly succumbed to the wave of stories which were printed about him.

Many believe Nap Rucker the best southpaw of the decade. Reb Russell appears like his successor to that honor. But if you want to learn anything from them you have to pry it out with a crowbar.

Then there are the pitchers who love the calcium, the applause and the hurrahs. These are so numerous they can be counted by the scores. They stalk gradly across the field and smile inwardly when the crowd points them out.

Al Walsh, of the Sox, is one who basks in the sunshine of applause. It's a common belief the big moose is conceited. This is a question. He certainly stands on the mound as if he hates himself. But it's his natural way of doing things.

Nothing pleases him more than to go in as relief twirler when the game is going bad and there are 30,000 in the stands yelling for Walsh. It would be difficult to keep him tied to the bench under such conditions. But it is not conceit—it's rather knowledge of power and the desire to prove it.

Offer Loving Cup In Grocer League

There is a big time in store for those who are fortunate enough to be away on Wednesday at the grocers' picnic at Warm Springs. Foremost among the many big pleasures scheduled for the day is a big ball game between two rival clubs which make up the Grocers' league.

To stimulate interest in the game the New South Bakers has offered a handsome loving cup to the winning club. This cup is now on exhibition in Maier & Berkle's window and is attracting a great deal of attention.

This is the first season of the Grocers' league and it has gone through in wonderful style. Good baseball has been played and much interest manifested in and in offering the handsome loving cup the New South Bakers is doing much to add life.

Central Congregational Vs. St. Philips

In a hard fought game the Central Congregational church team defeated the fast St. Philips team by the score of 5 to 4. The game was very close at a score 2 and 1 up to the eighth inning, Central Congregational church beginning a hot rally on an error, scoring four runs for the C. C. C. Vinson, of St. Philips deserves credit for a perfect batting average, being up four times and getting hit by pitcher twice and getting two hits.

Mundy to Boston

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—President McAleer, of the Boston American league club, announced today that he has purchased First Baseman Mundy from the Portsmouth, Va., club of the Virginia State League.

SOUTHERNERS WHO STARRED

Mike Balenti got one out of three.

Derrill Pratt had a big day, hitting safely three times in four trips to the plate.

Dode Paskert got one in three times up.

Al Bridwell also batted .333 in three trials.

Bobby Byrne was up five times and got one hit.

Zack What got one out of four times up.

Red Smith repeated his teammate's performance.

SLANG IS TO STICK IN BASEBALL COLUMN

Effort to Abandon Use of Freak Words Not Meeting With Favor—Style Would Be Too Stiff

A Chicago newspaper with the aid and abettment of Ban Johnson, is crying against the use of slang in sport stories. It is to chuckle. We would at least hate to be on a national board of censorship to fine sporting editions using slang.

The rule book terms the official the umpire. Would we hate to fine the man who called him "the arbiter," "his rumps" the "wielder of indication." The rule books says that a safety is a hit. We welcome the spicy terms, a pole, or a smash, a drive, a poke, or a slow roller. They break the monotony.

In our humble opinion, slang in sport stories performs a function. This function is none other than relief from monotony. Behold we show you the tools with which we work. If every man who hit one where the fielders wasn't in a ball game, were credited with a hit or a screamer to center, Wallop Smith added his poke just short to the melee. Bisland was nipped at first, Welchonce and Smith advancing a peg. Harold Holland dumped a dinky one over first which fell safe, counting Welchonce. Holtz lifted a long one to left and Smith was held at third, scoring a minute later on Chapman's drive to right. Love ended the session by fanning.

NEED THE SPICE.

Without the spice, sport stories would be little else than tabular statements, and there is anything the American abhors it is repetition. Are we becoming English in our dignity? The heavens forbid.

Words every descriptive words, some words which will tell the tired business man all he wants to know in themselves, whereas a stilted phrase would take up three seconds more of his time, and time is what they are after.

The Chicago paper may (and then again it may not) publish sport stories without spice, but as to enforcing the rule elsewhere, it is to roar.

Cow with $60,000 Pasture

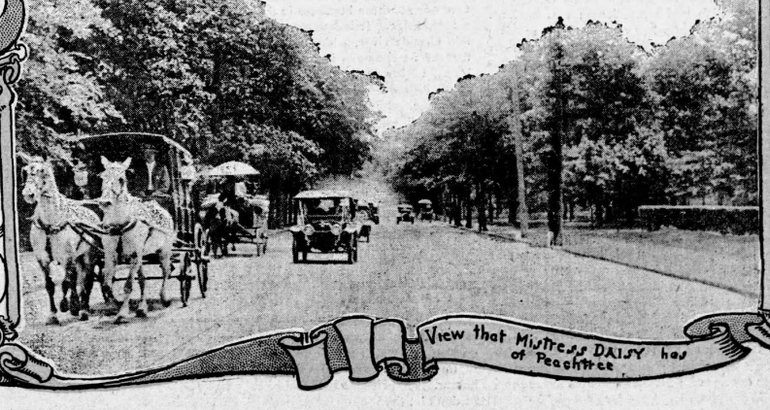
DAISY in her Valuable Pasture



View that Mistress DAISY has of Peachtree

EVEN the grass blades that "Daisy" eats might have golden flecks, and the clover leaves be etched with the Grecian features of the lady on the silver dollars.

For "Daisy" has a pasture upon Peachtree street, and, as she chews a contented cud, she looks out upon a prospect of automobiles and asphalt.

"Daisy's" is uniquely exclusive. Others may have blue grass for pasturage, but none, except "Daisy," chooses her diet from the grass and the clover leaves of a principal thoroughfare.

The Peachtree lot, which she uses for grazing and for a quiet observation of the neurasthenic motor cars, is at the corner of Sixth street, and is the property of L. H. Beck, of Beck & Gregg Hardware company.

Six months ago the lot was placed at "Daisy's" disposal as a green pasture, and in the intervening time she has been its tenant. Her hours, from 7 in the morning until 6 in the evening, are spent in munching the grass blades that might appropriately be flecked with gold and the clover leaves that might be etched with Grecian features.

The lot has a broad frontage upon Peachtree street, and extends backward for a distance as a smooth, green carpet, level with the street. Afterward it drops down, and in the rear is partly hidden from the street.

"Daisy" never leaves the green carpet where the prospect of automobiles and asphalt opens itself to her eye. She altogether avoids the depressed portion of the lot, from which the street is partly hidden.

THE CABARET HABIT

You see, "Daisy" has become used to a vivacious outlook as she selects from a menu of grass blades and clover leaves. She has the cabaret habit. Without the entertainment and the stimulation of a busy street laid out before her, "Daisy" finds that leafy tidbits lose their flavor.

Automobiles have become as necessary to her appetite as Turkey Trot lyrics are to mortals who have grown used to song as an appetizer and digestive.

"Daisy" falls into a disinterested frame of mind when chance interrupts her routine of munching grass and clover delicacies from the edge of Peachtree street; and observing with a calm but appreciative eye, the vivacity of the street.

She suffers from a sort of ennui, a tedium, a feeling that time has lost its gusto. At first, it was quite different. The noise and the nervous pace of the automobiles were contrary to "Daisy's" notions of orderly and healthful quiet. She was disposed to calm, and she found too little of that in her pasture on Peachtree street.

"Daisy" seemed to have a persistent fear that motor cars which were gone almost before she could glimpse them, might feel the whimsical impulse to try the qaulities of her pasture as a roadway.

JOHN'S PHILOSOPHY.

"You know," says John who leads "Daisy" to and from the Peachtree street pasturage; and who, earlier in life, in the capacity of chauffeur, gave much thought to motor cars, "nearly everybody feels that way at first 'bout automobiles, and cows do 'specially

"I've milked and chauffeured, and they are sorter alike. Whenever you ain't expectin' it the milk's kicked over or the carburetor busts. But cows and automobiles are aggravatin' in different ways. The one's quiet and deliberate, and the other jumps up and is about mischief 'fore on know it.

"Both of them is exasperatin', but their natures is different, and consequently they don't understand each other at first. Cows are always chewin'; automobiles are kickin' 'round waitin' to start something. When you've finished milkin' and the cow lifts up her left hind foot and kicks over the bucket, you always are so surprised you can't say anything right at first. But after a little while you sorter surprise yourself at what you can say.

"Now, take an automobile and it's different. If it turns over or jumps up and down or busts open, you ain't surprised. You was expectin' something just like that, and you has somethin' ready to say. But you can't ever surprise yourself like when you've had a bucket of milk turned over.

NATURE OF THE ANIMALS.

"The difference is the nature of the animals. They are surprisin' to one another. And, you take this cow and she couldn't think what to make of automobiles at first.

"But it's funny how we get to likin' strange sights, and how, if we ain't set by a thing at first, we are later on. She didn't have no appetite for the first days. Seemed like her nerves couldn't stand the strain of so many automobiles. But she began to perk up, and the more automobiles there was the better she liked it; and now, when she don't get out there where she can see the street, she mopes like she was plumb disappointed.

"Cows have sensitive dispositions. You wouldn't believe how many nerves they got. They like things just so. If things ain't that way, they wait a chance and kick over a bucket of milk just when it's full. They look patient enough, but they ain't. They want everything. I guess it is the human nature in them."

Yet "Daisy" is not of a neurasthenic or an impatient disposition. She merely asks a lot with a Peachtree frontage as pasture, and the sight of automobiles frisking back and forth as sauce for her eight-hour meal.

INSISTS UPON VIVACITY.

"Daisy" has just turned two years, she is city bred; and naturally, being of this brisk young age and being habituated to the noise and stir of the city, she insists upon the vivacity of life.

She is like a pet dog whom habit has changed from bones to broiled chops. She prefers automobiles to country meadows.

But "Daisy" is not of the decadent and abnormal type. She contributes three gallons of milk a day as her share in the activities of the world, and keeps a sleek and well-nourished appearance.

She differs from others of the Jersey strain, only in her exclusive pasture and in her cultivated taste for a busy thoroughfare as her outlook when she is munching grass blades and clover leaves.

Scientists just now are giving thought to whether animals think—to what is the reason for their adaptation to unusual conditions.

"Think," says John, "why cows are always thinkin'. Every time they takes three mouthfuls of grass they raises their heads, and looks around as though somethin' was on their minds. They usually are thinkin' then when they'll kick over the next bucket of milk."

MR. DOOLEY ON THE MEXICAN PROBLEM.

BY FINLEY PETER DUNNE.

"They have no throuble with their ex-prisidints beyond seein' that th' grass is kept cut."

"Th' time would come when we'd have to grab this fair neighbor an' haul her into the sisterhood iv th' States."

"OTHAT James Monroe," said Mr. Dooley, "I have no doubt he was a fine man in his day, but bad cess to him, says I, f'r puttin' it up to us to go thrapezin' around th' continent docthrin' Cubia an' Nicaragoo an' Vinzwala an' Mexico an' thim other tropical diseases till we've no time at all to attind to our own stomach aches. An' if we don't cure th' disease all th' wurruld says we must take it oursilves, d'ye mind. We may be writhin' with internal pain, but at th' sound iv breakin' crockery in a doby hut nex' dure we have to pull on our pants, get out th' box iv first aid f'r th' injured, an' dash over to reform our little protijees. We scrub their flures, tache thim how to cook healthy meals, wash th' baby, fumigate th' primises, lecture th' ol' man on th' error iv his ways, pay th' ol' bills, an' lave a little change in th' sugar bowl to start things goin' again. An' we're no sooner out iv th' house thin they count th' spoons to find out what our rale motive was in callin', give th' baby th' box iv chloride iv lime to play with, and resoom throwin' th' furniture at each other.

"If it isn't wan thing it's another. If it isn't Cubia it's Vinzwala, an' if it isn't that it's Mexico. What's th' throuble in Mexico? Well, it's a difference in opinyon in th' Wilson fam'ly about th' kind iv people they ought to assocyate with. Hinnery Lane Wilson, him that is our ambassadure to Mexico but is soon to resoom th' practice iv law in Spokane, is a gr-reat diplomat, a good mixer, who takes th' wurruld as he finds it an' overlooks small faults in th' men that he likes. Afther Gin'ral Hurta had claned off his revolver an' put his bowie knife back in his pocket an' become prisidint iv Mexico, Hinnery, who felt a gr-reat fondness f'r th' gin'ral in spite iv th' nervous twitchin' in his pistol finger, thried to inthrajooce him to Doc Wilson. 'Doc,' says he, 'I want ye to shake hands with me frind Hurta. Ye two boys ought to know each other, bein' in th' same line.' Thin he whispered to Doc: 'Don't pay any attintion to his face. It is not aisy to look at, but he has a heart iv goold. He's a man iv high sthrung timp'ramint, a thrifle careless iv human life at times an' somewhat given to threachery, but who iv us is without faults? Besides I've already reco'nized him, an' ye might just as well get into line,' he says. But Doc Wilson has become partiklar about his frinds since he got to be prisidint. He said he'd be somethin' —or other—if he'd reco'nize a prisidint that got his certyficate iv office fr'm th' coroner. If he wanted to hook up with that school iv statesmanship he'd ask Gyp th' Blood to come down to Washin'ton an' visit with him. 'This here spoort iv killin' prisidints has gone far enough,' he says. 'I don't sympathize with it in th' laste. It is a bad precedint an' I'll do nawthin' in anny way to establish it,' he says.

"An' now, just because Doc Wilson is so exclusive, it looks as though we'd got to go into Mexico an' do somethin'. But what it is I don't know. Wan statesman says we must meedyate, which is th' same thing as sayin' to this distracted people: 'Boys, ye must make frinds f'r my sake. O, well, thin, if ye won't ye won't.' Another idee is that we sthrike a bargain with this onaisy nation be which they agree to finance th' disordher if we'll supply th' polis to quell it. That is what is called inthervintion. But most iv me fellow citizens, includin' th' most inthrepid iv our iditors, has made up their minds that Mexico has become such an oncurable nuisance that we ought to annex it. Yes, sir; th' hour seems near at hand whin Mexico will be wan iv th' brightest an' heaviest jools on th' neck iv Columbya.

"I've always thought that th' time wud come whin we'd have to grab this fair neighbor an' haul her, bitin' an' squealin', be th' hair iv th' head into th' sisterhood iv th' states, but I hoped 'twud not be durin' my life. We ought to lave somethin' f'r posterity to do besides payin' th' debts we run up f'r thim. But it looks now, be what I read in th' pa-apers, that we'd have to perform this jooty at wanst. An' here am I har'ly knowin' what to say to th' new mimber iv th' fam'ly that will soon be prodded into our domestic circle. To tell th' thruth, I haven't paid much attintion to our beautiful but sulky neighbor since we had a war with her, but now that she may soon be settin' at th' table with us an' inthrajoocin' broken glass into our dhrink I've got to read up about her an' her past, which is sprightly but diff'rent from th' past iv Matsachoosetts.

"Mexico, I larn, is a considherable sthrip iv mountain an' homicide, or pollyticks, extendin' fr'm our southren bordhers in th' gin'ral shape iv a broken leg. It is bounded on th' north be th' Rio Grande river, which is navagable be pedesthreens f'r thousans iv miles fr'm its soorce an' be th' wishes iv th' people iv Texas, an' on th' south be more throuble f'r us fr'm th' Monroe docthrine. Its soil projooces an abundance iv rocks iv all sizes an' its climate is iv a sandy complexion. Its inhabitants range in color fr'm dark to darker, an' manny iv thim ar-re iv Indyan extharction, but th' Indyan has not been completely exthracted fr'm all iv thim. In recent years large numbers iv th' young men iv th' land have become pathrites, or, as they ar-re called in Mexico, bandits, in preparation f'r a pollytickal career, but manny iv thim have failed on account iv bein' too tendher hearted whin ilivated to office. Often a successful Mexican bandit has turned out to be a weak an' sintimental sicrety iv th' threasury.

"Mexicans injye a republican form iv govermint often whin away fr'm home. They have a constitution which can be found in th' catalogue iv th' naytional muzeeum in th' departmint iv humor. Th' prisidint is ilicted be th' people, on'y he don't let thim know till he has took office, whin he informs thim that his predecissor has committed suicide be shootin' himsilf in th' back. They have no throuble with their ex-prisidints beyond seein' that th' grass is kept cut. In fact, there is no such term as ex-prisidint in the language. Th' former exicutive is ayether spoken iv as 'th' late prisidint,' or 'th' remains,' or if he survives he is known as a fugitive fr'm justice. As soon as th' new exicutive has claned up the office he removes th' rilitives an' frinds iv his predicissor an' negotyates a loan. Th' cab'net takes th' oath iv office on Choosdah; on Winsdah it takes th' cash dhrawer, an' on Thursdah, whin th' prisidint an' his term expires simultanyously, it takes th' boat f'r Paris, pursooed to th' coast be th' incomin' administhration, who serenade th' ship with gatlin' guns.

"Thanks to its nachural aptychood an' our binivolince, civilization is makin' gr-reat sthrides in Mexico, sthridin' in wan day an' sthridin' out th' next. Although niver admittin' thim to th' fam'ly, we long ago adopted thim, an' we have since bin a kin' iv a great brother to thim, offrin' to fight anny wan that intherfered with thim an' smackin' thim fr'm time to time to show thim their place an' takin' annythin' away fr'm thim that we wanted. We give thim th' affictionate name iv 'greasers,' an' in th' ol' days in Texas they were threated almost like human Americans, excipt that whin a cillybrated gun fighter died in thim days space forbid givin' th' names iv th' Mexicans that had received his attintions. But there was always a respectful footnote to th' list iv victims in th' obithury notice readin': 'Mexicans not tabylated.'

"We flooded their sunny land with th' best flowers iv our civilization, with life insurance agents, an' sewin' masheen canvassers, an' Standard Ile, an' excursions fr'm Ioway to give thim free lectures on th' 'Evils iv th' Bullfight' an' 'Th' Siesta,' their two favrite forms iv athletics. In their domestic throubles we presarved a careful nootrality an' put it on th' shelf in th' panthry. We took no-sides, on'y askin' cash in advance f'r arms an' ammynition an' insistin' that both parties shud shoot south whin near th' Rio Grande so's not to disthurb th' Sundah school picnic parties watchin' th' rivolution fr'm th' Texas shores iv that brawlin' torrent. Naturally they return our affiction f'r thim, often unopened. Th' love iv this simple people f'r their gr-reat hearted binifactor is such that Americans who have lived a long time in that counthry get th' habit iv walkin' backward out iv all public places so's not to offind thim.

"Where is he?" says our Ambassadure. "In the morgue," says Gin'ral Hurta."

"Th' prisidint iv Mexico before th' late prisidint was Gin'ral Perfurio Diaz. He was a wise ol' redman an' he knew that there's nawthin' so dangerous as an angry binifacthor who feels that he ain't gettin' anny retburns on his invistmint. So he was always polite to us, d'ye mind, an' he kept us in good humor be threatin' his own fellow citizens, as he oftin called thim, f'r he was full iv fun, worse thin he threated ours. But he grew old, his inimies were all dead, an' public office held little more charm f'r him. Wan day he see a man with whiskers comin' up th' sthreet with a brass band. 'Who's that?' says he to th' thrusted chief iv polis. 'That's our new prisidint,' says th' faithful subordynate, reachin' f'r a gun. 'Well, thin,' says Gin'ral Perfurio Diaz, 'I s'pose I'd betther abdicate,' which he did, out iv a window, an' is now in Europe laughin' his head off ivry time he opens a pa-aper.

"This chief iv polis was Hinnery Lane Wilson's frind that Doc Wilson won't be inthrajooced to. Th' new prisidint that swore him in was Gin'ral Madero. Madero had a sound idee iv what a republican form iv govermint shud be. It was, in a gin'ral way, to let on'y mimbers iv his fam'ly know th' combynation iv th' safe. But there were other pathrites who had large fam'lies, an', fired be their love iv counthry, they ast ol' Kosciusko Hurta if he wudden't lead them in sthrikin' a blow f'r th' liberties iv Mexico an' th' contints iv the damper. An' he did. He wint at wanst to th' prisidint's house with th' insignya iv his office in his hands, clapped thim on th' tyrant's wrists, an' hauled him out iv th' prisidintyal chair, which he immejutly sat in himsilf.

"It was thin that Hinnery Lane Wilson jined th' game. Born as he was in th' natural gas belt iv Indyanny, Hinnery was endowed with diplomacy fr'm th' sthart. It is tur'ble to think what wud've happened to poor Madero if this great an' good man had not intherfered, f'r th' single minded pathrites had found th' cash dhrawer impty. He inthervened at wanst f'r th' onhappy man. He put bethween th' mis'rable culprit an' th' vengeance iv his inimies all th' power an' dignity iv our mighty nation, our thraditions iv frindship with Mexico, an' th' inflooence iv his own magnificent personality. 'Let not wan hair iv this man's head be touched,' sez he. 'Fr'm now on he is th' protijee iv me binificint govermint an' undher th' protiction iv our noble army an' navy. I wrap th' flag around him an' hol' ye pers'nally responsible f'r his well bein'. In behalf iv civilization, in behalf iv th' ties that bind our two nations together, in behalf iv humanity, an', what is more, in behalf iv mesilf, I not on'y ask, I command ye that no harm befall him,' sez Hinnery Lane Wilson. 'Ye'er ixcillincy has but to whisper a message fr'm our dhread but fam'ly neighbor to be obeyed,' said Gin'ral Hurta, fallin' to his knees. 'I will see that he is safe,' he says, bucklin' on his revolver. 'I will go an' attend to th' deetails mysilf,' he says. He come back in about a quarther iv an hour, an' says he: 'He's all right now. He's safe.' 'Where is he?' says our ambassadure. 'In th' morgue,' says Gin'ral Hurta. 'I took him out f'r an autymobile ride attinded be a sthrong guard. Whin I wasn't lookin' he seized th' rifles fr'm th' sojers an' shot himsilf twenty-four times in th' back iv th' neck, exclaimin', 'Hooray f'r Hurta.' His last wurruds were: 'Regards to Hinnery Lane Wilson.' 'A happy solution,' says th' American ambassadure. 'I now be th' power reposed in me be mesilf acknowledge ye as th' boney-fidey reglar de facto prisidint iv Mexico,' he says. 'An' I'll write to Cousin Woodrow an' tell him to do th' same,' he says.

"An' was this gr-reat diplomatic coop appreciated? It was not. Whin Doc Wilson heard about it he sent a message to Hinnery askin' him wud he plaze come to Washin'ton an' be blamed quick about it. An' th' gr-reat man onbended an' came. On th' way up he presarved th' customary or American diplomatic reserve, on'y discussin' th' question with the captain iv th' ship, th' chief mate, th' purser, th' head stoord, th' other passengers, an' th' reporthers at th' dock. 'What is to be th' policy to'rds Mexico?' says th' reporthers. 'I have it in me pocket,' says he. 'I wrote it out because Bryan don't know annything about diplomatic language. As soon as th' prisidint has copied it I'll take it back to Mexico with me,' he says.

"He had a thriumphal reception in Washin'ton. Whin he arrived at th' prisidint's office th' durekeeper pushed him in an' said, 'Here he is.' It is said th' prisidint made a gr-reat impressyun on him, possibly with a bound volume iv th' 'Life iv Cotton Mather' or a paper weight, although little is known about th' intherview. Whin he come out he complained iv a slight chill an' an earache.

"'Did ye read our policy to him?' asked a reporther. 'No,' says he, 'we didn't get to that. Whin th' prisidint let me up th' intherview was over.' 'Whin d'ye go back to Mexico?' 'I haven't fixed a time,' he says. 'Nawthin' came up about that durin' th' conference. But before I left th' prisidint told me that if I wint down Pinnsylvanya avnoo an' turned to th' right I'd find a store where I cud buy a ticket f'r Spokane if I used dhiplomacy an' had th' price,' he says."

"If Mexican pollyticks is so tough, why shud we want to annex it?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"I don't know," said Mr. Dooley, "onless it is New York needs comp'ny."

ATLANTA STUDIES FASHIONS IN PARIS ART GALLERIES

A VISIT to Paris isn't necessary whenever a new frill or flounce is wanted. A few complete dresses really are made without consultation with the "masters."

But designers here, those who really determine or, at least, suggest styles, yearly visit the large cities, particularly Paris, chiefly to see the art galleries and seek ideas from the great paintings.

"I have never yet had a real idea from a Paris dressmaker," said a woman the other day who is among the first to introduce styles in Atlanta. "I go to the art galleries, and from the paintings I get suggestions of color and of form.

"The ideas of the French designers are borrowed in a large measure from the art galleries. Why, they have agents constantly visiting all the galleries of Europe in search of suggestions for dress.

NOTHING NEW IN DRESS.

The old quotation, "there's nothing new under the sun," never applies more aptly than it does when speaking of the fashions, despite the fact that every season the "new styles" create a perfect whirlwind of discussion.

As a matter of face, there have been no strictly new styles in the last century or so, except, perhaps, the tailored costume and the shirtwaist, made popular by American women. Almost every radical change of style in latter years has had a prototype in the costumes of older centuries; and many of the "chic" and "modish" novelties which in recent years have been popularized to the point of commonness owe their existence to the cunning twirl of the brush of a long dead artist.

Take, for instance, the Rembrandt collar, the mediaeval ruche, the graceful lace frills at the cuff, the Gainsborough hat, the empire gown, the Charlotte Corday hat, the mob cap, the big puff sleeve, the bertha, the fichu, the maline and chiffon vest, the Tam O'Shanter hat, the pannier, the triple puff sleeve, the long, narrow, close-fitting sleeve finished with a frill; the lingerie hat and other enhancements of feminine beauty. As these have appeared from time to time, they have been hailed as the new styles, and some of them have come in for the share of ridicule and adverse criticism which greets every development of fashion's fancy.

NEW STYLES CONSERVATIVE.

Indeed, if men would take the trouble to look up a few books on the development of the costume, they would raise their hands in thanksgiving that the women of the twentieth century have hit upon such conservative clothes, for if you place even an exaggerated picture from a fashion magazine of today alongside of some of the monstrosities one sees in old volumes of the styles, an immediate gasp of amazement follows the comparison.

In almost every instance the modern adaptation of an older style of dress has been an improvement at least in grace of line and fabric; but were it not for the rich field of ideas in paintings and prints, the dressmakers of the world would long ago have been sore troubled to devise new gowns.

It is interesting to look over such old pictures and to find therein the suggestions which have been developed for the beautification of milady of today.

Nowadays it takes but four yards, approximately, to make a dress, but there was a time when it took nearly four yards merely for a pair of sleeves. Though they appear nowadays entirely lacking in grace and beauty, they were "quite the rage" some years ago, and every woman that could afford the money for the cloth wore them.

Looking to the beautiful and well-known picture of "Lorna Doone," one finds excuse for the idea that such sleeves might be lovely. The painting shows the same large sleeves, but in silken soft fabric which lends the voluminous folds a certain charm.

The fan-shaped arrangement of lace frills at the elbow that were so stylish six or seven years ago may be seen on Gainsborough's Queen Charlotte, and Mrs. Warren, by Romney, appears in the frilled fichu, close fitting sleeves finished with a ruffle at the wrist, and the skirt of exaggerated fullness that were fashionable many years ago, and which, in a slightly modified form, have been much worn in the last several years.

GAINSBOROUGH FASHIONS.

Gainsborough had an eye for lovely women, and many of his portraits have given suggestions to the world of style as well as inspiration in art. The Gainsborough hat is perhaps the most commonly known reproduction from his pictures, but if one looks even casually at his portrait of Mrs. Siddons, the remarkable similarity of her costuming to that of this year's styles will be at once apparent. She wears a very becoming black hat of the kind named after the artist, and her blue striped silk gown would be quite fashionable today with but little modification.

The pleated ruffle of lace or fine white cloth about the shoulders, which a few months ago was seen everywhere, is an almost exact reproduction of the one that lies across the shoulders of Franz Hals' "Laughing Cavalier," while on the paintings of Queen Elizabeth and others of her era appear the upstanding ruchings of lace that, in a slightly milder form, delight the women of 1913.

The Tam o' Shanter hat of last season may be seen on William Duke of Juliers and Cleves, in the portrait by Aldegreve, and on "La Devideult" by Greuze, and in Reynolds' "Simplicity" may be found the "boudoir cap," without which no woman is satisfied in this day and time.

The lingerie hat, which was universally worn five or six years ago, may be seen in practically the same shape on the head of Romney's Mrs. Drummond Smith, while the fetching little hat most common this season may be found on the head of Gainsborough's Lady Scott. It has a narrow, curving brim, a slightly high crown and is ornamented at the right by a white plume.

SOURCE OF NEW IDEAS.

These are a few of the more noticeable ideas which have been derived from art, and the more subtle suggestions of color, line and drapery have largely influenced modern fashions.

The best dressmakers do not rely entirely for ideas on their imagination (nor, as it sometimes seems, on dreams after a Welsh rarebit), but largely on old prints and the reproductions of the masters' paintings. They admit it. Volumes tracing the history of dress are pored over by the designers, and many spend hours in the famous art galleries of the world.

An Atlanta dressmaker who ranks high in her profession, and who visits Paris every year for new ideas, said the other day:

"Oh, no, I do not spend so much time at the coutouriers in Paris. There is little to be gained there, except a stray idea here and there. I visit the galleries and study the pictures there. I catch many a hint from the charming portraits."

It seems that the feminine ambition to be beautiful has left nothing for modern vanity to devise in the way of new ideas, and perhaps the reason is that in those days the sole occupation of woman was to appear beautiful. To charm the masculine eye was the reason for existence; and, knowing variety to be the spice of life in gowns as well as wit, she busied her brain with costumes. The richest of silks and satins, embroideries and gauzes were cunningly combined into adornments for the sex, and so thoroughly were the possibilities of dress exhausted that the twentieth century designer must adapt and modify the ideas of the past.

Secret a Woman Kept

When next you hear that a woman can't keep a secret, put it down as a libel. Here's proof that she can:

Twelve years ago Harry Daniels, Philadelphia ex-cop, then a khaki-clad soldier of Uncle Sam, paused a bit at Chicago while going to Manila. In the Windy City he met 18-year-old Margaret Hands, an art student down from Wisconsin.

Valor and beauty had the usual experience. She looked good to him and vice versa, and while he was in the Philippines they corresponded.

A boat he was on foundered, on a wilderness detail he was a year without being able to post a letter, she thought him dead and she came near wedding another when, in the nick of time, the gallant soldier reappeared and they were married.

That was nine years ago. But not until the other day did Mrs. Harry tell husband that the comely art student who had so completely crept into his heart was also an heiress with a net inheritance of $50,000. She knew it when they first met, but she wanted to be loved for herself alone. Then came litigation over a will and she decided not to tell until the inheritance was certain. The grist of the courts took its final grind in her favor a few weeks ago and the fortunate pair are now on their second honeymoon.

How would you like a surprise like that?

Another Mosquito Indictment

A Yankee army officer down in Cuba found out 16 years ago that a pesky mosquito, biting from man to man, carried malaria as well as yellow fever and that, as you put the anopheles insect out of business, you likewise reduced the liability to "flush and shakes."

What he didn't learn was what made the mischief in the skeeter's bit. Dr. Wade Brown, a University of North Carolina prof., has just uncovered that.

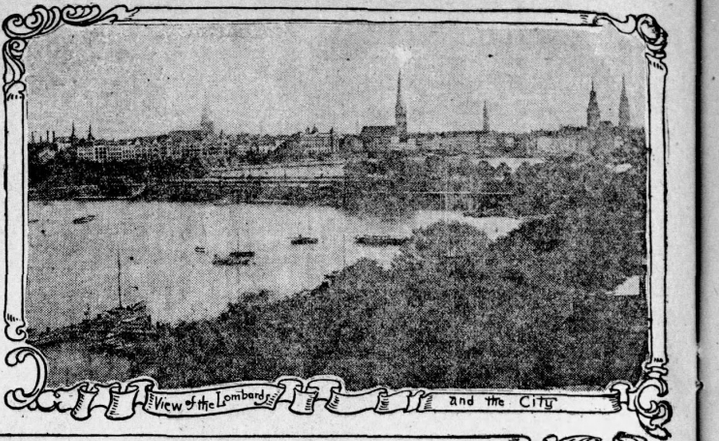
It's a colored poison, called hematin. The little bug which the doctors call the malaria germ, concocts this pigment somewhere in its minute system and once it gets into the blood of a human being it quickly spreads throughout the body, producing the straw colored malarial tinge.

Dr. Brown has also discovered a way to make this colored poison chemically. He and numerous other researchers are now at work on mice and guinea pigs inoculating them with hematin, preliminary to seeing whether they can't find a dope that will take the place of quinine as a specific for malaria.

Luckily the anopheles skeeter isn't very common, and if you're careful to drain your swamps or keep them well coated with kerosene, the malarial germ won't have much of a show. But it would be fine to be able to take a swig from a little bottle containing something not quite so bitter as quinine and bid the hematin distributor to do its worst.

Most Wicked City in the World

By Royal Daniel



View of the Lombardy and the City

HAMBURG, Germany.—The most wicked city in the world is what they tell me of this City of Pleasant Sin, and Hamburg doesn't have to prove it—she just admits it, and with an affrontery and impudence that appalls and shocks.

I thought, until I saw Hamburg, that Paris had a hereditary right to the title, with probably Buenos Ayres a close second, but after a few days here I am willing to concede that the city of Hamburg's claim is wholly justified by the facts at hand.

It would be doing my judgment a grave injustice to suggest that I see with exaggerated eyes because I have been for weeks upon the sea in a tramp steamer, isolated from my kind. I reasoned in like manner at first, but time and investigation convince me that I don't tell all the truth, and never can, for some of the truth of this great city of licensed vice is unprintable.

It might be interesting to say in the very outset that Hamburg does nothing behind closed doors or screened windows. She makes no pretense of hypocrisy nor does she offer any excuse. If you are a good sport, you will with interest see through bewildered eyes at first, but before the first day of scouting is done there will inevitably come a revulsion in acute and emphatic contradiction to the statement that we first pity, then endure and then embrace.

After an evening wandering through the streets of St. Pauli, which is really in Prussia, though still apparently in the city, a sense of injured morals brings a spiritual nausea that is at once a symptom and sign that humanity has to a more or less degree been outraged, and the return trip to the hotel is made with speed approximating panic in a sheer effort to get away from the whirling world of gilded viciousness.

PLAY NOT WORK.

It should not be understood that Hamburg is composed altogether of a population of vicious men and women, for such is far from the truth. It can be said, however, that here prevails a general atmosphere of play rather than work. It is the parade ground where the world passes by with indifferent concern as to what our neighbors are doing.

In the first place, Hamburg is essentially a city dominated by militarism. When it is remembered that every German male from twenty to twenty-seven years of age must of necessity serve in the army, it will be realized that young Germans lose the good results of home training and adopt in their place the life of the barracks.

I do not believe I am reflecting upon German womanhood when I say the average German girl tries to adapt herself and her life to suit the standards of the young soldier.

The result is that Hamburg does as it pleases, without restraint, without apology and with utter contempt for what the minority might say, and in her conduct there seems to be no twang of conscience or dreg of remorse. I could not help but often think how lonely and idle Chief Beavers would be here.

It is not for me to say whether Atlanta is right or Hamburg wrong, but the comparison between the two cities—but there can be no comparison at all.

I may have begun my story wrong by putting a bad taste in the mouth first, but, as the most prominent thing in this city is vice, I thought I had best tell that part of my narrative first.

Should you ever come here, don't go away until you have visited the Trocadero. It is neither a theater, music hall nor motion picture, and no one would ever mistake it for a church. It is nearly a theater of burlesque and riske management, but before you had long been within its gilded walls you would discover it was different from anything you had ever seen before.

TROCADERO PICTURED.

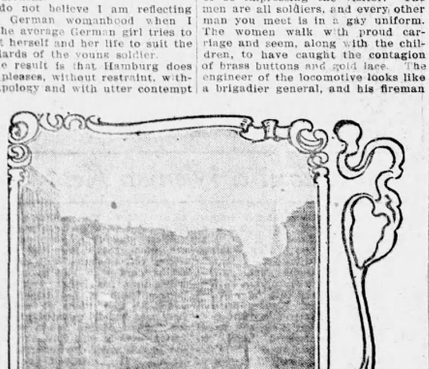
Imagine the Grand theater in Atlanta, with all the chairs removed from the parquet, with an immense orchestra occupying the stage, with the floor space in front full of dancing men and women, with boxes all around occupied by people looking through staring eyes and shocked countenances, and you get the first idea of the Trocadero.

It costs two marks to enter. You must drink, so you order champagne, for that is all that can be bought. You may guess the cost of the champagne when you are told that cigarettes cost fifty pfennigs each—one dollar for a small package of ten. The doors to the Trocadero, which is located in the most fashionable section of the city and on one of the most prominent and beautiful streets, open at midnight and the performance continues until 5 in the morning.

There is much else, however, in Hamburg. It is one of the most beautiful cities I have ever seen. Though of ancient and antique history, the city looks modern, despite the fact that there are buildings antedating the tenth century. The city wears the attire of modern life, and the artist and artisan have succeeded in putting a fringe of the present about the worn garments of the past. The streets are clean to astonishment; there are parks and breathing places at every hand, while in the center of the city is the great Alster, a lake of magnificent proportions and limpid water, around which a stone and marble wall has been builded, on the top of which red flowers are in full bloom, which give the appearance of fairyland indeed. The buildings are six to eight stories high, substantial and of uniform color and design, a light sandstone or white marble.

For transportation facilities the city is by no means lacking, an underground system, an overhead network of tracks and trains, with tram cars and cabs without number in every direction.

The people are either contented and happy or have a splendid fashion of so impressing the visitor. The men are all soldiers, and every other man you meet is in a gay uniform. The women walk with proud carriage and seem, along with the children, to have caught the contagion of brass buttons and gold lace. The engineer of the locomotive looks like a brigadier general, and his fireman is bedecked in all the glories of the field of dress parade.



A Glimpse of the Old Fleets Quarter

But for the uniforms and inverted moustaches, you might easily believe you were on Fifth avenue. Sitting in the Alster pavilion, with the lake as a background, you have ample and pleasing opportunity to watch the parade of fashion and life swim past down the Jungfernstrasse, one of the promenades of the city. There is about as much fashion and elegance as you will probably see anywhere in the world to the square inch and the minute here. Every man, the boys not excepted, carries a walking cane, and the majority of women either lead or carry a dog in their arms. Everybody is talking animatedly; there is a peculiar fondness for life expressed in the face of the people, and their laughter mingles in rich German accent with the gay gossip as the thousands prattle by to the theaters and clubs and cafes.

Banquet Scene in Hamburg

INEVITABLE BIERHALLE.

Everybody, of course, drinks in Hamburg. No matter which way you turn, there is the inevitable bierhalle at hand, with its tables, its steins and its music. Also, everybody eats in Hamburg. Food and drink are too cheap for any one to go hungry or thirsty. It is shocking how much you can get with a mark. Furthermore, the poor and the beggars are promiscuous by their absence here. If there indeed be poverty, it is carefully concealed. I find in the continental cities a vast difference to conditions in England, where, logically, there should be more contentment and greater opportunity for those who toil.

You are not long in Hamburg before you imagine it is a national fete day and the city is a picnic field. People work somewhere and some time in this great city, but you don't see any sign of the seamy side of life. All is gaiety and pleasure on the surface, and the struggle and conflict are concealed behind closed doors and inside streets.

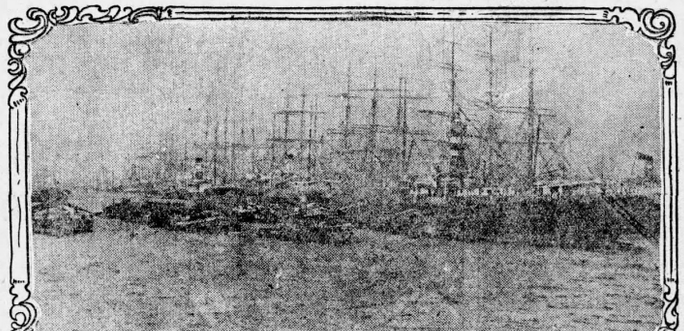
The city is filled with vast cathedrals, heroic monuments and rare flowers. Not far from the Alster stands the gigantic statute to Bismarck, at night transfigured by searchlights played upon it.

Sunday I went along with more than a hundred thousand others to the German derby, which was attended by the kaiser and the kaiserin. I was interested in the discovery that all gambling is licensed and conducted by the government, ten per cent of each bet waged going direct to the general federal treasurer. Women as well as men play the ponies with great excitement.

Between the races the kaiser rode around the course in a victoria. He did not attract one half the attention the horses did. There were so few cheers that I would never have known what was happening if I had not been in a few feet of him as he passed and recognized him by his newspaper and magazine pictures. He looked neither to the left nor to the right, but steadfastly in front, with arms folded across his breast, neither speaking nor acknowledging the handful of Germans who paid him the slightest attention.

I asked many Germans their opinion of their kaiser. Their answers are interesting and amusing. In the first place they know little about him. Some have a quarrel with him because of his treatment of Bismarck which is still resented; others say he is a weakling and amounts to nothing, neither good nor bad. I found a party of Germans who held him in idolatrous esteem, admitting the kaiser was quite right when he himself declared he ruled by divine right and could do no wrong.

In the meantime Germany is building more battleships by day and by night, training more soldiers and sailors and keeps very busy with her war maneuvers. It must be remembered that much of Germany's capital is invested in plants for the making of guns and amunition, so it is not to be wondered all these fellows go about with a chip on their shoulder waiting for somebody to knock it off. My observation is that if anybody in the world would like to do that particular service for Germany, it would be France, but if we must wait for that, it will be left undone, for though the Frenchmen can't forget 1871, they can also remember what happened and contented themselves with carrying mischief-making stories to other nations about Germany, hoping someone else will get mad and do the thing for them.



Hamburg Harbor

IMPRESSIONS YOU GET.

After you leave Germany you carry away several vivid impressions of a people who appear singularly blessed by good fortune. The country is a vast park, reaching from city to city. The fields are rich and green, and the thatched farm houses, with their red flower gardens, make you lean from the car windows and look back until they are entirely out of sight. In the country, it is said, the people are moral, sober and intelligent and their whole lives center about the home. I was impressed greatly with this one fact: you never see a German stop in the field and turn to look at the passing train. I instantly contrasted the average Georgian with this busy man over here who either is too intent upon his work to stop or has seen so many trains (about one minute every day of his life) that he has lost interest.

I have taken Hamburg as the text of this story of some of my impressions about Germany and have not undertaken to say anything about Berlin, for the simple reason that I am lacking the words that would be necessary to even convey an idea of the beauty of the capital city. I am utterly incompetent to describe the street scenes, the parks, the buildings, the palaces there. I walked about them as though in dreamland, wondering if what I saw could possibly be true and if, after all, it were really me.

I have found interest of course in seeing what are generally termed the sight places of the country, the old cathedrals, the moulding walls, the broken ramparts, the moated castles and smouldering ruins of a decadent past, but most of all I have found the present of greatest concern. The people, frankly and from my heart, are not of our kind. Their interests are different, their thought on lines with which we are not familiar, their lives being lived under environments to which we in America are strangers. Yet it is all full of absorbing and holding concern to the stranger who looks closely into things rather than spends his time inspecting relics of rare age and great beauty.

Militant Suffragettes, Dentists, and Birthdays

Suppose that you, madame, earned money by hard work and the law let your worthless husband take it from you.

Suppose that it permitted him to will all his property to others, leaving you penniless.

Suppose that over the children whom you bore in pain it gave you no voice of control.

Suppose that the entire management of society was ordered to exalt men as the masters and to debase women as their servants, and that you, with other good women, revolted by the injustice of the arrangement, had tried, time after time, by argument, petition and persuasion, to induce these men, these favored, privileged rulers, to play fairly and deal mercifully with your sex.

And suppose that, instead of receiving your appeals with sympathy or even listening with courtesy, they had scoffed at you and told you to quit your fussing and go home to your babies.

Would you, as a woman of spirit, meekly submit, or would you go on the warpath, with the grim determination, at any cost to force a reordering of these injustices?

The case we have supposed is precisely the situation in which the women of England are today, under the dominance of male toryism. It explains why the suffragists are resorting to the weapons of revolution.

Those who condemn the tactics of militancy ought in fairness to suggest how they would themselves proceed under like conditions.

Preventive Dentistry

Practically all the exhumed skulls of persons who lived in America before the food-adulterating, bad and hot air breathing, tubercular white man took possession of it reveal perfect teeth.

Today 90 per cent of the teeth of America are defective.

What has caused the change?

Here, surely, is a field of inquiry ripe for the harrow; and it is good news that the national dental association is to assess each member for a fund to be spent on looking into the causes of tooth decay.

Preventive dentistry is the twin sister of preventive medicine and it is time that the two were traveling closer together.

You're pretty sure, sooner or later, to find a lot of other troubles in the human system when the sentinel teeth, which stand guard against the invading germ enemies at its very entrance, are themselves infested by neglect and rot.

So it won't do just to tinker a bit when our teeth get so bad we have to do something about them. There is needed a comprehensive studying out of why this teeth trouble is so general and then collective as well as individual application of remedy.

City Birthdays

Persons have birthday parties. Why shouldn't cities?

Some cities do, regularly, every year. Cleveland does—a Tom Johnson institution. Seeing that folks liked circus effects, Tom had the city departments show off in annual parades, with as many picnics and frolics on the side as the people wanted.

It helped to establish a city sense—to get busy, work-a-day folks to comprehend what their servants in office were doing for them.

VOL. XXXI. NO. 168. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 10, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

SERGE SOLVES THE COLLEGE GIRL'S PROBLEM

EVERY season serge bobs up serenely with promises of success for the wearer. Especially good for the college girl is serge, for practical style is always possible; and an inexpensive expression of the latest modes is within the reach of all who would be well dressed while walking the campus, attending lectures or studying in the "dorm."

Serge is washable, comes in convenient width; and in shadow stripes, checks or plain colors it forms a fitting background for clever touches of trimming.

Simplicity in style for all figures will be a notable feature of practical serge frocks. This is shown in the plain dress with just a suggestion of a girdle at one side.

Dark blue serge is used cut on a kimono line, the sleeves ending in the turned-back cuffs of white hemstitched linen. There is a bib effect produced by large armholes that are stitched down, giving a tailored finish. A double collar of linen is cut in the broad line over the shoulders and finished with hemstitching. The sash is attached at one side only, passing through buttonholed slots at the belt line. The taffeta girdle, by the way, in coinspot design, is very much used on plain serge dresses.

On the white moire hat there is used black velvet as a facing. A high bow is wired, and stands at one side near the back.

Currant-red serge is effective in the second frock, that is trimmed with dark blue satin in the revers and cuffs. The blouse shows fullness, and undersleeves of lace, with ruffles of lace, give the light touch that offsets the dark coloring of the frock. A very wide sash of checked silk is red and blue. It extends from the high waist line to a line below the hips, and is wider on the side. A draped skirt shows an upward curve, and fullness over the hips.

In the hat white bengaline is used with a facing of cobalt-blue satin. A butterfly of blue satin is poised at the back, catching a scarf of silk around the crown.

Fawn-colored serge is fashioned in the simple fichu frock that has a Roman striped girdle of faille ribbon. Long sleeves have no armholes. The top of the bodice is cut down low and in square lines and filled in with dotted net. Turned-back revers of net complete the trimming of the bodice. A double skirt shows a new line on the tunic, the upcurved edge being particularly good. Tassels weight down the short ends of the girdle.

The side view of the last design shows an attractive fastening of the bodice. A slanting line is held down by black satin ball buttons. Deep cuffs also are trimmed with buttons, and a sash of black satin is wound around the waist and then dropped to the back, where it is tied in a loop with fringed ends.

The fabric hat is of taffeta with a black wing at one side.

All of these models are collarless, but can be worn with lace or net ruimpes. The distinctive styles are here. Serge is to be the material of the fall dress for the college girl, the business girl, the school girl. With an eye on style and comfort and a golden mean in line and ornamentation, makers have surely given worthwhile models for adoption. Have you a serge dress?

Back to Japan

CHINESE fashions, especially the mandarin lines, proved unbecoming, in that they departed from the figure's general beauty of lines. But designers have stayed in the orient, merely moving across the strip of water and centering their thoughts on Japan.

The clinging draperies, the wide belt with its butterfly bows and its draped and hanging panels, and the kimono line for bodices and wraps are to be used this fall. Wonderful colorings and embroideries that hint of the east will be the safe choice for the woman who would buy now for a coming successful season in dress.

The Waist Line

IT IS a fact that the high waist line gives a youthful touch to a dress which women are loth to forgo. It has been retained by the majority of designers for dance frocks, house dresses and evening gowns with trains.

Equally prominent is the normal line, with a broad sash which suggests the upper line of a high attachment.

A change is also available in the pointed basque effects launched by several dictators of fashion. This, with the Marie Antoinette fichu and pannier, will be becoming for slender women who prefer the quaint lines of court dress.

The Correct Tilt

THE hat must be tilted up at the side or back now. This turn in millinery affairs in a change from the close styles that almost disguised women in the spring and early summer. It will be hailed with joy, for women who have beautiful hair or well-coifed heads always wish to show them, and those who haven't can follow the crowd to the hairdresser's.

The tilted brim is held high by bandeaux, by wire that shapes the brim away from the face or by masses of flowers, ribbons, loops of gauze or velvet.

Another piquant touch is the chin strap that secures the tilted hat to the wearer's head. This must be worn with a candid, critical eye on the mirror and on the eternal fitness of things.

A Butterfly Wrap

WHEN it is wrapped around the form it is a gorgeous butterfly. When the wearer stretches out her arms it is still a butterfly, in motion.

At the center of the back is a cabochon of jewels, long and hinting of the body of the insect. From this many folds of soft figured silk radiate.

When the wrap is closed in front there are radiating folds on each side. The entire wrap is bound with a contrasting band of silk and here and there are motifs of jewels and embroidery to suggest the markings of the butterfly's wings.

Who would not be a butterfly under these conditions?

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, July 31.

THE Fete des Fleurs at Trouville afforded opportunity for the display of handsome costumes, and it was a treat to view not only the participants but the onlookers.

The use of maline is more prevalent than ever, and scarcely a gown appears without its pleated frills of gathered ruffles of this lovely cloud-like material.

One of the daintiest gowns was developed of tapestry-blue foulard spotted with white, and the bodice had long drooping shoulders, to which the sleeves were joined with a narrow cording.

Frills of white maline outlined the extremely low V-shaped neck and finished the sleeves. The skirt was swirled about the figure, drawing in tightly about the hips to produce a pegtop silhouette.

A frock of sheer white linen embroidered with blue commanded much attention on account of its quaint tunic, which only extended across the back. The tucker and sleeve frills were of shadow lace, and the slashed skirt had three straps of the lace catching up the drapery.

Gowns of white voile and lace were noticeably in the majority, and frequently these had tunics of embroidered voiles in colored flower designs.

Large hats are at present monopolizing the center of the millinery stage. Among the favored varieties are those of black tulle, which women find especially becoming. Full crowns of black velvet are sometimes added to these hats, and pleated frills with upstanding bows of tulle comprise the trimming.

Wide - brimmed tuscans, with streamers of black velvet and a single flower at the side, are also much worn. The shepherdess hat, crownless and upturned at the back, is reminiscent of the Watteau ladies.

Many of the flat hats are made of pleated tulle and are trimmed with a flower.

A smart shop on the Rue de Capucines is displaying a varied assortment of belts. To wear with linen suits of tan or ecru hue there is a broad girdle of brown suede whose long ends are bordered with two rows of small white pearl buttons. Broad belts of satin are embroidered with heraldic designs and have the appearance of heirlooms.

There are elaborate belts, jewel or cameo studded, which savor of ancient Venice.

In the very quaintest coiffure arrangement the hair is parted through the center and bunched over the ears in soft, short curls.

One of the handsomest evening gowns, designed by Callot Soeurs, is of black tulle and satin. The latter material is swathed about the figure, forming an extremely narrow skirt, over which falls a pleated tunic of tulle bordered with brilliants in a Greek key design. A berthe of the pleated tulle falls from the decolletage over the arms and is adorned in the same manner. A sash of emerald-green satin is drawn about the waist and is clasped directly in front with a large dark pink rose.

Bodices are fashioned of transparent fabrics, and the low-cut neck lines continue in evidence. Fichus, medici collars, ruffs and frills appear on most models.

The chasuble collar is a salient feature on wraps and coat suits, producing a thick-neck appearance.

The broad girdle or sash is an important feature of the new season's styles, and help to retain the oriental appearance so desirable nowadays.

Almost every coat has a vest, and almost every fabric is employed to fashion these.

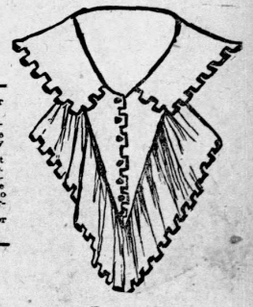
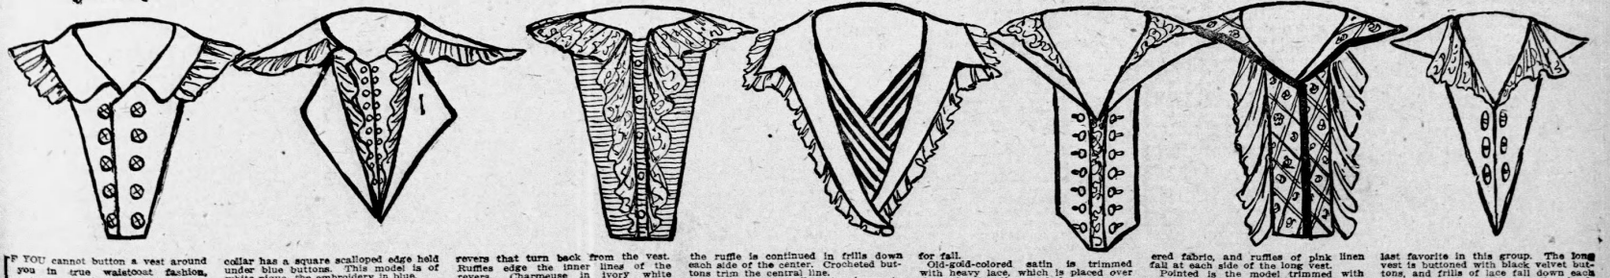
Hats for street wear will be small and close-fitting, and may have upturned brims. For dress wear, a few models are of medium size, with the brims turned up at the side or back and trimmed with flowers, ribbon velvet, plumes or ribbon.

ELOISE.



VEST EFFECTS ON NECKWEAR



IF YOU cannot button a vest around you in true waistcoat fashion, put a suggestion of this style on your neckwear. You simply must have a vest!

Square edges are having a great vogue, as the ruffles and turned-down collar with double ruffles show. The blue vest that drops down below the collar has a square scalloped edge held under blue buttons. This model is of white pique, the embroidery in blue.

Next to this model is a collar that has long points over the shoulders and revers that turn back from the vest. Ruffles edge the inner lines of the revers. Charmeuse in ivory white forms this neckpiece, and a double row of crystal buttons decorate the front. The ruffles are of cream-colored tulle.

Tucked net and shadow lace form the next model. The vest is long, the tucks running in horizontal lines. Around the top the gathered lace falls, and the ruffle is continued in frills down each side of the center. Crocheted buttons trim the central line.

Old-gold-colored satin is trimmed with heavy lace, which is placed over the pointed collar and forms a narrow panel in the center. The sides of the vest are trimmed with buttons and loops of satin.

Figured linen forms the straight vest with the pointed collar. A binding of pink linen gives contrast to the flowered fabric, and ruffles of pink linen fall at each side of the long vest.

Pointed is the model trimmed with oval buttons. The collar is small, and full revers of lace fall over the white charmeuse, of which the collar is made. Any plain color in silk or satin will give a pleasing result if copied after this model.

White satin and ecru lace form the last favorite in this group. The long vest is buttoned with black velvet buttons, and frills of lace fall down each side and out in points over the shoulders.

The vest must be a feature of fall neckwear. Paris has accepted it as one of the worth-while notes, and is ringing changes on the original idea. It is here bidding for your favor.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

MASCULINE CARELESSNESS IN VACATION DRESS.

At the boys' preparatory school with which I happen to be most familiar there is a rule no pupil shall come to meals in a sweater or jersey. Either he must exchange this for a shirt and collar or conceal the lack of finish at the neck by a stock.

I wish a similar law could be enforced for all men and boys during the vacation season.

Last year I spent a week at the country place of a young married couple. When my host met me at the gate I hardly recognized him at first. Always in town, whether at his house or at mine, I had seen him in the ordinary dress of a gentleman. Now he was clad in khaki trousers and flannel shirt, the latter open at the neck and showing a hairy throat and chest, with no sign of a tie.

He greeted me cordially and made no apology for his costume—for which I proceeded to apologize on my own account as soon as I was in my room. I had arrived in the late afternoon, he had probably been playing tennis or baseball, and I had come just as he was on his way to his room to change.

When I came down to supper I found my mistake. The apparel was unaltered and both he and his wife seemed to take it as a matter of course. He made some passing reference to the fact that they "roughed it" while in the country, but apparently felt that no explanation or excuse was needed for the lack of finish in his dress—I am afraid that to myself I called it a lack of common decency.

Table Demands Decent Dress.

Will some one please tell me why men should consider themselves freed from such restraints as ordinary convention demands during their summer outings? Why should they feel at liberty to come to table or to meet their friends socially collarless, cravatless, in running drawers and jerseys, in rowing or tennis trim, their khaki in painful need of soap and water, their flannels looking as if they had never been clean? Does hot weather lower the standard of good manners in proportion as it raises the mercury?

As a matter of course I am not so unreasonable as to demand "boiled shirts," stiff collars, and creased trousers when a man is off for a fishing or tramping jaunt. It is altogether correct that when he is going into conditions demanding rough clothes he should dress for the situation. On the other hand he owes it to his own self respect as well as to those with whom he is brought into contact to be suitably clad when he is to sit at the table with his family and friends.

Further, I do not draw the line too closely even there. In the intense heat from which we often suffer in our tropical summer concessions are in order. I know men who put their dress clothes in camphor at the beginning of hot weather and do not take them out again until fall, and they are men who are punctilious about formal dress in winter. Instead of a white vest and swallow tail they adopt a compromise of white, or light flannel, or serge suits, and soft silk shirts, and look as well in these as they could in the most ceremonious of costumes. This is not neglect, it is merely transforming and modifying social requirements—a different matter from coming to table in the rough and tumble garb which has served in games and sports.

Lax Manners at Vacation Time.

With many of our men the manners seem to be on the same standing as the clothes. Only a few weeks ago I dined at a summer cottage on an evening so warm that we were glad to hurry to the breezy veranda as soon as the meal was over. I had thought nothing of the man of the house coming to dinner coatless, since he wore a pretty silk shirt, a white collar, and irreproachable tie, and light serge trousers. In fact, he had apologized for his coatless condition and been pardoned and encouraged. But when he went on the veranda and after lighting his cigar established himself in a porch chair with his feet on the veranda rail at an angle which brought them a little higher than his head, I confess I was shocked. Would he have been guilty of such an attitude in his city drawing room while entertaining women guests? Never! But this was the "good old summer time," and so he did as he pleased.

This is by no means an isolated experience. Cannot all of you who are wives and mothers relate the difficulty you have in keeping the men of your household up to the mark in manners and dress when they are off on their vacations?

"When my boys come back to town I always have to put them through 'a course of sprouts,' a mother told me once. "When they are in the country they get to feeling they don't need to mind their manners especially. They dress as they please and talk as they please, and of course I don't insist upon their always keeping up to the mark in all the little civilities they have to follow in town. You can't be too severe on boys in vacation time. So they have their own way, and I must say they are pretty badly spoiled by the time they have to get into harness again. I can't say much to them about it, for their father is about as bad, and I just make up my mind to it when the summer begins."

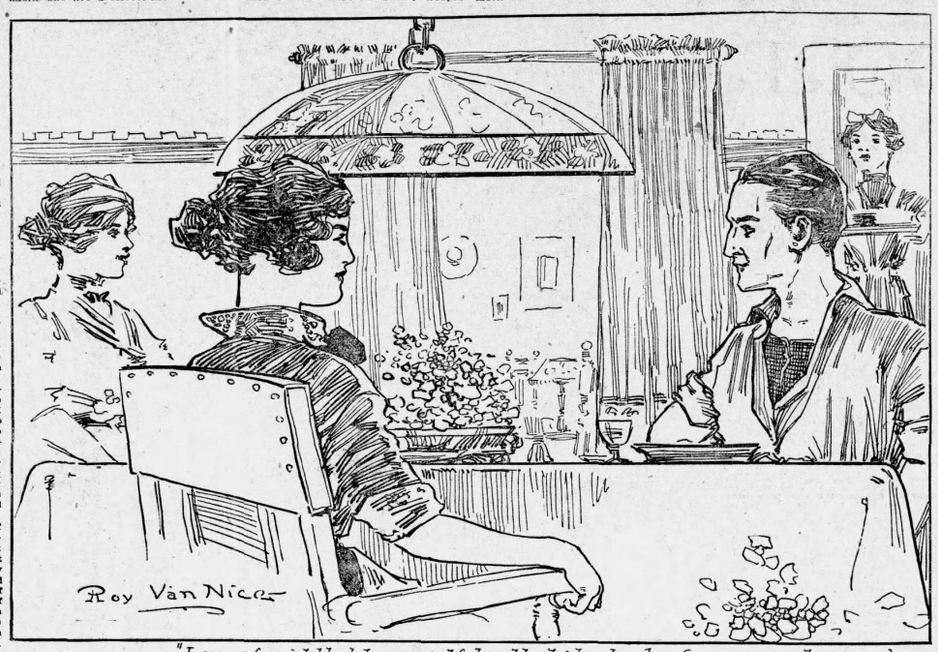
I conquered an inclination to ask her if they took a recess from their usual habits of bathing and eating and correct speech and moral observances, and if not why she drew the line, and where. I may be mistaken, but to me it seems that good manners and observance of what for lack of a better name we call the conventions of dress and behavior should become so much a part of a man's or boy's nature that he should not feel them a burden from which he must be loosed during his holiday time.

* *

Breaking Away from Decency.

I recollect hearing a man take the same tone with regard to his conduct in matters of more importance.

"A man is like a beast in many ways," he declared. "To every one of us there comes a time when he feels he must break away from decency and go off and wallow in the dirt for a while, get drunk and do other things which would shock all the good, correct people if they knew of it. It is only a necessary outlet and after it he is willing to come back to ordinary habits and live a correct life."



"I am afraid that to myself I called it a lack of common decency."

In refreshing contrast to this I recall an experience of some years back. Again it was at the country place of a friend, and her son, just out of college, was of the house party with a couple of friends. I had never met any of them before and when a little before lunch they trooped across the porch on their return from a morning spent in canoes, a goodly portion of their bodies displayed by their rowing costumes, which covered the legs only to the knees, the necks and arms not at all, my heart sank within me. I hope I did not agree with him then nor do I now, any more than with the woman who claimed that boys and men must lay aside customs of courtesy in dress and manner and speech while on their summer outing.

I am not ultra-fastidious, but the thought of taking a meal with this company of unclad youths was decidedly deappetizing. Great, therefore, was my relief when the boys appeared fifteen minutes later in ordinary dress, ready for the luncheon table.

Afterwards, when my friend and I were alone together, I confessed to her my qualms.

"I do not wonder your stomach failed you," she said. "I can assure you I have been a guest in homes where it was taken for granted that boys should come to the table just as they came in from boating or from tennis, but that is something my husband and I have never allowed. We provide our boy with all the means for enjoying sports of any kind, we welcome his friends here whenever we can accommodate them, but we draw the line at his showing the lack of consideration for his family that would be displayed by his being unwilling to take the trouble to bathe and dress after his exercise. I can't find that he considers the rule a penance. He always bathes and changes as a matter of course."

* *

Loses Aspect of a Gentleman.

"Why is it," some one asked me the other day, "that if a man has on a good looking negligee shirt he looks all right without a coat so long as he wears a belt, but that if he appears with a vest on and no coat or wearing a pair of suspenders he is commonized at once?"

I cannot answer the question, but the fact is undoubted. The man who is spotlessly clean but whose suspenders are in evidence, or who takes off his coat and leaves his vest on, is in the same class as the man who appears without a collar or a tie. In some undefinable way he loses the aspect of a gentleman. Am I unreasonable if I feel there is a likelihood of his manners suffering the same sort of change?

We mothers hold the chance in our hands of establishing the standard to which we wish our households to conform. If we have the habit of appearing at the breakfast table in curl papers or kid "curlers," clad in floppy kimonos which—to use the old darky simile—"fit like Dick's shirt, don' touch nowhar 'cep' at de neck"; if we go further than this and keep to this same kind of wear most of the day, excusing ourselves on the plea that no one will see us but the family, we cannot blame the men of the home for their discarding collars, ties, and coats, donning sweaters or jerseys, going with their shirts open at the throat, coming to meals in dirty trousers, with rough shoes, and in other ways looking more like tramps than they do like gentlemen.

* *

Try Gradual Transition.

If you have not trained your boy in the observance of the codtrcsies of life, don't be too rabid in your change, but provide for him something which is an easy transition from too much negligée to the stiffness of the high collar and hard bosomed shirt. Believe me, if he is lured with the present of white serge or flannel or duck trousers, a couple of pretty soft shirts, adjustable soft collars, and wash silk ties, he will yield more readily to your wishes than if you demand improvement without smoothing the path to it.

If you dress for your men they will be more ready to dress for you. When they see you trim and neat at the morning meal, no matter that the weather, when they note that you take the trouble to dress later in the day even if the change is only to another wash frock, when they observe that your adherence to courtesy of speech and manner is unaffected by the temperature, they will be exceptionally unmanageable or badly trained if they do not show a willingness to give you pleasure by meeting your wishes for their dress and behavior.

Summer relaxation and freedom are not synonymous with slovenliness of dress, speech, and conduct, and it lies with you to prove and illustrate it.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

LET me lead off this week with a much sought for recipe. Although it may be too late to use this year, I trust it may be cut out and kept in some safe place for future service.

"I have just finished twenty-four glasses of bar le duc made from this recipe, which I got from a French chef in Paris. It is just as good as that you pay 25 cents a glass for and mine cost me only about 1 cent a glass.

"Clean and pick over ripe currants. Put them pound for pound to soak in white sugar for twenty-four hours; then draw off the juice through a sieve, without breaking the berries. If the sirup is too thick add a little water. Put over the fire and let the sirup cook a good half hour. Throw in the berries and cook fifteen minutes more; then put into jars. V. M. C."

This recipe arrived at the same time with requests for it from Mrs. L. L. R. and one or two others, who asked me to send it by mail. This is something absolutely impossible for me to do. Recipes cannot be sent by mail. If I once began doing this I would have no time for any of the other work of the department. The space is supplied by V. M. C. are far simpler than others I have seen for this conserve. Usually the removal of the seeds is demanded and this is a tedious and tiresome task, but I wonder if it is possible to secure the same delicacy we find in the French product if the fruit is cooked without seeding. I shall try the recipe myself at once.

Danish Kleiner Recipe.

In reply to the requests for Danish recipes, I send one for Danish kleiner, and I am sure it will be satisfactory. It was handed down to me by my mother, who was born and brought up in Denmark. The proportions I give will make about 100 medium sized cakes. It sounds like a large quantity, but I usually have to hide those I bake—they go so quickly. I recently made a large platter of them for a cake sale, and every one was sold. I am sorry I cannot give recipes for ableskiver and sousuppe, but I have many Danish relatives and will try to get the directions and send them later.

"DANISH KLEINER—Two whole eggs, yolks of six eggs, one-half cup milk, six tablespoons sugar, a little grated nutmeg, flour to knead. Beat the eggs until light; add sugar and beat again; add milk. Stir in carefully enough flour to make a soft dough, turn out on floured board and knead in lightly enough flour to make the dough easily handled without sticking to the board. Roll out a quarter of an inch thick, cut into long strips about an inch and a half wide. Cut each strip again on the bias, so as to form diamond shaped pieces about three and a half inches long from point to point; make a slit in the center of each and pull one end through. Fry in deep fat to a golden brown and sprinkle with powdered sugar when cold. Mrs. W. F."

Distinctively national cookery, no matter of what country, always interests me, and I am glad to have these directions for my own use as well as to print them here for the benefit of other housekeepers, whether of Danish or American race.

* *

Buttermilk Sauce Recipe.

"I have two wants. This is the first time I have asked anything of the Corner, although I have received much from it. I much wish rules for southern hash, the kind we get in restaurants, and butterscotch sirup such as is used to pour over ice cream. Mrs. C. A. S."

I am sorry I cannot help you about the southern hash, but I am not personally familiar with the dish. Will some one of our readers supply the recipe?

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE—Boil together a cup of brown sugar, a half cup of water, and a tablespoon of vinegar for ten minutes after the boil begins; add a heaping tablespoon of butter and cook until you have a thick smooth sirup. This will require only a few minutes. Turn into a pitcher and pour hot over each portion of ice cream either plain or without flavoring or flavored with vanilla.

* *

Caroline Rice Pie.

"I send you a recipe for Caroline rice pie. As a substitute for meat I use sometimes a bouillon cube or a savory extract. As a substitute for eggs you can use lima beans which have previously been thoroughly cooked. I have over 250 recipes for nourishing and palatable dishes which contain no meat whatever."

"Half cup rice, two cups strained tomato, three tablespoons butter, quarter cup chopped onion, one cup diced potato, half cup diced carrot, two eggs, one bouillon cube, one cup water. Wash and rinse the rice until the water comes away clear, throw it into the boiling tomato and boil five minutes; add one teaspoon of butter to keep the grains in good form, and steam in double boiler one hour. Cook vegetables and the rest of the butter slightly, add water and extract. Boil eggs twenty minutes and chop. Put in rice with vegetables, etc., in a bake dish, cover the whole with the rice. Use a half cup of water, a teaspoonful of butter, and four teaspoons of extract to moisten the rice and bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. A cup of diced and boiled egg plant is a delicious addition to the vegetables. C. B. L."

Although I have previously printed this recipe in another column, I repeat it here for the sake of those who may not see the daily issue of this department. More and more are people inclining to vegetables, cheese, and eggs as substitutes for meat, partly because of the advance in the cost of meat, partly on account of the revelations which have been made concerning the methods of some untrustworthy firms who pack and sell meat, but even more, to my mind, from appreciation of the fact that the system requires less meat in hot weather and that there can be no better time to spare our digestions a strain than when vegetables are at their best and cheapest. Therefore I shall be most grateful to C. B. L. if she will send us more of the "nourishing and palatable dishes containing no meat whatever," of which she speaks. Let me say, for the benefit of those who, like myself, enjoy the flavor of meat in a dish, even though we do not care for it in large quantities, that the addition of a half cup of any left over chopped meat will impart additional savoriness to the rice pie. Cold lamb, beef, veal, chicken, ham, or tongue may be used either with the eggs or without them.

Needs Pieces of Silk.

"Will some of your readers help a crippled woman of 78 who can piece quilts? She has trouble with her right shoulder and arm, and can only use her right arm from the shoulow down. She uses short ends of thread in sewing, since she cannot extend her arm for more than a little distance. She would like silk pieces to help finish a quilt she has on hand and that a woman has promised to buy when it is completed. Half worn pieces or those that are not fresh, so long as they are not faded, will do. "Mrs. J. E. P."

There are sure to be pieces of silk left over from the spring and summer dressmaking which would gladden the heart of this applicant. I have her address, and I trust she may soon have enough pieces to finish the ordered quilt and to make another.

* *

Salt Rising Bread.

"About a year ago last spring there appeared in your department a splendid recipe for salt rising bread. I used it with grand success. Every one praised it, and it is easily made. Then I was ill for a long time, and when I was able to look after my work again I found the recipe missing, and I had forgotten just the amounts used also how it was mixed. I am sorry, as the family are extremely fond of it. It was given with such accurate measurements and was so easily made and so delicious that I write to ask you if you can obtain the recipe for me again. All I recall is that the sponge is made of three tablespoons of corn meal and half a cup of hot water, set over night. Mrs. F. S."

I wish I could help you out by printing the recipe here and now, but I don't possess a copy of the directions you wish. I have an excellent recipe for salt rising bread, but the sponge is not made like that you want, and the best I can do is to print your request and trust there may be some of the Cornerites who have the recipe and can supply you with it.

* *

Library for the Blind.

"I have received many good suggestions from your department and should like to make some return. Those of your constituency who have blind friends or acquaintances should know of the Gould free library for the blind, 555 East Sixth street, Boston, Mass. In sending them post cards requesting free literature statement should be made what system of raised characters are used by the writers, as the library contains a variety. G. McW."

This information is bound to be of help to those of our readers having blind friends who long for the ability to cheer the tedium of their hours by reading. I am grateful for this word, as they will be.

* *

Wants Phonograph Records.

"Is a fellow allowed to come twice? A couple of years ago I received some reading matter through your columns. I'm still in bed—five years now. How time flies! I've been wondering if any of your readers has some old phonograph records which are of no further usé to the owners. I have a machine and only a few records The machine takes disc records.

"SHUT-IN."

With all my heart I hope that some one can and will send some records to this plucky shut-in! Any one who can joke about time flying when he has been held in bed for five years deserves anything strong, well persons can do for him in the way of comfort and cheer. I have known the owners of phonographs who declared their weariness of the records they had heard over and over, so some of them may see this appeal and send records to this "fellow." We are glad to have him come, not only twice but oftener, if we can be of service to him. I hold his address for those who wish to put brightness and variety into his bedridden life by the gift of records for his phonograph.

* *

Seek Aids to Deafness.

The two letters following came to me at the same time and deal with the same need felt by two different persons:

"I saw in your column the offer of a device which was a benefit to some kinds of deafness in old persons. I am in my eighty-second year and would gladly pay all expenses for the device if you would send it to me. C. O. D. J. H. B."

"I would like to ask if any one of your readers has any sort of instrument in the way of an ear trumpet or something of the sort for a deaf person. I would gladly pay postage for it or go after it if it is anywhere in the city. My father-in-law, who is 70 years old and extremely deaf, needs something of the kind badly and is unable to buy it. If he had some aid of this sort he could get odd jobs to do and he would appreciate such a gift very much.

"Mrs. F. W. W."

Few things are more touching than the helplessness of a deaf person of advanced age. As the years go on there is often a feeling of uselessness that is bitterly hard to bear by anyone who has led an active, full life. When to the natural infirmities of age deafness and inability to work are added the case is especially sad. I know my constituency well enough to be sure that these pleas for help will receive prompt reply and I shall look for early applications for the address of both correspondents.

Has an Unfurnished Room.

"Will some one through the Helping Hand tell me where I can get some second hand furniture that the owner no longer needs? I would like a bedstead or a child's bed, as I have one room unfurnished and we are not able to buy the furniture, for we have had so much sickness. I will gladly pay freight on it and would greatly appreciate such a gift.

Can this want be supplied by some of our readers who have second hand furniture which is no longer in use? Often there are odd pieces taking up room in an attic, of no service to any one, which would be a real help to persons like this applicant.

Lemon Cheese.

"I send you a recipe for lemon cheese as we made it in England, which is a nice change for filling for tartlets instead of jelly. I only left England five years ago, so have many of our favorite dishes still fresh in my mind.

"LEMON CHEESE.—Half pound sugar, quarter pound butter, juice of two lemons and grated rind, if liked; four eggs. Melt sugar and butter in double boiler, add rind, juice, and beaten eggs, stir constantly until it boils. It is then ready for use. We used to make a quantity of it when eggs were cheap and seal it for winter.

"Mrs. S. B. K."

Thank you for the recipe, which resembles the filling made for a Virginia dish called transparent pudding. I have always noticed the preponderance of English recipes in Virginia, and this as another instance of the close tie binding the old country with the new. I hope you will send us some more of the "favorite English recipes which are still fresh in your mind." They will receive a hearty American welcome, I can promise you.

Curing Wild Ducks' Wings.

"Will some kind reader please advise me how to cure wild ducks' wings at home also how to take black stamping from tan linen? A. B."

The query as to the curing of the wings I shall have to refer to some one better versed in taxidermy than myself. As to the stamping on the linen, have you tried washing it with plain soap and water? Generally the stamping is put on wash goods in the expectation that it will come off when the stuff is laundered. I should hesitate to try a deterative, which might remove the color of the linen as well as the stamping.

Wishing for a Camera.

"I read in your Corner a request for cameras. I do not know whether any one would reply to such a request or not, but I, too, have been wishing for a camera and have not felt that I could afford it. If there is one to spare I would be glad to give something in return for it.

As a matter of course, it is only fair that the first come should be first served, but if the reply to the request for cameras is as generous as it has often been with other articles you shall have one, and I trust you may find some way of being of help in exchange for it or of passing on the help to some one else.

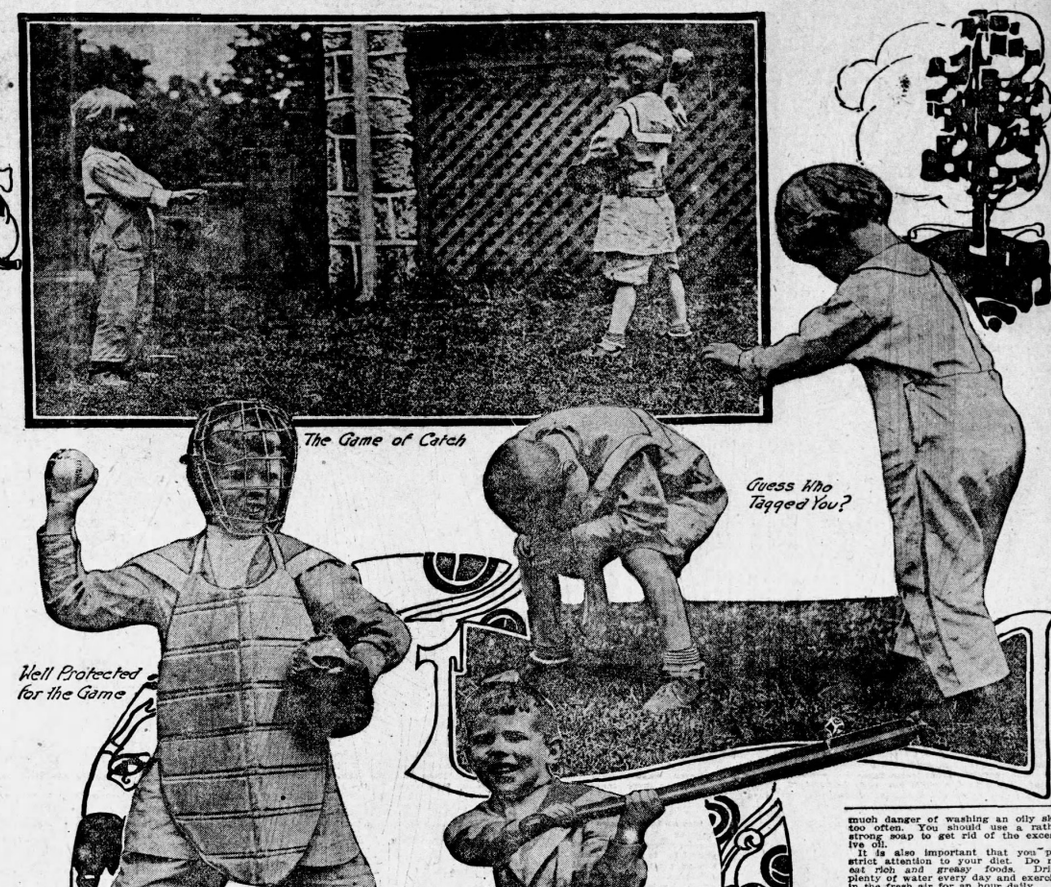
CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

OUT DOOR SPORTS for BOYS



IN ALMOST every magazine or home paper which one picks up there is apt to be an article on the value of fresh air and exercise. It is splendid to believe that this generation is alive to the fact that these two are essential if the future generations are to be at all worth while. A great deal is being done in the various cities to prevent the mating of any but healthy persons. This fact should open the eyes of mothers of small children who have already plunged into the great sea of life, to the importance of rearing their offspring so that there cannot be a doubt as to the physical, moral and mental condition twenty or thirty years from now.

It is understood that the parents cannot stand near the children all hours of the day, but they can give them the proper training when they are in the formative phase of life. Once they are on the right track it will take a great deal to make them swerve.

All like to do the things which are pleasantest, and this fact should be remembered when training your boys. Few of them will like to go through the routine exercises which require the constant counting one, two, three, while swinging the legs or waving the arms, to follow out the rules of physical culture. Games which mean physical exercise are what I want to talk about and advise for the boys today.

If you can afford it, buy your son a complete baseball outfit. And if you can't afford it there may be some means for him to win one by entering a contest. One mother promised a boy weekly wages for doing odd jobs about the house during vacation. The wages were small, but by saving them he soon had enough to buy the suit which had attracted his attention.

For the real game of baseball the boy should be well protected, so that he will not receive injuries while indulging in one of the best forms of exercise.

Do not be afraid to let your boy wield a baseball bat. It will exercise his wrists and teach him to control the muscles of his arms. If you have ever tried to manage a baseball bat you can remember how difficult it was to hold it steadily and what strikes you wasted trying to hit the ball. Don't let your son grow too old before he learns the art.

A tennis ball or an ordinary rubber ball gives splendid opportunity for exercising the body. Lots of fun can be had by indulging in a harmless game of catch. The shoulders, arms and back come in for a fair share of benefit when the ball is thrown and the little fellow opposite must train his eyes to follow the line of the ball as it travels through the air so that he shall not be disgraced by many "misses."

The hopping race is sure to bring the color into the cheeks of the participants and to fill the air with shrieks of joy and excitement. This is something to be remembered if any reader intends giving a picnic for little children. Arrange as many children as you like in a line. Instruct them to squat and at the signal let each child hop on his feet and hands to the goal. The first one reaching it should, of course, be rewarded.

The game of "Guess Who Tagged You" is beneficial from a physical and a moral standpoint. Arrange some boys in a row or circle. Let one boy be "it." He must be stationed in front of the row or in the center of the circle. Here he stoops over and holds his eyes shut while one boy from the group runs and tags him and then runs back to his place again. The little fellow who is "it" then straightens up and tries to discern which one touched him. If he names the guilty one then that boy must take his place. You see, the running to tag and the stooping position bring good physical results, while the boy is placed on his honor to hold his eyes shut and thereby prove his moral strength.

I always feel sorry for the boy who cannot free himself from his mother's apron string. Not that he wants to cling to it but because the fond mother is afraid that some harm will come to her boy. This is the worst thing a parent can do. Let the boy go so that he may be self-reliant and grow into a manly fellow instead of remaining a weakling at whom the rest of the boys point their fingers.

Mothers should take an interest in the games and in the associates of their children, for in this way only will they be able to keep a watch over them and know that they are doing the right thing to grow up into strong men to fight tomorrow's important questions and battles.

Remember that exercise through games and laughter will work wonders for the youngsters. Outdoor sports for boys are here. They are safe and beneficial. Why not choose them?

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams must cordially invites for friends to bring to her three Social Problems and Difficulties by letter at any time

TABLE MANNERS

FROM time to time I have given little talks on the etiquette of the dining table, and if my readers have profited by them I am well pleased. The intimate knowledge of the silverware, the use of different glasses and dishes, the little formalities of the dinner, have been discussed. But one fact I must impress upon my readers. It is that nothing can cover up the lack of innate refinement in eating. I have seen a man who knows absolutely the difference between a salad and an ice cream fork and would scorn any one who did not know a sherry glass from a claret glass eat with a coarseness that was disgusting, while a little woman from a little town, knowing nothing of these acquired points in eating, ate with exquisite delicacy that is rarely seen at lunch counters.

Of the refinement of table manners I would speak today. The details of a dinner I shall reserve for some other time.

First of all, eating should be noiseless. Refinement removes one from the animals whose aim is to satisfy hunger quickly and thoroughly. Civilization and delicacy have removed us from the animal class. So in eating and drinking there should be no sound, or if sound be necessary, it should be reduced to the minimum.

Beverages should be sipped slowly, never gulped down and drawn in with the breath. Hot beverages should not be cooled by blowing over them or pouring from one saucer to another. Stirring of the contents of a cup of hot coffee is not refined.

There should never be taken into the mouth so much food that the amount is evident to the onlooker. Eating should not be considered a task to be dispatched in the shortest possible time. Slowness will generally aid in refinement at the dining table.

Do not drink any beverage while food is in your mouth and do not "wash down" the meal with a glass of water. The holding of liquid in the mouth and a final gulping down are evidences of a lack of refinement.

Food should be taken in small quantities. You cannot eat too small an amount at a time. The fork should not have food heaped upon it as if it were a shovel and conveyed to the mouth with part of its contents falling by the wayside and incidentally dropping on the eater. Food should not be mixed on the fork. Eat one food at a time and separate a portion from it when you are ready for it. By this I mean to cut off small pieces of meat and eat them, to eat one vegetable at a time, or to separate a piece of lettuce from the leaf when you wish to eat the salad. Do not cut up all the meat at first, or prepare the salad for eating as if you were feeding your pet dog or cat. Remember that you are supposed to be on a higher plane than that occupied by animals.

Needless to say the fingers should be used as little as possible. There are some foods that may be eaten with the fingers, but, generally speaking, the fork or spoon is used. The knife is only for cutting and should be laid on one side of the plate when it has done its duty.

No scraping and scouring of plates is permissible.

I have not mentioned one difficult thing, have I? I have not confused your minds with any difficult rules? If you should be entirely ignorant of the rules, you could still eat in a refined manner. There is no excuse for coarseness. Some day I shall give some formal suggestions, but there must be a firm foundation of refinement to which you can add the other things.

Solutions to Social Problems

Who Precedes?

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When entering and leaving a street car with a girl who should lead the way?

CHARLES.

When entering the car the girl precedes, but when leaving it the escort leads the way, so that he can assist the girl as she alights.

After Receiving an Announcement

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you please tell me what to do after receiving the announcement of a birth?

S. P.

On the receipt of such an announcement you should call to make inquiry as to the health of the mother and child, and cards are left for them both. If distance prevents you from doing this you should post your cards to the mother, with the words, "Hearty congratulations," written in pencil above the name.

Introducing a Friend

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me if it is proper to use a visiting card to introduce a friend to another.

HELEN.

The visiting card with a word or two written on it, may be used, but it is more complimentary to write a few sentences on a note sheet rather than to use the card.

A Call Is Necessary

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me under what conditions a call is necessary when one has received an invitation to a dinner.

U. S.

A call must be made within two weeks after the dinner, whether the invitation was accepted or not.

An Informal Invitation

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When one has received an informal note inviting one to a home wedding should a reply be sent?

GERTRUDE.

Yes; you can send your reply in the same form that was used in the invitation.

A Second Wedding

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I have been a widow for five years and expect to be married soon. Friends tell me that a white dress is not appropriate for me to wear to the ceremony.

ANXIOUS.

As a rule, the woman marrying for the second time wears a gown of lavender, or pale gray. She does not wear a veil.

Announcing an Engagement

Dear Mrs. Adams.

My daughter is to be married. Please tell me when I should announce the engagement.

MOTHER.

There is no rule or custom to govern this question. It depends entirely on the wishes of those personally concerned.

Announcement Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I have received the announcement of a wedding. I am very well acquainted with the bride, but do not know the wife. Please tell me what should be done in the case.

GRATEFUL ONE.

It is not necessary to acknowledge cards announcing a wedding, but generally one shows an interest by writing a brief note of congratulation to the bride or bridegroom.

Answering Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me if it is necessary to reply to a wedding invitation.

U. K.

It is not necessary to send a written reply to a wedding invitation unless one is invited also to a wedding feast or the card bears the letter R. S. V. P., indicating that an answer is desired. Invitations to a church wedding only, need no reply. An invitation to a church or home wedding, followed by a reception, needs no written answer if you attend. If it is impossible to accept, the invitation must be politely acknowledged by posting or sending by hand, the day of the marriage, two visiting cards addressed to the bride's parents.

Leaving Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Should I leave a card when calling on a friend and she opens the door for me herself?

QUESTIONER.

If you are making a first call or calling in return for some hospitality shown you, you should leave your cards. Do not make the mistake of handing them to your hostess, but leave them on the table as you depart.

Failed to Appear

Dear Mrs. Adams.

The other evening I attended a dance. A young man failed to claim a waltz he had asked me for. How shall I treat him in the future?

R. R.

The man was most certainly in error, but give him an opportunity to explain his rudeness. If his reason seems plausible, give him another chance.

A Card Invitation

Dear Mrs. Adams.

What does it mean when one receives a woman's visiting card with the word "Theirs" written in one corner and a date in another?

Such a card is an invitation to a party where bridge is to be played. You should reply to it as soon as possible in the third person. Use note paper for the purpose.

Answers to Beauty Queries

REPLIES to letters to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

A Curling Fluid

Dear Mrs. Symes.

What is a good curling fluid for the hair?

ZIDA.

A very good curling fluid is made of a tablespoonful of bruised quinceseed to a pint of hot water. The water is poured over the seeds and the whole allowed to stand for several hours. The resultant mucilage may then be thinned with a few drops of essence of violet. The hair is moistened with the fluid before curling.

Large Pores

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Some time ago my face was covered with pimples and blackheads. Now the pimples are disappearing, but the pores in my face are so large that it makes my complexion look very muddy. Will you kindly give me a good remedy to reduce and at the same time cleanse the pores?

LILA.

GRACE B.

To cleanse the pores be liberal with the use of soap and water. If your skin is not too tender, use a complexion brush on it occasionally. After rinsing the face, apply alcohol to it. This will tend to cleanse the skin and to contract the pores to a normal size.

The above treatment will also be suitable for an oily skin. There is not much danger of washing an oily skin too often. You should use a rather strong soap to get rid of the excessive oil.

It is also important that you pay strict attention to your diet. Do not eat rich and greasy foods. Drink plenty of water every day and exercise in the fresh air for an hour daily.

Bathing the Face

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I always use warm water on the face. Will you please tell me how often it should be used?

EMMA.

To keep it clean, the face requires one thorough washing daily with warm water, an agreeable soap and wash cloth or soft flesh brush. This treatment is best given at night. In the morning, then, it is not necessary to use soap on the face. Warm water and then cold will be sufficient to freshen one.

A Cleansing Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Kindly give me the recipe for a good cleansing cream.

ALICE.

Cleansing Cream

White wax	2 ounces
Spermaceti	2 ounces
Sweet almond oil	2 ounces
Distilled water	2 ounces
Glycerin	2 ounces
Salicylic acid	90 grains

Eczema

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My little boy has a breaking out on his face which looks very much like eczema. Will you please tell me what to do for him?

WORRIED MOTHER.

Eczema is a disease which requires the attention of a physician. Be most careful not to allow other members of the family to use toilet articles used by him.

Chapped Lips

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me what I can do for the which chap easily?

MIRIAM.

Apply to the lips whenever necessary the cold cream for which I am giving the recipe:

Kentucky Cold Cream

Rosewater	4 ounces
Almond oil	4 ounces
Spermaceti	1 ounce
White wax	1 ounce

Add the rosewater slowly, so that it will mix well.

A Shiny Face

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please give me a cure for a shiny face.

PETE.

You should be most careful to rinse your face thoroughly after cleansing it with soap. A very good lotion to be applied to the skin is made of:

Mix.

Apply the lotion as often as necessary.

To Cleanse the Skin

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me what to use in place of cold cream as a cleansing cream? Cold cream is too greasy and makes my skin oily. I have been using glycerin, but think it does not cleanse the skin properly. Have heard that vegetable oils can be substituted for cold cream and that it also makes the skin too oily. Will you please recommend something and your earliest convenience? I should prefer a vegetable oil to a cream which I would have to make up.

RUTH B.

A Hair Stain

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My hair is of a brown shade, but lately I notice streaks of gray running through it. Will you kindly give me the recipe for a stain which I may use?

BEATRICE.

Brown Hair Stain

Green walnut shells	2 ounces
Alum	¼ ounce
Pure oil	4 ounces

Heat the mixture in a water bath until the water has been completely evaporated. Then express, filter and perfume.

Sage tea may be used to darken the hair. Make a strong brew of dried leaves, strain the liquid carefully through muslin, and to each pint add two teaspoonfuls of alcohol. The mixture should be rubbed on the hair every night before retiring.

THE NEW FALL SUITS

by JOSEPHINE JORDAN

DRAWINGS FROM EXCLUSIVE PARIS PHOTOGRAPHS BY DAGMAR RASMUSSEN

The Cutaway Effect Is a Notable Feature of the New Fall Suits, the Idea Often Being Carried Out in Such a Pronounced Manner as to Show a Waistcoat Beneath the Coat, Thereby Imparting a Particularly Mannish Effect to the Costume.

Navy blue serge in Chinese form. Jacket three-quarter length, cut short in front to show the vest made of printed duvetine. Skirt double effect, having a straight tunic reaching below the knees but extending only across the sides and back leaving a straight panel of the underskirt visible down the front.

Mannish suit in navy blue, mohair suiting with Mattier blue stripe; skeleton vest of white plush, girdle of blue satin; dark blue satin buttons. Jacket thirty inches long with cutaway front and straight loose back; skirt in straight panel effect.

PRACTICALLY all of the suit coats are made on straight lines and show no curves at the waist. Some, it is true, have oddly cut seams, graduating to a point in the back—a line favored by Callot Soeurs, in Paris. Many are cut in two pieces in the back section, and are joined together at the waistline, or somewhere below. They still retain, however, the straight silhouette, which is expected to be in vogue again next fall.

In the Russian blouse suits shown for the coming season the waists are cut quite large, although they have to be drawn in at the waist line to some extent.

The most notable feature of the fall suits is the cutaway effect. This idea is carried out in many ways. The dressier types are very sharply cut away, frequently showing a waistcoat. Some are made like an Eton in front, and the coat tails appear only in the back, after the manner of a man's dress coat. This style is familiarly called directoire. The more staple styles are not so sharply cut in this manner, but fall away with a gradual slope.

From the front many of the fall suits appear short; they are, however, nearly all quite long in the back, some approximately thirty-six to thirty-eight inches, the exact length being governed by the general proportions.

While the tendency among the majority of manufacturers is for the long back cutaway coat, a few of the houses are making up some suits with really short cutaway coats. These are mostly high grade suits of the dressy character, and show a fancy waistcoat and elaborately draped skirt.

The predominance of the cutaway effect has made the waistcoat or vest very popular. In some instances the vest is made separately, like that worn by men, but in other instances it is stitched in. Some are wide at the bottom, to give the broad effect across the stomach. In some of the strictly mannish suits the vest is made of the same fabric as the coat itself, while in the majority of cases it is of fancy silk or ratine in plain, brocaded, or striped effect. In the more extreme suits printed velvets or silks in the cubist patterns and futurist colorings are also noted.

New Suit with Cutaway Coat.

The new suit which is now being exploited in some of the large cities has a dovetail cutaway coat, about thirty-two inches in the back, sharply cut away in front and fastened with one, two, or three buttons. Sometimes the coat is bound in silk braid, while again it is made perfectly plain, like a man's coat, and the collar, cuffs, and revers are exactly like those of a man's business suit.

The skirt of this suit is of various types. Nearly always it has a slight drapery suggestion. The peg-top form, however, with pockets at the sides, is the most popular.

This suit is shown in men's wear serges, in black, navy, and white. It is also being made in black worsted with white hairline stripes, and in a few cases in mannish worsteds. Naturally, many modifications will be brought out in the near future, and doubtless among them will be the suits with waistcoats, either of self material or of a different fabric.

There seems to be a strong preference in favor of mandarin or set-on sleeves, although the regulation coat sleeves is by no means out of the running.

The cuffs are made of various sizes and shapes, from an imitation cuff, produced by a cord of silk or velvet, to a deep turn-back directoire effect.

Belts are being used on motor and traveling coats, and half belts on some of the more practical garments. Some of these belts are placed at the lowered waistline and appear only in the back.

The popularity of cutaways is responsible for the continued use of a band around the bottom. This is sometimes of the same material as the coat, or it may be of imitation fur, of plush, or of velvet.

Combinations Will Be Liked.

Suits made of combinations of two fabrics or two colors, which met with such success this spring, are expected to be even better this fall. Many excellent models are to be found in the market. Plain coats with skirts in plaid, check, or stripe are well thought of. Pile fabrics combined with cloth are also considered good. Velvet, broadcloth, and peau de souris, and imitation broadtail are among the combinations found in the lines.

Much attention has been given to the skirts this season.

In the dressier types of suits, that are more sharply cut away in the front, more elaborate skirt draperies are shown. The smartest of these have the fullness in front of the skirt gathered into the belt, with the fullness just below the hip lines, tapering to a narrow width around the feet. The original Paris model from which this skirt was taken was made somewhat shorter in the front, but the majority of American manufacturers are making the skirt even all around.

The slashed effect skirt is to be found in many of the lines, but is modified in most cases, as the extreme slashed skirt is not expected to survive.

For strictly tailored suits, cheviots, serges, ratines, striped and checked worsteds, and materials in mannish effects are well thought of.

In the dressier models velour de laine, cut velour, and striped and diagonal effects in velour are prominent. Some of these have the dull finish and others a high luster similar to satin. Peau de souris, wool charmeuse, and broadcloths are also being used to some extent. Jacquards, in various patterns, are much in evidence. Many other novelty cloths, moreover, are included in the showings of suits for the fall.

Plaids of various kinds, in rich sibeline effects or in worsteds, have been ordered by the skirt manufacturers, as well as by the suit houses. In suits these materials will be combined with a plain fabric.

* *

Skirts Short and Narrow.

Suit manufacturers are placing considerable confidence in pile fabrics. Plain and brocaded velvets are expected to be in good demand. Some of the high class suit houses are asking for lightweight plushes, which will be used either for entire suits or for the coats, the skirts being made of another fabric.

Many rich and beautiful colors are being shown in the lines, among these being mahogany, burgundy, myrtle green, dark plum, bronze, taupe, Persian blue, and caramel. Navy and brown are regarded as staple colors.

All makers agree that the majority of skirts will be short—one might say very short—since there is a great fashion for showing the feet. Costumes for dressy occasions will have skirts as short as those for tailored suits, and such a thing as a street dress with a skirt that touches the ground will be considered a monstrosity.

All skirts will be narrow, or at least narrow in effect, and many of them will have the uplifted drapery at the front, thereby accentuating the curving line of the figure at that point.

Fashionable Collar Open at Neck.

Draperies will follow the outlines of the natural body, and skirts, whether plaited, paneled, or plain, will keep to close lines. Even flounced skirts, of which there will be many, will be mounted on snug foundations, thereby retaining the silhouette of the body, despite the fullness.

Trains, when used, will be very slender, some of them even of scarflike proportions. These the wearers will wind about the figure, fastening them in girdle form, when they do not wish the trailing length in evidence.

There will be no cessation in the popularity of extremely transparent and very décolleté bodices, both for day and for evening wear.

Base of neck dressing will characterize the fall modes, and with the open neck of day dresses will be seen fichus, frills, ruffs, wired collars, in the Medici and renaissance effects, and frills in the Marie Stuart styles, together with modern variations of all of these.

Practically everything that is fashionable is open at the neck. If desired, this space may be filled with a band of tulle or of velvet ribbon, but the fashionable dress leaves the throat exposed.

Another feature noted particularly in wraps, but also appearing in suits and dresses, is the chasuble collar, which in its original form is, as is well known, nothing more than an awkward uprising of a straight piece of goods, heavily encrusted, and thereby stiffened, with embroidery or jewels. In adapting this to modern uses, designers make use of stiffenings of collar bones or wires.

This thick neck, and as one might say, hump shouldered effect, will be very fashionable.

Designers will allow themselves much liberty in the presentation of sleeve forms. The kimono form will be retained in dressy effects, but usually the forearm will be closely fitted, this, in combination with the kimono cut, necessitating the retention of a large armhole. This particular cut is much used in transparent bodices, and in evening wraps.

Generally speaking, day dresses and separate waists will have long sleeves, with a more or less fancy finish in the form of frills or shaped volants falling over the hands.

Long sleeves will be particularly favored in lingerie blouses, which bid fair to continue to be much in fashion throughout the fall and winter. Tulle plaitings will be fully as popular as a sleeve finish as in neck dressings.

The girdle or sash plays a very important part in the season's fashions. Very many of these are extremely wide and figure swathing, this being perhaps the most distinctly oriental note retained in the dresses of today.

In addition to actual girdles and sashes there are girdle-like draperies and vests which often assume the girdle outline.

There is no attempt to make the waist line small, in the adjustment of either belt or girdle. In fact, the desire seems to be quite the contrary, and in extreme instances broad bands of fur will girdle the figure.

As yet the straight belt does not play an important part, the majority of girdles or sashes being of softly draped silks or other tissues.

All the corset fashions tend toward the retention of natural figure lines. The body is corseted with more freedom than ever, and the corsetieres who supply the most fashionable trade frankly announce their new models as being flatter than ever at the back and over the hips, while giving a slight increase of freedom to the front, which emphasizes the bow-like curve of the natural figure.

All lingerie garments continue sheer and close fitting. The trimmings are perfectly flat, so as to accord with the demand for a slender, supple figure. These garments are made from delicate all-over embroideries, trimmed with ribbon-threaded embroidery beadings or delicate lace applications.

It is a grave question as to which is the more essential for a fashionable toilet, the hat or the shoes. Quite as much novelty and originality are expressed in the one as in the other, and the well dressed woman chooses both with equal consideration.

The fashion is wholly for button shoes, button strap sandal slippers, or sandals with strap lacings. Fancy buttons and buckles are greatly used; in fact, extravagance in this accessory knows no limit.

Hats continue small and close fitting. Millinery trimmings are equally simple, and depend for their special novelty on the manner in which they are posed. Most of the hats outline, to some degree, the shape of the head.

Hairdressings are flat and close, usually after the form of the casque, and are embellished with jeweled pins.

Blouse Still to the Fore.

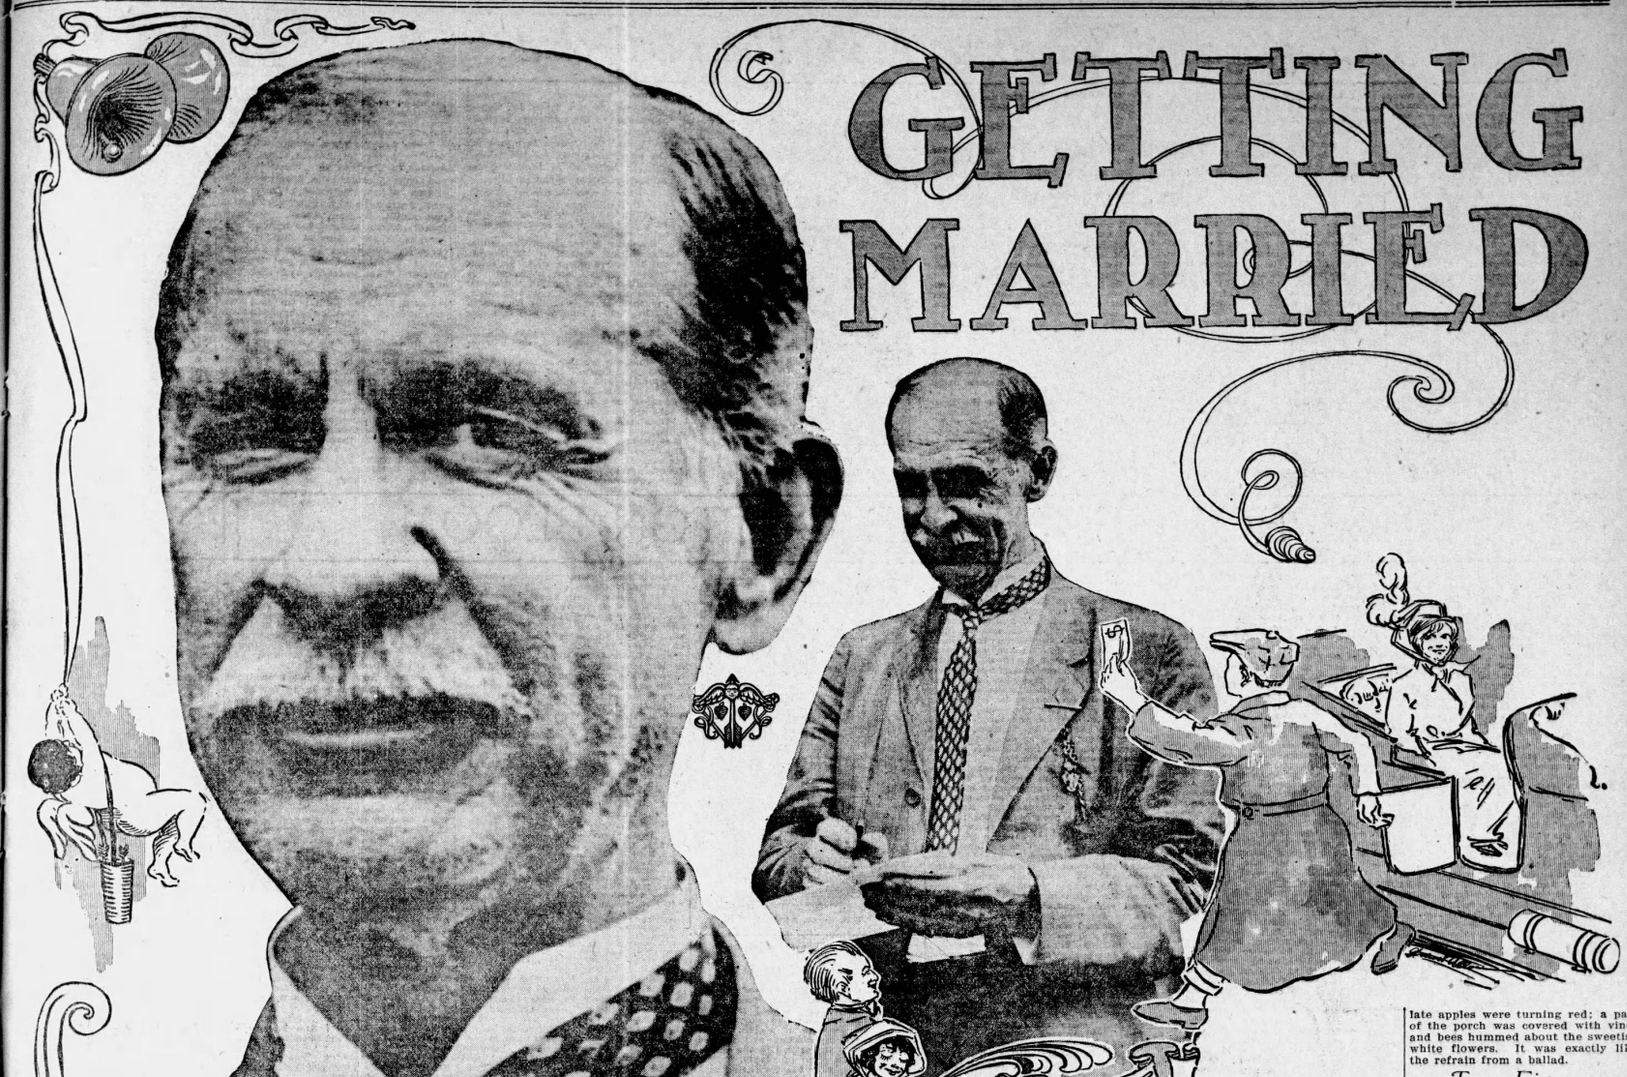
From time to time we are told that the vogue of the blouse is over; that it is dead and done with, that the "élégantes" will not hear of it, and that the one-piece dress alone, or at any rate the dress of one material, is the only thing permissible in the wardrobe of a woman of fashion.

And yet, in spite of this, never was there a season when the blouse was more to the fore than it is today, nor has there been greater variety. The woman who wishes to be thoroughly up to date and prepared for all emergencies must have a whole assortment in all colors and in many styles, from the simple "shirt-waist" down to those "blouses" which resemble more than ever the bodices of the smart toilette.

The important rôle played nowadays by the tailor mades, which have invaded all hours of the day, in their different varieties, is of course responsible for this to a great extent, and then there is no getting away from the fact that every woman likes to appear in something fresh and dainty each day—and this is only possible with the blouse, whether it be of lace, batiste, or linen.

All blouses this summer are open at the neck in front, and the simpler kinds for the morning walks are of fine white linen, with a yoke over the shoulders, flat stitched tucks down the front, and long, tight sleeves. The open neck and the sleeves are trimmed with a plissée ruche of batiste or eyelet embroidery.

GETTING MARRIED



"License seven years old. Is it still good?"

"If the girl's the same," wired back the ordinary.

"License ten years old," followed a message three years later. "Is it still good?"

"License all right. But what's the matter with you?" asked the ordinary. "Here's your license," explained a letter next morning. "I know when I'm refused."

"Twenty per cent of the licenses issued are never needed," says Judge Wilkinson. "You get into an optimistic sort of spirit and you don't mind expense, so you buy a license; then the somebody you named in it, shakes her head, sometimes for ten years; and all you get out of your license is the conviction that you're a mutt.

"But there are not very many broken hearts. The story of marriage licenses that folks have bought by mistake would be a volume in injured pride, with chapters of mirth and paragraphs of pathos.

"Somebody's getting a license every now and then that he hasn't a mite of use for. But his heart doesn't trouble him much after he's got over with what happened to his pride. Then he looks around and sees that there really are one or two other girls, and it all ends happily."

Broken Hearts

The ordinary keeps right busy issuing licenses and, when you come to think that about one-fourth of those who pay $2.25 for this strip of paper, which is going to brush the clouds from the sky and set the birds to singing throughout the days—when you come to think of this, you can see there isn't room for one broken heart to each unused license.

Such proportion would cause the world to be one long film of gloom. There would be neither comedy nor happily-ending dramatics, nor intermissions while the operator put in a new film and the tenor sang a ballad of sweetness, optimism and trebles.

But occasionally there are near-tragedies, and, yet, they always have a happy conclusion. Take the instance of the deaf and dumb man.

It was a sort of cloudy day, and Judge Wilkinson was thinking surely it would rain, but comforting himself with the thought that, anyway, the crops needed it, when the room suddenly burst into sunshine.

"I'm deaf and dumb," he wrote. "But I want a license. I'm the happiest man in the world."

"Here it is," wrote back Judge Wilkinson. "I've seen those who could hear and speak, and yet didn't know any better."

With a final smile which flooded the room, the man left. It was but two hours from this time until the film wound on to the next scene, and the camera of fate changed the smile to a frown.

The judge was just noticing that the sun was breaking through the clouds when the room darkened. Upon the threshold stood the transformed deaf and dumb man. He didn't need to write an explanation. His manner as he threw down the license was sufficient.

"We never take 'em back," wrote Judge Wilkinson in answer.

Determined Thrift

For awhile, the deaf and dumb man stood in doubt.

"Will you swap it for another one?" he asked in writing.

"We will for you," agreed Judge Wilkinson, "as a bargain."

It was not yet evening, when the film of circumstance again ushered the deaf and dumb man into the ordinary's office. He directed how another license should be issued, he tucked it into his pocket, he left with an air of determination.

The "leader" with which Judge Wilkinson began the next morning was a letter.

"I'm married now," wrote the man whose smile had changed from hope to gloom and then to resolve.

The thrifty soul had found happiness despite a first failure, and had saved a license fee that otherwise would have gone to waste.

Another instance in Judge Wilkinson's "Getting married" experience is that of a man who forgot until the last moment that licenses as well as rings are needed.

The ordinary was thinking that nothing is so satisfying after all as a good night's uninterrupted sleep, when somebody rang the bell as though he were experimenting on the theory that the world had suddenly gone deaf.

"His clothes," as the ordinary found, "had a Mendelsshon air. But his expression suggested something like "Heart Bowed Down."

"I forgot the license, and my—and she—and they all say—what's to be expected of a man that begins like that!' I must have a license. You must go to your office."

"Can't do it."

The man tore his hair. "Can't? Why, I ask?"

"Because I'll issue it here."

His Best Story

There is another instance in Judge Wilkinson's experience of which he likes to tell. It is the only time when he acted the "parson." This story always makes him smile; and, yet, there isn't much to tell about. Just one of those simple little things that mean a lot.

The judge had gone a bit into the country for a week's rest and a breath of the country air. Along in the afternoon he was sitting on the porch, one of those old-fashioned porches where the house is an incidental part of the plans. The flowers out in front were old-fashioned flowers, with primroses along the walk; off to one side was an orchard where late apples were turning red; a part of the porch was covered with vines and bees hummed about the sweetish white flowers. It was exactly like the refrain from a ballad.

Two Figures

The gate—he couldn't very well see it—opened, and two figures came up the walk—a man whom life had seemed to be putting through a kind of drying up process, and a woman, who was faded, like a flower that had been pressed between the leaves of a book.

"Thought we'd get married," explained the man.

"Kinder always wanted the parson to do that," said Judge Wilkinson.

"We been waitin' for fifteen years," he said. "First I had to keep up my family. Then I got sick. Then crops was bad. Lost my farm. Every sort of trouble happened. Seemed like we wasn't meant to marry. Anyhow, that we wasn't goin' to be allowed to. Now, we decided we goin' to marry no matter what was intended, or what's to be allowed. Thought maybe you'd like to marry us?"

"I guess I would," said Judge Wilkinson.

He married them on the old-fashioned veranda, and gave the bride a bunch of primroses for a bouquet.

He also has an epigram to which he takes not unkindly. It is this:

"Getting married, like all other 'hands,' is uncertain."

NORWAY, LAND OF FJORDS AND WOMAN SUFFRAGE

BY MISS MAMIE L. PITTS.

WE ARE in Bergen, one of the oldest and the second largest town in Norway. The population is about 80,000. Like all Norwegian towns the setting is picturesque. The houses are built of timber and nestle closely in a semi-circle on two beautiful fjords, back of which rise seven hills varying from one to two thousand feet in height.

Few of the "gader" (streets) are paved. Standgade, the principal street, has many small shops where furs and enamelled jewelry attract tourists. An Atlantic liner from New York landed here this morning on its maiden trip. A great crowd went down to see it. This being the fourth of July, American flags are offered for sale in the postcard shops and there is to be a concert tonight by some American students.

We visited the fish market this morning. It is a large square containing many wooden reservoirs in which the fish swim about. The buyer selects the one he wants and the seller dips it out with a net, kills it with a quick blow on the head, and dumps it into a heavy paper bag or basket.

Here is where Ole Bull, the violinist, was born in 1810. I stood by his grave today, a long oval mound, overrun with English ivy. In the center is a tall bronze urn with this inscription: "Ole Bull, 1810-1880." His violin and piano are shown in the museum, and also a laurel wreath of gold with monogram of diamonds. On a gold plate beneath the laurel crown is inscribed: "Ole Bull from his California friends as a slight token of their affectionate regard, San Francisco, March 4, 1870."

Bjornson and Ibsen, who contributed so much to the literature of the country, are buried in a beautiful cemetery in Christiania.

Our hotel is equipped with every modern improvement. A notice is posted in every room stating that "the law requires each traveler to enter his name in the visitors' book, his position, date of arrival and departure."

The lift (elevator) holds but four people. It works automatically, so there is no need of elevator men. The passenger merely enters, closes the doors (three) and pushes the button that registers the etage (floor) at which he desires to stop. Breakfast is served from 8 to 10 and always consists of bread, butter, eggs, jam and coffee, tea or chocolate. Dinner is at 2 and supper at 8.

Norway is a little more than twice the size of Georgia, but has about the same population, so it is very sparsely settled. The government has built beautiful roads all over the country. These climb the mountains in zigzag lines and look like silver threads. Travel is by carriage, automobile, or stolkjaerre. The stolkjaerre is a light, two-wheeled vehicle seating three persons, including the driver, whose seat is on a level with the passengers, but in the rear.

We have just driven 115 miles over these country roads, stopping for lunch and spending the nights at the hotels which dot the way. The tables are loaded at every meal with many varieties of cold meats, three kinds of cheese, pickles, sardines, salmon and crackers. Fish and veal are the principal hot meats. We have fish soup, fish pudding, boiled fish and raw fish. Boiled Irish potatoes are always served with the first two courses. We have plenty of fresh eggs. The dessert is strawberries or prunes and great bowls of cream. Dairying is a leading industry and cream is served as freely as water. The coffee is excellent.

All along the mountain roads are wooden reservoirs fed by rushing streams. Here we frequently stop to let our ponies drink. These Norwegian horses are small, but can travel all day without getting wearied. However, the law requires that they be rested at intervals, during a day's journey.

It is cold. We are never without heavy wraps and sleep under blankets and eider down quilts. The windows here open like shutters, but they are always kept tightly closed. It is a rare instance that I see one open, and when I do I know there must be an American tourist behind it. A pot of growing plants peeps from every closed window. Many of the poorer houses have no windows, or only a few small panes, and yet I have heard nothing of tuberculosis.

We can read or write out of doors until 10 o'clock and twilight lasts until 12. Here in southern Norway the lights are turned on in winter at 3 o'clock and darkness continues until 10 in the morning. Most of the villages have electric lights and there are telephones all through the country, so the winter is not such a dreary time.

Vegetation matures quickly in these long days of sunshine. Wild flowers grow in quantities—daisies, buttercups and pansies. I have been almost unable to recognize poppies, pansies and other flowers common with us. Their leaves are so enormous here.

Large tracts of Norway are taken up with great arms of the sea called fjords. These penetrate the country for miles and on each side are towering mountains, some snow capped and treeless, while others have luxuriant growths of fir, pine and beech. Lumber products are her chief wealth. Making paper pulp is a leading industry.

Potatoes, barley, wheat and hay are the agricultural productions. Hugging the fjords are many tiny garden-like "farms," owned by peasants, who live in log huts with turf roofs. These turf roofs are frequently seen on the larger houses throughout the country. So much of Norway is bare stone or water that every bit of earth which can yield potatoes or hay is carefully tended. Away up in the snow line district we saw girls milking the cows and goats. These are taken up for the summer to feed on the scant grass.

It has been only eight years since Norway became independent, and she seems very proud of her freedom. Every residence has its flag pole, and the Norwegian flag is rarely out of sight. It is a dark blue cross outlined in white and has a red background.

Women hold prominent positions here. Suffrage is universal. Most of the male population emigrate to the United States, so the work falls upon the women. They manage stores, hotels and other industries, and are well educated, speaking English, German and French fluently.

This is the children's paradise, for they are not sent to bed early. Even tiny tots are up at 10 o'clock, waving at the trains as they fly past, but it must be remembered that the sun has barely set.

The Norwegians are not rich, but there are no beggars. Everybody is willing to work and earn a living. One is never cheated here. I found a ten kromer ($2.70) bill lying on a desk in a country hotel. When the clerk came in I asked why he left it, and he replied pleasantly, "Oh, I forgot it, but I know everybody is honest here."

Everything is done in the quietest manner. There is no noise on the street cars, at the stations, on the trains, or at the boat landings. When we arrive at a place, porters from the different hotels meet the train or boat, but there is not a word spoken. Each traveler chooses his porter, gets into the cab and is driven to his hotel.

Life is a serious problem in this cold country with her deep fjords and towering fields, and there is no time for levity. Even the little flaxen-haired children look like serious-faced madonnas, as if the frowning cliffs had awed them into silence.

The scenery is magnificent and cannot be described. It is as if nature were constantly turning a gigantic kaleidoscope of dimpling lakes, peaceful valleys, picturesque villages, deep, lovely fjords, brawling streams and towering mountains hung with hundreds of dashing waterfalls mirroring rainbows in their foaming spray.

Woman Honored

LONDON.—"Place aux Dames!" For the first time in its history the "Grande Prix de Rome," in music, has been awarded to a woman. The successful competitrix is a charming young lady, Mlle. Boulenger, who is not yet out of her teens.

The young lady's father was himself a "Grand Prix de Rome," and her elder sister, Mlle. Nadia Boulenger, gained a second prize in the same competition several years ago. Mlle. Boulenger gained a great deal of popularity and will not find herself the only representative of her sex when in a month or two she takes the road that leads to Rome and the Villa Medicis, for a year ago the Grand Prix in sculpture was won by Mlle Heauvelmans, who is still studying in the Eternal City.

The competition for a Grand Prix is rather a terrible ordeal. The budding composers are shut up either in the dismal building of the Beaux Arts or in some abandoned chateau outside Paris, each in his or her little white-washed cell, and left there to ponder over their fugs and sonatas for several weeks. The artists are worse off, for they are condemned to a couple of months' incarceration, and the architects, with three month hard work, worst of all.

A Congregation Something More Than a Crowd

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

A CONGREGATION is something more than a crowd, as a well organized regiment is something more than a mob.

The derivation of the word "congregation" implies that it is a body assembled like a flock, all of a kind and under a common leadership. But this original meaning of the word, together with the conception which it expresses, has almost vanished from the minds of churches and preachers. A different significance attaches to the word, and is different, as prevails with reference to a body of men and women in a place of worship. If a large crowd assembles to hear a man deliver a discourse more or less related to the gospel, it is said "he had a great congregation." But did he? Was it not merely a large audience which sat in the pews before him?

A congregation is a collection of people of kindred natures, pursuing a common aim, and animated by a common spirit. Accordingly the Jewish people who long wandered in the wilderness, led by the pillar of cloud and organized around the Tabernacle of God, were called "the congregation of the Children of Israel". So also the Scottish Reformers in the days of Queen Mary designated their church as the "Congregation of Christ". Both the Israelites, with Moses at their head, and the Scottish Presbyterians, led by John Knox, were bound together by a great common purpose and filled with a common spirit; the Israelites were bound for the promise land and the Scots were bent on the reformation of Christianity in their country.

But in many churches now there is no common object among the members and no common spirit upon them. They come together at stated times to hear a man give a homiletic oration, preceded and followed by some musical numbers furnished by a choir and an organist. They make up an audience, but in no proper sense can they be called a congregation. They come to be entertained rather than to worship. Indeed the element of worship has all but perished in very many churches. God is out of mind as completely as if the people were assembled in a lecture hall or a concert room. The style of the preacher's discourse and the character of the music supplied by the singers engage exclusive attention. If the preacher pours contempt upon all the beliefs which the people are supposed to hold, it makes no difference to them, provided he does it in an interesting manner. If the choir may be better suited to the opera house than to a place of worship; but it is quite acceptable, provided it is well rendered by pleasing soloists.

The mistaken view which is involved in thus turning a church into a place of entertainment and neglecting its worship of Almighty God, was set forth recently in a well-considered editorial in the Philadelphia American from which the following extract is taken:

"Week by week, in the name of the Church, which embraces all denominations, we here bench urging the public to attend religious service.

More than once the answer has come back: "I went, but I did not like the preacher."

The time has come for a frank word.

We are not basing our appeals upon the ability of the preachers. We do not invite you to go to Church to hear orations or essays. Nobody knows better than they preachers themselves how far short of their purpose many sermons come. All questions of mere human ability aside, even as a spiritual message for hungry souls—a word from God for those who seek the Father—the sermon is sometimes unsatisfactory.

Perhaps if the public knew how often the preacher agonizes in penitent prayer over this, they would be less censorious.

The essential truth of the matter is this: We do not go to Church, primarily, to enjoy a good sermon. A congregation is not a mere audience; a crowd not to hear a man talk. It is an assembly for the worship of God, for the confession of sin and for the purpose of aligning themselves with the Church in all her varied mission and ministry to the world.

The worshiper's prayers are of more importance than the preaching.

With the disappearance of the element of worship has disappeared also the element of christian fellowship in the churches. When the people cease to aim at common spiritual ends, believe anything or nothing at will, keep the commandments or violate them at

BISHOP W. A. CANDLER.

That seemingly extravagant statement is not made in disparagement of the ministry, but only to arrest attention to the vital truth that the Church is meant for the worship of God, for the fellowship of believers in him, and for edification in the Christian faith.

A Church may be a good Church, despite limitations in the pastor.

Speaking in behalf of the ministry, we can see no reason why we should not to hear a preacher, as an intellectual exercise, but to go for the worship of God, for the confession of sin and for the purpose of aligning themselves with the Church in all her varied mission and ministry to the world.

The worshiper's prayers are of more importance than the preaching.

What the worshiper thinks about God is a more vital matter than what the preacher says about God.

The attitude of the soul is greater concern than the attitude of the sermon."

With the disappearance of the element of worship has disappeared also the element of christian fellowship in the churches. When the people cease to aim at common spiritual ends, believe anything or nothing at will, keep the commandments or violate them at pleasure, and go to church to be entertained only, the basis of christian fellowship is utterly destroyed. By what bond can they be held together in such a case?

There are prevalent among us today conditions very similar to those which existed in England in Wesley's time, and John Wesley, who knew well the church of his day said, "Look east, west, north or south, name what parish you please, is christian fellowship there? Rather are not the bulk of parishioners a mere rope of sand? What christian connection is there between them? What intercourse in spiritual things? What watching over each other's souls?"

In those days evangelical faith had perished from a majority of the English pulpits. The celebrated lawyer, Blackstone had the curiosity, early in the reign of George III, to go from church to church and hear every clergyman of note in London. He reported that he did not hear a single discourse which had more christianity in it than the writings of Cicaro, and that it would have been impossible for him to discover from any sermon heard whether the preacher was a follower of Confucius, of Mohammed, or of Christ. Lady Mary Wortley Montague reports in a bit of satire that there was a plan on foot for taking the "not" out of the commandments and putting it in the creed. Christian fellowship could not survive in such an atmosphere.

Around what could the people in such churches rally? Not around a common faith; for that they did not have. They did not have even common doubts, much less common beliefs. They could not gather on the basis of a common religious experience, for they claimed no experience of religion at all. They grouped themselves by mere social classes. There were then as now "fashionable churches," and the masses generally forsook all the churches. As soon as the Wesleyan revival had done its work, christian fellowship began to re-appear in England. Then one sister have seen Lady Huntington and Lord Dartmouth uniting with coal miners and peasants in the same religious service, for they believed alike, felt alike, and lived by the same religious principles.

We will see a return of christian fellowship in the churches of our own country when the members of our churches begin to know by experience something of what an apostle called "the common salvation." The worship of God will then take rank above a Sunday entertainment, and the fact of religious life will eclipse and efface all lines of social classes in the house of God. We shall then hear nothing of "fashionable churches" and churches for workingmen"; but of our churches it will be said, "The rich and poor meet together; the Lord is the maker of them all."

THE PROMISE OF THE COTTON BLOOM

By DR. ANDREW M. SOULE

WHO is not familiar with the pronouncement of the great statesman and orator, Henry Grady? Surely he was right when he exclaimed: "Cotton, what a royal plant it is!" It was he who said, "The trespass of a little worm upon its green leaf is more to England than the advance of the Russian army on her Asian outposts. It is gold from the instant it puts forth its tiny root. Its fiber is current in every bank, and when, loosing its fleeces to the sun, it floats a sunny banner that glorifies the fields of the humble farmer, that man is marshaled under a flag that will compel the allegiance of the world and wring a subsidy from every nation on earth."

How clearly the truth of these wonderfully prophetic words has been shown. In no other section of the world has the welfare of a country been so dependent on the varied products of a single plant as in the cotton growing states of the American union. While every phase of the growing cotton crop, from the day the first tiny green shoot appears above the ground, is of interest and concern to the planter, the real glory of the crop is wrapped up in the bloom. What an inspiring sight it is to see the verdant green of the plant covered with buds and blooms which with the rising of the sun will turn to gold as forecasting the destiny of the boll which they herald. By night they will be pale, and then will give place to the green and growing boll with its promise of riches in the staple and seed, thus providing not only for the many manifold uses of man but important nutritive constituents for himself and his live stock.

No wonder interest centers in the blooming of the cotton plant, for the blossom represents the reproductive agency through which we hope by study and selection to increase the quantity and quality of the fiber and the value of the by-products the seed may be expected to yield. The number of blooms and the time of their appearance determine largely the quantity and often the quality of the harvest as well. Without the bloom the stalk would remain barren and unproductive and want and famine ravage the land. Moreover, the bloom of the cotton is singularly beautiful, and its everchanging radiance of color as it meets and reflects back the rays of the summer sun a constant source of joy and inspiration to the observer. No wonder the people of Dixie pay tribute to the cotton bloom, for it furnishes so many man-made and essential comforts to the human race that without it we would of necessity sink back into barbarism and a condition of living it has taken twenty centuries of industrious effort on the part of mankind to overcome.

In order that the relation of cotton and its various by-products to our industrial and commercial life may be the better appreciated let us consider for a moment some of the manifold uses to which it is put. It is said that 75 per cent of the clothing of 100 per cent of our American homes consists of cotton; that the rugs used in many homes are made from its fiber cannot be gainsaid. The shades in the window and the soap with which the morning ablutions are performed consist of its fiber in one instance and the oil derived from its seed in the other. Cotton towels are so universally used as to not even attract passing notice. The chances are that the man who arrays himself in the morning in fine linen shirt and collar and cotton clothes, while the lady in her "trusting silks" is dressed in the meretized fabric of this wonderful plant. At the breakfast table the Cotton brings other nature comforts by supplying you with a lard substitute either in the form of pure and wholesome oil" with which it is prepared and for ucts now so extensively manufactured and utilized in the kitchen, and brown of the biscuit and the delightful flavor of the fried chicken are attributable to the use of cotton oil in some form in the preparation of the inviting repast. When you sit down to lunch or dinner, the chances are that the beef or the mutton was partly altogether fattened on cotton seed meal and other by-products of the cotton plant. When you are enjoying your salad it is quite likely that the "olive oil" with which it i sprepared and for which your good wife has paid a fancy price was grown on some Georgia farm, and that an oil just as good and wholesome might have been secured at lower cost and under real guaranty as to the form of the refined cooking oils now made from cotton seed which are now so extensively prepared and sold to the American housewife.

But this is not all, for the "butter" with which you spread your rolls and bread is probably a transformed by-product of cotton seed through the milk and butter of the sleek cow. The "woolen" clothing which you wear in the winter in all probability consists partly of the fibers of cotton, while the wool itself represents the transformed energy of cotton seed meal. Even the armies of the world are clad in cloth made from the fibre of cotton. The tents they use are made of the same material, while from the short fibers or linters is derived an essential element in the preparation of some of the highest and most dreaded explosives known to warfare. The medical practitioner is not independent of the cotton plant for he often uses it in some form in surgery.

It is not overstating the case, therefore, to say that the bloom of the cotton evidences the approach of miracles of service manifold. No wonder its bloom is hailed with delight. No wonder the circling progress of the plant's development day by day is watched with the keenest interest and heralded by wire and air sent messages throughout the world. The progress and development of the crop is regarded as a matter of universal concern and when one pauses to review and consider the manifold services this wonderful plant renders to mankind, it is easy to see how its success does concern England more, as Henry Grady said, than the advance of the Russian army towards her Asian outposts.

It is but proper that we should pause from time to time and pass in review their origin and the methods by which the cotton plant and its little golden bloom meets out to the people of the world and if we do we will help us to understand and appreciate its virtues more completely, and to recognize more vividly our awards for more complete and perfect understanding of its remarkable possibilities. To those who have studied the situation, it must appear that we are still only skirmishing on the edge of the sea of knowledge as it relates to the possibilities of developing and utilizing cotton as completely as the Creator intended when he designed it and gave it to man as one of his most beneficent gifts.

INFLUENCE OF POTASH IN PLANT ECONOMY.

W. B. H., Fayetteville, Ga., writes: I wish you would write me what relation potash bears to the growing plant, and is it a valuable plant food in commercial fertilizers, and do you advise the use of it?

Potash is regarded as one of the essential elements of plant food. As you probably know, the food of plants is elaborated in the leaves and the basic material consists of starch. Out of this there is changed and formed the other elements needed in the nutrition and development of plants. Potash is concerned in the formation and distribution of starch; therefore, its function is essential as a fundamental to the welfare of growing crops. This element is also concerned in the development of the woody structure of crops and the fruits of fruits. It acts as a neutralizer of plant acids, which is an important function. It supplies to the crop an essential element which is often deficient in our soils. This is especially true of those areas where sand predominates. There is a considerable quantity of potash in what we call our red clay lands, but it is often not in an available form owing to the low content of lime in our Georgia soils. Applications of lime would set some of this potash free, and then its use in commercial fertilizer would not be so necessary or essential. Where lime is not used it would seem to be necessary to apply potash.

For corn and cotton on red clay land, 3 to 4 per cent potash will often be sufficient amount to use where applications of 500 to 800 pounds of fertilizer are used or more. On sandy lands the content of potash should be increased to 6 or 7 per cent; for truck crops and potatoes as much as 8 to 10 per cent of potash will often be advisable, particularly on sandy soils. For the reasons assigned, it seems to us that potash should be used in almost all the fertilizing formulas utilized in Georgia.

IRRIGATION IN GEORGIA.

F. H. D., Lynn, Mass., writes: Is irrigating considered necessary in Georgia? Can alfalfa, grasses and other forage crops be cultivated successfully? Is it possible to raise crops in the winter for crops to feed stock during December, January, February and March? Do Yorkshire hogs do as well and grow as young as in states further north, or because of scald or cholera are black breeds given the preference? What is the ruling price of young sows and boars eight to ten weeks old, and what are hogs worth per pound when matured? Do you have a dry and rainy season? Is the northern part of the state most fertile?

Irrigation is not considered necessary in Georgia for the reason that the rainfall varies from forty to sixty inches per annum. If the soils are properly prepared and fertilized and the moisture conserved enough may be stored in the soil to answer all purposes of crop production in the average year. Like all sections of the country an occasional drouth occurs. This may come at different seasons of the year. The driest season in Georgia is generally from September to December, and there is often a good deal of rain in January, February and sometimes March, and occasionally in June, July and August. There is sometimes considerable dry weather in April and May.

Alfalfa, Japan clover and mangel wurzels can be grown in Georgia with considerable success. Their extensive cultivation in the state, however, has not been practiced. Green feed can be produced without difficulty during the months of December, January, February and March in this state, and may be obtained from seeding a variety of crops. All the cereals may be used for grazing purposes. Vetches may also be seeded in the fall along with crimson, burr clover and other legumes.

Yorkshire hogs have not been introduced into this state in so far as I know. If they are bred here at all I am not aware of the fact. White hogs have not made as much progress in the south as either the red or black breeds. It is the belief that the white hogs scald readily when exposed to the sun. I have no theard, however, that they were considered more susceptible to cholera. One could select several of the best breeds of hogs now handled in the United States with perfect success in all part of Georgia. The ruling price for young pigs is from $5 to $15 at eight to ten months of age. The breed and character of the animals determines the price to a large extent. Hogs ready for the market will command anywhere from 5 to 8 cents a pound, depending on condition and quality; sometimes they sell as high as 10 cents a pound.

In the northern part of the state the soils are of a clayey character and mostly red in color. They probably contain a greater amount of total plant food than the soils in the southern part of the state. The soils in the southern part, however, are easier to work because of their lighter and more friable character. Both of these classes of soils should be used rather freely, and an abundance of leguminous crops plowed under and fertilized and manure applied in order to add vegetable matter and improve the physical and mechanical condition of the soil.

DAIRY MANAGEMENT IN SOUTH GEORGIA.

C. D. S., Pensacola, Fla., writes: I would like some information concerning the care of dairy cows in the southwestern part of Georgia, also in Texas from what is known in and around Thomasville? How is the best way to operate them? Can good cows be purchased in south Georgia with an average of four gallons per day? Would it be wise to ship cattle from Kansas to south Georgia? What assistance can be obtained from the college towards starting a good, clean, sanitary dairy?

There are cattle ticks in the vicinity of homasville, Ga., and if they get even the native cattle in large quantities, they will often produce Texas fever. Where one has only a limited number of animals and a moderate sized farm, the tick situation can be handled with a fair degree of satisfaction. It is, of course, necessary to fence the farm and all the pastures. Divide the pasture into two sections, and keep the cattle ff one for four and a half to six and a half months. Then remove all the ticks from the cattle by hand picking or dipping and turn them on the tick free section, and keep them off the infested area for the same length of time. In this way you may clean your pasture from ticks. Then, if you have your farm properly fenced and no reinfection takes place, you should have no serious trouble from this pest. Where one only has a small number of animals hand picking may be resorted to or the ticks may be destroyed by brushing them off and gathering them up and burning them, or by applying crude petroleum, tick oil, cotton seed oil, or kerosene and lard in equal parts to the legs and lower part of the body, including the tail. This makes it much more difficult for the ticks to attach themselves to the animals.

Shipping cattle from Kansas into south Georgia would be a dangerous undertaking unless you were certain that the land on which they were to graze was tick free. While you can find some fairly good dairy foundation stock in the southwestern part of the state, I would not advise buying cattle except in any considerable numbers, but in our judgment you would find it better to start with the native stock and build up rather than to bring in pure-bred stock from tick-free territory. You can grade up the native stock quite rapidly by the use of pure-bred sires which you can confine in a feed lot and thus prevent their becoming infested with ticks.

The college maintains a dairy extension department, and is glad to send information to all seeking assistance along this line. Our extension agent visits the different sections and confers with the farmers in regard to the erection of barns, silos and out buildings, and the feding and management of the live stock.

OUT OF NEW ORLEANS, ADVANCE THE ARGENTINE ANTS

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Creeping northward out of New Orleans, like the measured and unwavering advance of old age and death, itself, comes the Argentine ant. Committing atrocities at every step, this newest insect pest may cover the country, for no man knows. Government experts, who have spent time in unremitting study of the creature, decline to commit themselves.

"If" a certain line marks its northward limit, they say, the Argentine ant will not get beyond Georgia. But it already is beyond that line. Again the experts say "if" another set of contingencies govern, it will not go north of Columbus, Ohio. Yet nothing is certain and none will deny that it may cover the United States nad penetrate Canada.

The Argentine ant is an undesirable. Its malignant offenses are so many that they obliterate and outweigh its one virtue, which is that when it goes into a house the bedbugs go out. Even this one virtue may be regarded as doubtful when it is known that the Argentine ant will bite a human being and will make its bite peculiarly effective and painful if it selects a tender spot, such as the space between the fingers at the point of intersection with the palm. It is alleged to have killed babies. It is known to have killed newly hatched chicks. It devastates various forms of vegetation. And as a household pest it stands in a class by itself. Nothing to compare with it as an everlasting nuisance ever has been discovered.

A HUMAN APPETITE.

It eats whatever man eats. It penetrates ice boxes, bread boxes, paper parcels, and even Mason fruit jars if the housewife forgets to put on the rubber gasket before she screws the cover down. In houses infested with it there is no sleep unless the legs of the beds are wound with tape poisoned with something that will affect and stop this ant; and only certain poisons will do that. Beds, to be secure, must be pulled out from the walls, so that the bed not touch it when it touches the wall. And the occupant, before retiring, must stand upon an insulated chair and make certain he is not taking any of the ants to bed with him. Also the baby but kick the corner of a sheet against the wall, and in a few minutes the screaming infant has to be snatched from its crib, borne to the light and completely disrobed and immersed in water to make certain that all the ants are removed.

In such a house the use of poisons and repellants must be continuous. A little carelessness, and the foodstuffs of the house are filled with countless numbers of the ants. The ants are very sociallistic. If one finds a way to get into sugar, fruits, meats, lard, olive oil, crema, butter, eggs raw or cooked, fish, corn meal and even wheat flour, he does not keep the secret to himself. The ant scout informs the tribe and they all come.

It is customary to wind the legs of the dining table with poisoned tape and sometimes even to set the legs of the tables and beds upon pans of glass coated with vaseline poisoned with some repellent. Yet so persistent are the little immigrants in their attacks that even these obstacles do not always stop them. Pans of bed are frequently found drowned and immersed in water to make certain that all the ants are removed.

In such a house the use of poisons and repellants must be continuous. A little carelessness, and the reports of infant fatalities from the ants are found. The government experts say they have not tried to verify them but admit that such a thing is not outside the realm of possibilities. Authentic cases are to be found by the hundreds, the experts say, of infants having to be taken from their beds and repeatedly immersed in water to clear them of the ants which had covered their little bodies.

AFFECT ON LAND VALUES.

So destructive is the Argentine ant of certain forms of vegetation in southern Louisiana land values are governed to a very considerable extent by the presence or absence of this ant. The insect is partial to nectar, and its cause is to be feared by those who raise flowers. If it cannot reach the honey in a blossom otherwise, it will cut its way to it. This has been found highly destructive to certain fruits, among them oranges. Some garden seeds also find favor with the ants, and this is why corn meal always is sown with lettuce seed in an antinfested district. While the ants are harvesting the meal, the lettuce seed has time to sprout, otherwise the ants would eat the lettuce seed.

Another peculiarity of this ant is its fondness for the excretions of plant lice, mealy bugs and many other insect pests. In the case of the mealy bug, the ant erects a shelter for the bug and cares for him much as a dairyman cares for his cows. This, the government experts say, is a straight, truthful statement. They also say that in almost every instance where the ants are in attendance upon plant bugs and lice, the bugs and lice flourish and multiply. This has been pronounced in corn and sugar cane regions. The Argentine ant also exterminates other and useful species of ants as fast as it comes in contact with them, which is another count in the indictment of the Argentine ant an undesirable.

The Argentine ant was first noticed in New Orleans twenty years ago. It must have been brought there with the cargo of some ship. At that time it was unknown outside of the city. But now it has penetrated the interior of the country for many miles and has destroyed or infested the entire half of Louisiana and is steadily moving north. Already it has covered six counties in Mississippi and three in Alabama and in some parts of Louisiana has reached practically to the Arkansas line. Its movement to the north has been by railroad, and the government has no means of knowing how far small colonies have traveled. The official observations have been confined to sections where the ant has developed sufficiently to make its presence felt.

Art of Making Baskets From Pine Needles

BY EDNA CAIN.

QUITMAN, Ga., Aug. 9.—What lover of beautiful things has not been led captive by the charm of the basket? We have all paid tribute to the marvelous art of the Japanese basket makers, and in recent years the willow and reed furniture has come to keep the decorative and useful basket company in our summer homes.

The pine needle basket is a comparatively new development of this charming art, but in future no basket lover's collection will be complete without specimens of pine needle basketry. While the baskets themselves have a universal charm because of their beauty, their origin and history is a matter of special local interest. All Georgians will feel a special pleasure in the fact that a eGorgia woman originated and evolved the pine needle basket from Georgia pine needles.

Any phase of industrial art that is truly expressive of a people or a locality is evolved from local materials to meet a special or local need, and this was true of the beginning of the pine needle baskets. It was during the war between the states that Mrs. M. J. McAfee, in casting about for some expedient for replacing her father's last straw hat, hit upon the needles of the long-leaf pine as material from which a hat might be woven. The last spool of Coates' cotton thread possessed by the family was used as sewing material for the hat, and, with the smooth needles, were woven into a texture light, firm and fine—a very satisfactory hat indeed.

STORY OF THE HAT.

Every southern woman who passed through the war period had stories to tell of the hard shifts to which people were reduced in the effort to obtain the merest necessities of food and clothing. Some years ago Mrs. McAfee told her grandchildren the story of the hat woven out of pine needles. Living among the pines, it was a natural thing to illustrate the story by weaving a little hat out of pine needles to show the children just how the famous hat looked. An instant demand arose among the neighborhood children for "a cute little hat like Mrs."

From making these hats to amuse the children Mrs. McAfee naturally drifted into making baskets of the simpler forms. The artistic possibilities of the pine needle basket instantly became apparent, and continued experimenting with this new basket material has evolved a basketry which has been described in George Wharton James' books on American basketry as a form of art which ranks with the beautiful Indian baskets. Previous to Mrs. McAfee's pine needle basket the Indian baskets were almost the only distinctively American baskets, not including, of course, the willow and oak split baskets, the work of plantation negroes, and intended for strictly utilitarian uses. The later raffia baskets are borrowed as to idea and material from other countries.

Although the last few years Mrs. McAfee's baskets have received a wide recognition as an important and interesting development of America art. Miss Snow of the University of Tennessee, where she is teaching a class in basketry, this being the ninth year she has had this class. Her pupils are from many states, and through this medium her art is being taken to other sections. It was Mrs. McAfee who started a class in basketry at the Martha Berry school, in Rome, and the baskets made by this class bring a considerable sum of money to the school.

OTHER BASKETS.

Mrs. McAfee is an expert in other forms of basketry, and the reed and raffia coll baskets shown in the accompanying illustrations, which she took to her university class this summer as specimens, are very beautiful in design, coloring and workmanship. At the extreme right of the illustrations is a hanging fern basket in shades of light and dark green, with plaited raffia handles. Next to it is a large flap grape basket, in the center a design of grape leaves in dark green, at the edges the purple and pale green grapes. In the group at the extreme left is a flat rose basket, the background a soft green and a conventionalized rose design in dull rose worked out in the border. Mrs. McAfee does her raffia to work out these designs, and there is an infinite possibility for shaping, designing and color harmony in this work.

The five baskets in the center are typical examples of the pine needle baskets, and were made here by Mrs. McAfee this past winter. The basket with the top on it illustrates the charming idea of using pine cones as handles. This basket also shows another original idea of Mrs. McAfee's, that of using millet, or sorghum cane "fodder," for weaving a decorative band in the pine needle basket. These two materials harmonize beautifully in texture and color effects, and the lovely colors the millet takes on in late summer gives it a special decorative value.

An increasing demand for these pine needle baskets has arisen within the past few years, and Mrs. McAfee, who devotes all her working time to her classes, has found herself unable to fill numerous orders. This has suggested to her the possibility of developing a typical southern industry in the pine needle basketry. The pine tree is to the south what the palm is to the tropics; the poetic beauty of the tree is the dominant note of our southern country. The multitude of northern tourists who come to the south every winter find in the pine needle basket a beautiful and fitting reminder of the southern forests. The aroma, the texture and color of the basket has a quality and perfection of its own. This industry is indeed one of many which awaits development in this wonderfully rich land of ours.

JOY IN HER WORK.

As for Mrs. McAfee, she has found in the development of this art the personal joy that comes of interesting work well done. The accompanying picture of he rwas made at the age of sixty-eight; she is now nearing seventy-five, and in her erect bearing, bright face, delightful and informing talk is the spirit that does not grow old with years. Smartly gowned, interested in the incidents of travel, she journeys from New Orleans to Quitman to visit her daughter here. Mrs. Edwin Lang; recently she left for Knoxville to take charge of her class in the Summer Normal. When that closes she will go to New York to spend the autumn with her daughter, Dr. Roy McAfee Ingraham, who is a physician of note, engaged in special research work.

Wherever she goes people are always interested in her lovely basket work, and she is always willing to teach a class of two, three or a dozen. She declares that this living stream of contact with interesting people and interesting work is a fountain of youth to her. And surely her own charming personality and her beautiful art enriches the lives of others and leaves a heritage of permanent beauty to the world.

Which Would You Choose?

In Detroit lives a woman with a wonderful voice. In Italy, where she has been studying, the great masters say it is a voice in a million. Give it the proper training, they add, and with her temperament, she can become the queen of opera, and have the fashionable world at her feet. For she has "the artist's soul."

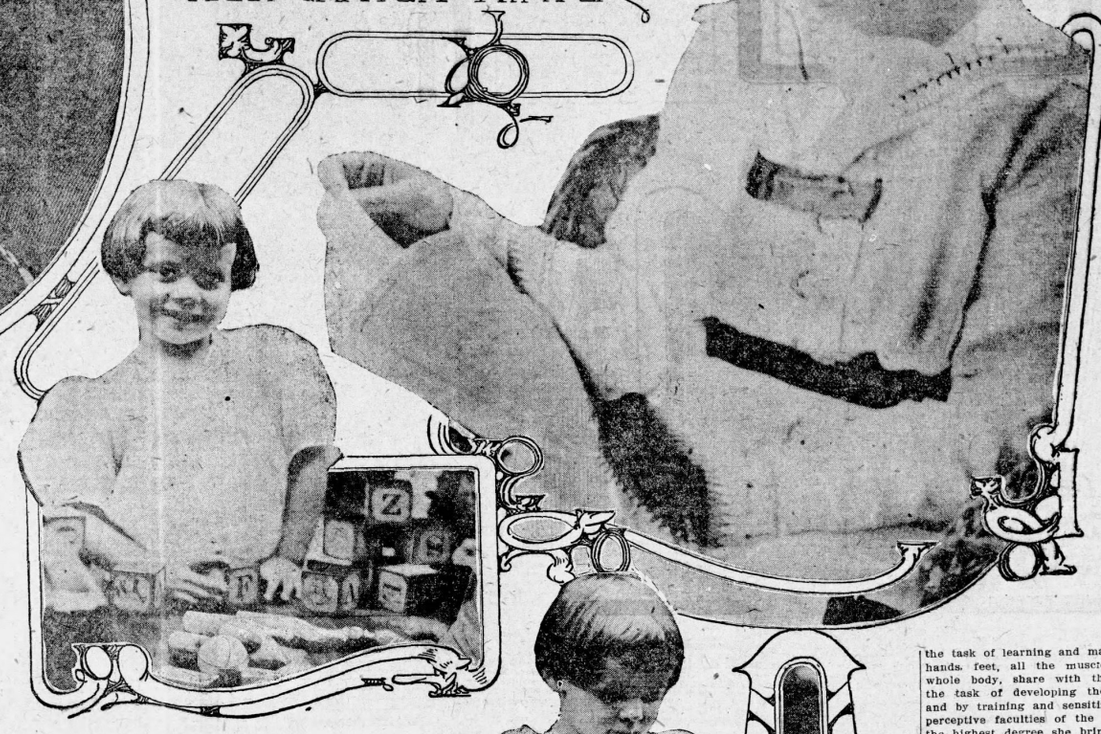
This woman is a wife. She married young—before the possibilities of her voice had been fully revealed. Husband is a home body. He wants not a queen of the opera, but the queen of his fireside. He yearns for the prattle of childish voices, the pink joy of baby fingers twining around parental heartstrings.

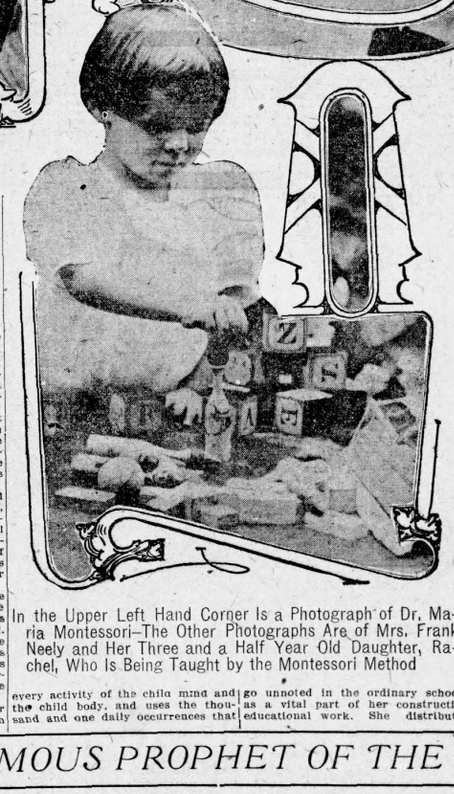
Now she must choose, the choice to be final. On the one hand, to confer pleasure upon thousands, to be the admired of kings and princes, to know the world's distinguished and be emblazoned in publicity's glare; but, also, to creep to old age childless, to miss the contented coo of the dimpled darling at breast, to have no sturdy sons and fair daughters filling with pride the eye and with love the heart.

On the other hand, to go through the agonies, the strains, the cares of motherhood; to know the white tensity of countless sleepless vigils at the cradleside as disease fights for a sacrifice; to have always the knawing of an ambition unfulfilled.

MONTESSORI METHOD OF TRAINING CHILDREN

BY MARY CARTER WINTER





In the Upper Left Hand Corner Is a Photograph of Dr. Maria Montessori—The Other Photographs Are of Mrs. Frank Neely and Her Three and a Half Year Old Daughter, Rachel, Who Is Being Taught by the Montessori Method

WILL the next decade or two see the abolition of the public school as we now know it, and the establishment of educational play centers formed along the lines of the Montessori schools of Europe? The question has suggested itself to a number of people who have studied closely the wonderful work which Dr. Maria Montessori is accomplishing in her Case dei Bambini in Rome.

The fact that she has been able to mentally develop three and four year old children so that they can read and write and do number work as well as the average child of the second and third grade—and this without forcing the mental development of pupils—has drawn attention to the fact that even with the advance of latter days, education has a much greater evolution before it.

The Montessori method of teaching has become widely known, for since the quiet, interesting Italian woman first attracted attention, she has been the subject of much discussion in the newspapers, magazines and educational journals. Educators from all over the world have been to Italy to study her famous schools in Rome, and her revolutionary methods have been carried into many cities and countries. Outside of Rome, where Dr. Montessori's own schools are, and in Switzerland where the orphan asylums have practically been transformed into Montessori schools and where also the system has been introduced into the public schools, the establishment of schools has been slightly experimental; but the results obtained, even in countries totally different from Italy, have warranted the assumption that the Italian woman doctor has hit upon a uniquely successful method.

AMERICAN SCHOOLS.

A number of schools have been established in America, the most important, perhaps, being that of Miss Anna E. George, who spent an entire winter studying in Rome with Dr. Montessori. Harvard has sent men abroad to investigate the system, and Columbia University sent three of its professors to study the system, while Clark University and other institutions have become interested.

Atlantans took up the matter for discussion some time ago. Miss Jessie Muse, principal of the Girls High school, invited a number of women who are interested in progressive education to meet with her and the teachers. The Montessori methods were discussed thoroughly, many of the women being well informed and keenly interested. While the meeting resulted in no definite move for the formation of a Montessori school, it succeeded in interesting a number of mothers to the point where they decided to try the methods with their own children. Also it resulted in some Atlanta teachers taking up the study of the Montessori work seriously.

Miss Azile Simpson and Miss Mary Postell went to Columbia University to study under the professors who had been abroad in the original schools, and one or two of the teachers have discussed going abroad themselves. Miss Postell is in New York this summer studying.

A MONTESSORI PUPIL.

Mrs. Frank Neely was the first woman in Atlanta to really apply the Montessori methods in training her child. Her little girl, Rachel Eva Neely, three and a half years old, has been educated entirely by the Montessori method. That is, she has trained herself according to the principle of spontaneous manifestation, which is the basis of the Montessori system. Mrs. Neely remaining in the background as a sympathetic director.

"My adaptation of the Montessori methods," said Mrs. Neely, "is essentially for the mother. My little girl is trained from the moment she awakes until she goes to bed. She waits on herself and, as far as possible, governs herself. As is proper the mother and the teacher remains in the background, removing obstacles, suggesting and encouraging."

Little Miss Neely has her own towels, her toothbrush, her soap, all the little necessities of the bath and also household implements fitted to her size. This is in accordance with the example set in the Montessori schools in Italy, and the little girl is developing not only a co-ordinated use of all her muscles but a keen intelligence, a quick courtesy, and a wide understanding.

Mrs. Neely uses the Froebel toys and the playthings for the child and the everyday things about the house. While little Miss Neely has blocks, letters, cubes and other toys, her education has been fashioned as much by usual things about the house as by the toys bought for that purpose.

USE OF FLOWERS.

For instance, in learning to discriminate color gradations, the cardboards of silk and other apparatus have been used; but the chief object lessons have been the flowers outdoors. Little Rachel helped her mother plant the seeds for a box of flowers which is now a glowing mass of colors; and she watched the tender green shoots grow into full sized plants weighted with vivid blossoms. As each new color appeared she was taught to recognize it and remember it, and the box has been her chiefest delight.

That is the secret of the child's facility in learning under the Montessori method. According to Dr. Montessori, spontaneous manifestation of interest on the part of a child is an indication that he is ready to take up the subject towards which he is inclined, and his readiness leads to a perfect mastery of the study; while any failure to respond shows that his mind is not yet prepared for the particular lesson, and that it is wiser to wait and not to force his mental growth.

Her plan is to remove every possible obstacle that might hinder the child's development, and to then let him educate himself, the teacher, or the mother in the background directing his energies properly by veiled suggestion. She has taken something here and there from those who have preceded her and has combined them with her own original ideas, and in so doing has worked out a system which some say will revolutionize methods of education.

DR. MONTESSORI.

Dr. Montessori was the first woman to receive the degree of doctor of medicine from the University of Rome. Prior to that she was connected with the Psychiatrical Clinic, and her devoted studies for years had prepared her for the work which later became hers. The establishment of the Case dei Bambini, "The houses of the children," was the outgrowth of her studies in experimental psychology and anthropological pedagogy, and, most directly, of a previous experience as teacher of feeble-minded children.

Several years prior to the establishment of her schools for normal minded children, she had taught some feeble-minded children of Rome, obtaining marvelous success in developing them mentally and physically. After two years of such work, she re-entered the University of Rome to study again, carrying with her the firm conviction that if the methods by which she had evoked intellectual development from idiot children were applied to normal minded children they would achieve truly wonderful results.

About seven years later she secured the opportunity to put her theories into practice, and in 1907 the Case dei Bambini were established. Eduardo Talama, who was at the head of a beneficent real estate society formed for betterment of the condition of the city's poor, offered her the use of some tenement houses, and she began to train the poor children of the district. The Case dei Bambini became truly the houses of the children, for the youngsters found learning a game in which there was much diversion.

PLAN OF SCHOOLS.

Each Casa dei Bambini has a directress, a physician and a caretaker, the physician being an indication of Dr. Montessori's belief that naughty children are sick children and that instead of scoldings or repression they need medical attention.

The rules of each "case" are simple. Attention must be paid to the health and physical and moral development of the children by means of lessons adapted to their needs and ages. All children on the block between the ages of two and a half and seven years are admitted to the schools without charge, the parents agreeing only to give reference to all connected with the schools and to confer once a week with the directress, telling her of the child's needs and receiving suggestions from the directress. Those who appear in the schools dirty and slovenly are expelled if they do not remedy their condition, and the first thing every morning in the schools is the washing of face, hands, neck and ears, and the tidying up of the children, each helping the other when occasion requires. Those not amenable to discipline and the children of those parents lacking in respect and co-operation are also subject to expulsion, though, as a matter of fact, very few children are sent away from the schools, as Dr. Montessori and her teachers have the knack of creating the characteristics required.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES.

The fundamental principles of the Montessori system are individual training, freedom of action and initiative, physical and mental education simultaneously, and social training as a regular school activity.

The social training includes not only freedom and grace of action and manner in assemblies but the recognition also of the human kinship of the children. They are taught to take care of themselves and to help and love others.

Visitors to the Case der Bambini are struck with the poise, grace, reliance and charming lack of self-consciousness exhibited by small children; and also remark with astonishment the orderly freedom of the youngsters and their readiness to do a loving little service for others.

There is so much that might be said about the fine points of the Montessori system that it becomes impossible to touch on them all. The best way to learn about the method is to read Dr. Montessori's own book; and, if that at first seems too weighty, get a summarized version of the book, re-reading the original later.

It is of interest to know that her system takes into consideration every activity of the child mind and the child body, and uses the thousand and one daily occurrences that go unnoted in the ordinary schools as a vital part of her constructive educational work. She distributes the task of learning and makes the hands, feet, all the muscles, the whole body, share with the brain the task of developing the child; and by training and sensitizing the perceptive faculties of the body to the highest degree she brings the child mind into easy functioning at an age below the usual school age in America.

READ AT THREE.

In the Casa dei Bambini, the children read and write and do number work at three and four years as easily as second and third grade children. They know how to run and play, how to sweep and dust and how to render graceful service. Although they come from a poor and rough element of Rome, they are poised, low spoken, deferential and obedient to discipline. It is the discipline, however, of love instead of fear; and were it not for the order that appears out of apparent liberty, the visitor would think the children were entirely without superior authority for Dr. Montessori scorns the idea that to be good children must be immobile, and tries to teach them that one may have a good time quietly and without obstreperous noise. She makes their games and their toys educate them.

Atlanta women are so interested in the Montessori system that the Carnegie library cannot keep them supplied with books. Dr. Montessori's books are always out, and the women are always asking for something new on the Montessori system.

While no definite movement for the establishment of such a school in Atlanta has been started, it seems only a question of time before a sufficient number of women will become interested to the point where they will at least make an experi-

TECUMSEH, THE FAMOUS PROPHET OF THE RED MEN

Did you ever hear how he stamped his foot and made the earth tremble and the houses topple?

Do you know the tale of the way his brother, "The Prophet," frightened the redskins till their teeth chattered by showing them "the arm of Tecumseh" flashing like a comet in the sky?

Tecumseh, the "Flying Panther," was born away back in 1768 near the site of the present town of Springfield, O.

He was a cunning, clever, unafraid warrior, a natural born orator, a leader!

This wonderful Indian had a remarkable power over the tribes of the west and south.

They admired him! They feared him! They believed he had SUPERNATURAL powers!

It was when he was nearly 35 years old that Tecumseh's great ability to lead his tribesmen made its definite appearance.

Proud of his race, fond of admiration and determined to wipe out the white man and gain praise for himself at the same time, Tecumseh decided to form a great confederacy of the indians against the whites.

The plan was to "exterminate the whites." The Indians were keenly interested in doing anything which might make this possible, for the colonists were encroaching every day farther into their possessions.

Following out his well-laid scheme, just prior to the war of 1812, in which Tecumseh played a very important part, he took a formal invitation to the Indians in the south asking them to "get on the warpath," saying the British had sent him from the Great Lakes!

Then it was that "Flying Panther persuaded his brother, the wily prophet, to use his knowledge of the coming of a comet to play upon the superstitions of the Indians!

When all the red men were assembled, the Prophet walkd out pompously into the clearing, raised his high voice and solemly announced:

"You will see the ARM OF TECUMSEH, LIKE PALE FIRE, stretched out in the vault of heaven soon. That will be the sign by which you shall know when to begin warfare!"

So well did this magic work in subduing the Indians Tecumseh determined to try some equally astounding trick upon others of the dark race when occasion demanded.

He had not traveled far among the tribes in his call to battle tour when he came face to face with obstinate, unbelieving Tustinuggee-Thlucco, the "Big Warrior."

Tecumseh had never met with a flat denial before. He could not believe that it was possible. "Big Warrior" would stand firm against his arguments and entreaties.

At last, wild with anger and chagrin, he decided to frighten the warrior!

"I will leave here directly and go straight to Detroit. When I get there, I will stamp my foot upon the ground and shake down every house in Toockabatcha," he said.

Strangely enough, as if the old earth were helping him in his schemes, about the time Tecumseh must have reached Detroit, there was heard a deep rumbling underground all over the Alabama region.

All the Indians fell down on their faces and made allegiance to the great flying panther—all except the "Big Warrior." He couldn't be moved.

After his famous tour among the Indian tribes, which is believed to have been the means of starting the Creek war, Tecumseh joined the British forces at Malden. Sometimes successful in gaining the aid of the red men and sometimes unsuccessful the great indian leader succeeded in winning the favor of the British to the point of receiving a COMMISSION OF BRIGADIER GENERAL.

All through the war of 1812 he was the stalwart Indian warrior, using his wonderful powers to subject, coerce and persuade many tribes. Sometimes he made them keep the peace. Other times he secured their active assistance.

Tecumseh's long, eventful life closed in the battle of the Thames when he was shot by mounted American soldiers.

Pictorial Review

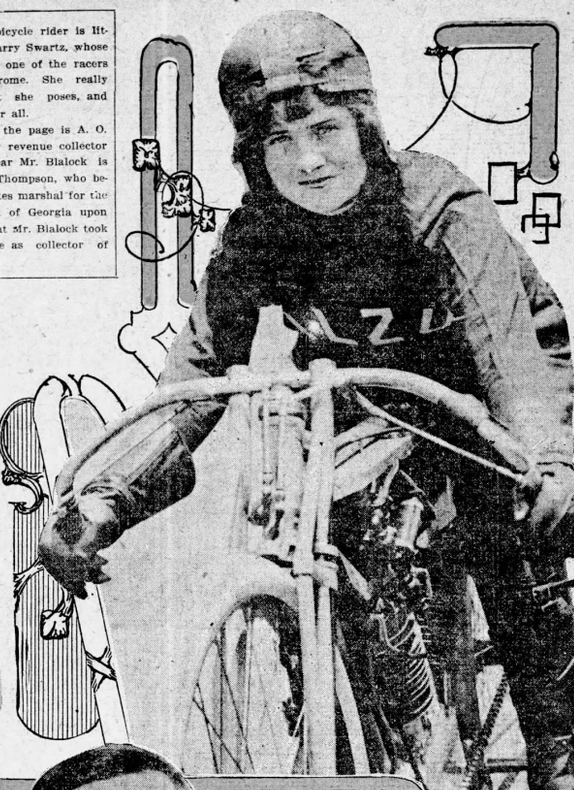
At the left of the page is A. O. Blalock, the new revenue collector for Georgia. Near Mr. Blalock is shown Howard Thompson, who became United States marshal for the northern district of Georgia upon the same day that Mr. Blalock took the oath of office as collector of revenues.



IN the upper right hand corner of the page is W. H. Ivy, captain of Engine House No. 2. What you see him watering is a blossoming wheelbarrow. This wheelbarrow was made of green willow stems, and when it was set down upon the rich earth at No. 2 engine house it began to sprout and to grow. Now No. 2 has perhaps the only live and flowering wheelbarrow in this or other cities. Captain Ivy, who has taken the enterprising and original 'barrow under his charge, has filled it with sod and planted many colored flowers and green plants there; so that what was once a mere pattern of willow stems is now a gay patarre.

THE chef, whom you see with one forefinger outstretched, is Monsieur Gancel, of the Georgian Terrace. He has studied his art in Paris, in Switzerland, in New York, in Atlanta, and from the store of his knowledge has published a book which explains just what the queer looking French names on a menu card mean. Before this book was published no one had ever known, except the chefs themselves. Now, with this book as an interpreter, can you recognize ham with an accompaniment of eggs through the most Parisian disguise.

THE monkey is Hitch-i-koo, and he came all the way to Atlanta from Honduras, and he finds that nothing is so delightful as Georgia watermelon. Hitch-i-koo is the pet of Mrs. A. Harrington Wilson, and of all the little children of the neighborhood.

In the right hand lower corner of the page, is Harry Holland, who was the greatest amateur player of the south during his college days; and now has the promise of equal success in professional baseball as a member of the Atlanta team. He fields with the best of them, and he stands up to the plate and hits the ball on the nose.
